In 1907 the "Old Constitutional Force" known as the "Militia" was transformed into the "Special Reserve," but the following Militia units were retained:—The Bermuda Militia Artillery, the Channel Islands Militia, and the Malta Militia. In 1921 the terms "Special Reserve (and Extra Reserve) Battalions" were abolished, and "Militia" restored, but no appointments are at present made to the force.

Militia in the War.—At the outbreak of the Great War all units were embodied, the majority being included in Defence Schemes. One or two units served abroad, but, generally speaking, the units were employed as training and reinforcing centres for the Armies in the field.

THE TERRITORIAL ARMY.

In 1907 the "Yeomanry" and the "Volunteers" were transferred into the Territorial Force, which included English, Welsh, and Scottish Cavalry; Royal Horse, Royal Field, and Royal Garrison Artillery; Royal Engineers; Infantry; Royal Army Service Corps and Royal Army Medical Corps. In 1902 the title was changed to "Territorial Army."

Territorials in the War.—The strength of the Territorial Force in July, 1914, was about 265,000. During the Great War 310 new units were formed, and there passed through the ranks of the force about 50,000 officers and 1,000,000 other ranks. The Territorial Force suffered total battle casualties of 27,000 officers and nearly 600,000 other ranks, of which some 6,600 officers and 106,000 other ranks were killed. Among the war honours gained by officers and men of the Territorial Force were 70 Victoria Crosses.

OFFICIAL END OF THE WAR.

The Official Termination of the War, when Treaties of Peace had been ratified by the respective Governments, was Aug. 31, 1918. The Ottoman Empire was excluded from the Order in Council, and War with Turkey was declared at an end on August 6, 1914.

(Hours 10 to 5.)

Sessions of the Church Assembly in 1934.—
Feb. 5-19; June 18-22; Nov. 12-16.

MEASURES PASSED BY THE ASSEMBLY, 1933.

Benefices (Purchase of Rights of Patronage) Measure, 1933	(March 29, 1933)
Wytheshaive Parishes (Transfer) Measure, 1933	(June 28, 1933)
Parish of Manchester Revenues Measure, 1933	(July 28, 1933)

THE CHURCH ASSEMBLY (or "National Assembly of the Church of England") was established in 1920, "to deliberate on all matters concerning the Church of England and to make provision in respect thereof." The Assembly consists of three Houses, composed of Bishops, Clergy, and Laity respectively. The first two Houses consist of the Convocations of Canterbury and York, of which the respective Upper Houses form the House of Bishops, and the respective Lower Houses the House of Clergy; the House of Laity comprises representatives of the Laity of the Provinces of Canterbury and York, elected every five years by the Lay members of the Diocesan Conferences, who consist mainly of representatives elected, either directly or indirectly, by members of the Church of England on a roll prepared in each parish.

The Church Assembly is free to discuss any proposal concerning the Church of England, and to make provision in respect of such matters, but where this includes Parliamentary sanction for any alteration contemplated, this authority is to be sought in the manner prescribed by the Church of England Assembly (Powers) Act, 1919, often referred to as the "Enabling Act." It is specially provided that any innovation touching doctrinal formulae, or the services or ceremonies of the Church, or the administration of the Sacraments or sacred rites thereof, must be debated and voted upon by each of the three Houses sitting separately, and must then be either accepted or rejected by the Assembly in the terms in which it is finally proposed by the House of Bishops. It is further laid down that the Assembly or any of the three Houses may debate and formulate its judgment by resolution upon any matter concerning the Church, or otherwise of religious or public interest, but the Assembly may not issue any statement purporting to define the doctrine of the Church on any question of theology. None of the powers belonging to the Convocations of Canterbury and York is to be diminished or derogated by the Assembly, which is also prohibited from exercising any power or performing any function distinctively belonging to the Bishops by right of their episcopal office.

Parochial affairs are managed by Parochial Church Meetings of parishioners who are members of the Church of England and by Church Councils elected by such meetings.

General Statistics.—The number of baptisms in 1931 was 418,982, the Easter communicants in the various English Dioceses numbered 2,428,324. The total gross income of 12,773 incumbents was £6,555,109, including £193,847 contributed as Easter offerings. The stipends of the assistant clergy were £995,312. The amount of voluntary parochial contributions in the 43 dioceses of England was £6,529,160.

Central Board of Finance.—Receipts in 1932 amounted to £128,848, of which sum Diocesan contributions amounted to £107,902. Below are the principal items of expenditure:—

ST. PATRICK'S NATIONAL CATHEDRAL, DUBLIN.

Dean and Ordinary, Very Rev. Thomas Arnold Harvey, B.D.

GENERAL SYNOD,

Consisting of House of Bishops (13) and House of Representatives (viz., 208 clerical and 416 lay).

Honorary Secretaries, Ven. C. K. Irwin, B.D. ; Very Rev. H. B. Kennedy, B.D. ; Major E. H. C. Wellesey and W. E. Thrift, T.D.

Secretary to the REPRESENTATIVE CHURCH BODY (INCORPORATED 1870), A. F. Maude, 52 St. Stephen's Green E., Dublin; Asst. Sec. Rev. J. H. Yates, B.D.

Chief Accountant—George B. Butler.

By the Act of Union, 1800, the Church of Ireland was united with the Church of England, the Sovereign, as one of its members, being supreme governor on earth. By the Act of 1869 this union was severed, and on Jan. 1, 1871, the Church of Ireland resumed her independent position. The Act of 1869 not only disestablished the Irish Church, but also took away her endowments, nothing being left but the right to the life services of the annuitant Bishops and Clergy (the annuities provided were commuted for a capital sum), the right to claim churches in use for divine service, the right to buy the See and Glebe Houses (with garden and curtilage), and £500,000 in lieu of private endowments.

The supreme governing body of the Church of Ireland is the GENERAL SYNOD, which meets annually.

Subject to the GENERAL SYNOD are 20 Diocesan Synods, which are assisted by smaller elected bodies called Diocesan Councils.

The Bishop of the Diocese is chosen by the clerical and lay members of the Diocesan Synod. The Primate is chosen by the House of Bishops from amongst their own number.

The incumbent of the Parish is appointed by a Board of Nomination, consisting of 7 persons, viz. The Bishop, 3 diocesan nominators (2 clerical and 1 lay) appointed by the Diocesan Synod, and 3 parochial nominators (lay) appointed by the registered vestrymen of the parish.

The financial trustees of the Church are the REPRESENTATIVE BODY, composed of the Archbishops and Bishops, 13 clergymen and 20 laymen, chosen by the Diocesan Synods, with 13 co-opted members (clerical or lay). This body holds the property of the Church, and administers its funds, subject to the General Synod.

The first property it held was the capital sum £7,581,075, representing the life annuities of the Bishops and Clergy paid over as commutation money by the Church Commissioners, and also £500,000 compensation for private endowments. The commutation capital on Dec. 31, 1932, was only £6,467,122. 6d., charged with annuities to 2 annuitants. The funds, however, in the custody of the Representative Body amounted in all to £10,923,980, made up of Commutation £6,468, Private Endowments £341,736, Parochial Sustentation £7,120,194, Episcopal Sustentation £572,087, General Synod Funds £724,085, and Miscellaneous purposes £1,088,668.

Since 1869 members of the Church have paid in to the Representative Body a total sum of £11,028,833. The interest of the Diocesan and Parochial Sustentation and other Funds is approximately £372,154. The total amount of assessment for stipend paid by parishes, 1932, was £104,935, and the total amount paid for stipends under Diocesan Schemes was £339,455.

THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND is Presbyterian in constitution, and is governed by Kirk Sessions, Presbyteries, Synods, and the General Assembly, which consists of both clerical and lay representatives from each of the Presbyteries. It is presided over by a Moderator (chosen annually by the Assembly), to whom His Majesty the King has granted precedence in Scotland, during his term of office, next after the Lord Chancellor of Great Britain. The Sovereign is represented by a Lord High Commissioner (appointed each year by the Crown), who receives the sum of £2,000 towards his expenses. The country, for Church purposes, was, prior to the union of the Church of Scotland with the United Free Church of Scotland which was effected at a joint meeting of the General Assemblies of both Churches held on October 2, 1929, in the presence of H.R.H. the Duke of York as Lord High Commissioner, divided into 16 Synods and 84 Presbyteries, and there were about 1,800 ministers and licentiates engaged in ministerial and other work. The number of communicants on the roll (Dec. 31, 1928) was 759,797. The sum of £809,865 3s. 3d. was (apart from Seat Rents levied by Church Authority and amounting to £73,371 6s. 7d.), but including legacies, amounting to £45,230 6s. 9d., raised in 1928 for church and missionary purposes. Within the last 80 years considerably over 500 chapels, at a cost for stipends and supplementary endowments of over £2,450,000, have been endowed and erected into parishes quoad sacra. The parish churches numbered 1,470. There were in addition 245 chapels and mission stations, in all of which worship is regularly conducted. The figures applicable to the Church of Scotland as now re-united after 86 years of separation are only partly available:—

Congregations, 2,920; total membership, 1,280,620; Sunday Schools, 3,758, with 369,115 scholars and 47,795 teachers. In 20 Foreign Mission fields there are 581 European Mission Agents (and in addition 195 missionaries' wives, many of whom are doing mission work in the various fields) and 7,807 native agents, evangelists and teachers, including in both cases those of the Women's Foreign Mission.

Until 1560 the Church of Scotland was Roman Catholic, but in that year the Scots Parliament abolished the jurisdiction of the Pope, proscribed the Mass, and ratified a Confession of Faith drawn up by John Knox and other divines. In it all essential articles of the ancient creeds of the Church were adhered to. Ceremonies were declared to be temporary in their nature, and should be altered when they began to foster superstition. Presbytery was settled in 1590.

The restoration of the rights of the Bishops, civil and ecclesiastical, was, however, sanctioned by the General Assembly of 1622, and three Scottish Bishops were in that year consecrated in London. Further innovations by King James VI. alarmed the people, and the attempt of Charles I. to impose on the Church a Book of Canons and a Liturgy was met by the National Covenant and the restoration of Presbyterian forms, which culminated in the Westminster Confession of Faith in 1646. At the Restoration the Church again became Episcopal, but in 1690 the Scottish Parliament re-established Presbyterianism. By the Treaty of Union between England and Scotland (ratified by the English Parliament 6 Anne c. ii.) the Church of Scotland was secured in its Presbyterian form of government, and the very first official act of a sovereign of the British Empire on his accession is to take an oath to maintain inviolably this settlement. In 1921 Parliament passed the Church of Scotland Act, 1921, to declare the lawfulness of certain Articles declaratory of the constitution of the Church of Scotland. These Articles were framed with a view to facilitating union among Presbyterian Churches in Scotland. A committee, appointed by the Secretary for Scotland (under the Presidency of the late Viscount Haldane), enquired into the question of endowments, following upon which the Church of Scotland (Property and Endowments Bill) was introduced and was passed into law (15 and 16 Geo. V. c. 33) in 1925. The primary purpose of this legislative measure was to transfer to and vest in the Church of Scotland General Trustees, incorporated under the Church of Scotland (General Trustees) Order Confirmation Act 1921, the whole properties and endowments belonging to the Church as it then existed for behoof the latter.

LORD HIGH COMMISSIONER (1933), John Buchan, C.H., M.P., Holyrood Palace, Edinburgh.

OTHER PRESBYTERIAN CHURCHES.

(1) The Presbyterian Church in Ireland.—The largest of the Presbyterian churches in Ireland consists of 33 presbyteries, 566 ministers, 547 congregations, with 121,760 communicants, 94,804 families, 7,997 Sabbath-school teachers, and 94,435 scholars. During the 12 months ended Dec. 31, 1932, this branch contributed by congregational effort £344,355 for religious, charitable, and missionary purposes. The total income for the period for all purposes was £465,750.—Moderator (1933-4), Rt. Rev. William Corkey, M.A., D.D. General Sec., Rev. W. A. Watson, M.A., D.D., Church House, Belfast.

(2) The Presbyterian Church of England has 14 presbyteries, 354 congregations, 7 preaching stations, and 83,413 members. It has a Theological College (Westminster College, Cambridge), and supports 68 missionaries abroad, including 34 women. In 1932 the amount raised for all purposes was £338,284.—Moderator, Rev. C. C. Goodlet, M.A. Gen. Sec., Rev. Thomas Mackay, M.A. Church Offices: 15 Russell Square, W.C. 2. Publications Office: 21 Warwick Lane, Paternoster Row, E.C. 4.

UNDER the general designation of METHODISTS are included all those religious bodies which owe their existence, directly or indirectly, to the efforts of the Revd. John Wesley (born June 17, 1703; died March 2, 1791) and his brother, Revd. Charles Wesley (born Dec. 18, 1707; died March 29, 1788).

THE METHODIST CHURCH.

On September 20, 1932, the Wesleyan Methodist Church, the Primitive Methodist Church and the United Methodist Church, were united and became "The Methodist Church."

The Methodist Church is governed primarily by the Conference, secondarily by the Synods (held in September and May), consisting of all the ministers and of selected laymen in each district, over which a chairman is appointed by the Conference; and thirdly by quarterly meetings of the ministers and lay officers of each circuit. The authority of both Synods and Quarterly Meetings is subordinate to the Conference, which has the supreme legislative and judicial power in Methodism.

Secretary of the Conference, Rev. Robert Bond, 1 Central Buildings, Westminster, S.W. 1.

Statistics.—In 1933, in association with the Conference in Great Britain and Ireland (at home and abroad), there were 5,337 Ministers, 45,666 Lay Preachers, 1,243,041 Members and Probationers, 21,353 Churches, 16,311 Sunday Schools, 212,067 Sunday School Officers and Teachers, and 1,436,837 Sunday Scholars.

The latest statistics of Methodism throughout the world (1932) are: Ministers, 59,434; local preachers, 68,327; members and probationers, 11,976,070; Sunday schools, 92,769; officers and teachers, 977,236; scholars, 10,097,702; churches and other preaching places, 101,078.

Wesleyan Methodists, the original body founded in 1739 by the two brothers. The first Conference, consisting of six clergymen and four laymen, was held in 1744.

The Primitive Methodists, sprang up in Staffordshire, in 1820, under the leadership of Hugh Bourne and William Clowes.

The United Methodist Church was formed by the Union in 1907 of three denominations of Methodists which hitherto had been separate from and independent of each other. These were—The Methodist New Connexion, which owed its origin in 1797 to the Rev. Alexander Kilham, one of the early itinerating Wesleyan preachers The Bible Christians, founded in 1815 by Wm. O'Bryan, a Wesleyan lay preacher in Cornwall. The United Methodist Free Churches, which was itself an amalgamation of three different secessions—the Protestant Methodists, formed in 1828; the Wesleyan Methodist Association, which sprang out of a controversy in 1834, concerning the need for a trained ministry; and the Wesleyan Reform Association, founded in 1849, during a great agitation.

The act of union of these three denominations into one took place in London on September 17, 1907, when the first united Conference was held.

INDEPENDENT METHODISTS.

Independent Methodists.—This body is Congregational in its organisation, with an unpaid Ministry. Its first Conference was held in 1805. In 1932 there were in Great Britain and Ireland, 400 Ministers, 10,786 Members, 163 Chapels and 22,574 Sunday Scholars.

WESLEYAN REFORM UNION.

This Union is Methodist in doctrine, Congregational in government, with, if any church desires it, a paid ministry. It is the remnant of the original Reformers expelled from Wesleyan Methodism in 1849. The adherents are mainly in the Midland counties. In 1932 there were in Great Britain and Ireland 30 Ministers, 486 Lay Preachers, 13,516 Members, 231 Chapels and 25,705 Sunday Scholars.—President (1933-34), Councillor L. F. Milner, 31 Conduit Road, Sheffield 10; General Secretary (1933-34), Rev. G. A. Metcalfe, Wesleyan Reform Book Room, 25 Change Alley, Sheffield; Hon. Sec., W. Brookes, J.P., Pitsmoor, Sheffield.

THE CALVINISTIC METHODIST CHURCH OF WALES.

THE CALVINISTIC METHODIST OR PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF WALES is the only Church of purely Welsh origin, and embraces a very large section of the Welsh-speaking population. Its form of government being Presbyterian, it is a constituent of the Pan-Presbyterian Council or Alliance. It has foreign missions in Assam, India, and in Brittany. Churches and preaching stations in Assam, 1,465.

In 1932 the body numbered—churches, 1,489; chapels and other buildings for Sunday-school branches, 1,702; ministers and preachers, 1,134; elders, 7,542; communicants, 184,257; on probation, 861; Sunday-school teachers and officers, 21,895; Sunday-school scholars, 139,923; adherents (including communicants), 284,505. Contributions in aid of the Ministry in 1932, £196,589 17s. 7d. For various religious purposes (including the ministry), £409,498. Receipts from various funds, £30,921 0s. 4d.

One of the features of the Welsh churches is the Sunday-school, which is attended by adults as well as children; the vernacular is the language used generally in these schools.

The English branch of the Church has 379 chapels and preaching stations, with 34,844 communicants.

On 18 July, 1933, the Calvinistic Methodist or Presbyterian Church of Wales Act, 1933, received the Royal Assent. By this measure the autonomy of the Church in matters spiritual and the establishment of a Properties Board have been secured.

Moderators of Synods—South Wales, Evan Evans, Aberystwyth; North Wales, Rev. W. M. Jones, Llansantffraid, Oswestry.

Moderator of General Assembly, Rev. P. Hughes Griffiths, 42 West Heath Drive, Golder's Hill, London, N.W. 11.

Chief Secretary, Rev. D. Cunoil Davies, M.A., Bryn Elwydd, Machynlleth, North Wales.

THE INDEPENDENTS, OR CONGREGATIONALISTS, are the most ancient community of Dissenters. In 1831 the majority of their churches were formed into the Congregational Union of England and Wales, incorporated in 1902, and in 1920 nine districts were formed, each under a Moderator. There are 51 county and other Associations in the British Isles, with 4,744 churches and preaching stations; the number of ministers in the British Isles is 1,862. Chairman of the Congregational Union of England and Wales, 1924-25, Rev. T. T. James, M.A. Secretary, Rev. Sidney M. Berry, D.D. Office and Publication Department, 22 Memorial Hall, Farringdon St., E.C. 4.

The Countess of Huntingdon's Connexion, with 38 chapels and mission stations, is governed by nine trustees assisted by an annual conference of ministers and delegates. Secretary, E. Dolby Shelton. Offices, 41, Holborn Hall, Gray's Inn Road, W.C. 1.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

THE SALVATION ARMY was founded by General William Booth (b. 1829, d. 1912) in July, 1865, in the East of London.

After the work had spread to many English cities under the name of the Christian Mission, it took, in 1878, its present name, and adopted a military plan of organisation, with a uniform and other distinctive features. From the early eighties it spread to many parts of the world, and at the death of its Founder was established in 59 countries. It is now (1933) established in 84 countries and colonies. Since 1890, following the publication of "In Darkest England and the Way Out," written by the first General, the Salvation Army has added Social Work of a varied and comprehensive character to the evangelistic work with which it began, and which remains the foundation and principal features of its activities.

In 1931, an Act of Parliament provided that all future Generals should be elected by the High Council of the The Salvation Army, and Minor Religious Denominations.

The General Assembly of Unitarian and Free Christian Churches, has about 320 ministers, 345 chapels and other places of worship. Gen. Sec., Rev. Mortimer Rowe, B.A., Essex Hall, Essex Street, W.C.2. The Brethren number about 80,000, of whom five-eighths belong to the "Open" body. The Society of Friends (Quakers) consists of 29,119 members in Great Britain, and has 395 places of worship with 54 places of worship in Ireland and 2,108 members. Central Office (Great Britain), Friends House, Euston Rd., N.W. 1, (Ireland), 6 Eustace Street, Dublin. The Churches of Christ have 14,277 members and 186 churches in the British Isles, with 159 Sunday Schools, 1,719 teachers, and 16,817 scholars. The Church of Christ, Scientist, has in the British Isles 250 branches of The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., U.S.A. (Offices, Donington House, Norfolk St., Strand, W.C. 2). The Moravian Church (Offices, 32 Fetter Lane, E.C.) has in the U.K. 41 congregations and preaching stations, with 3,345 communicants. The Catholic Apostolic Church has above 80 churches, including a fine Gothic building in Gordon Square, W.C.; the New Church (Swedenborgian), 75 societies with about 6,700 registered members; the Latter-Day Saints (Mormons) have 82 churches. The Free Church of England (otherwise called The Reformed Episcopal Church) is the Union of two denominations, the Free Church of England founded in 1844

AND THE BAPTISTS.

THE BAPTISTS are similar to the Congregationalists in all respects but one—viz., the Baptism by immersion of believers only. Like the Congregationalists, they are for the most part grouped in associations of churches, and the majority of these belong to the Baptist Union, which was formed in 1813. In the British Isles there were, in 1932, 4,141 chapels and 2,033 pastors. The members numbered 405,457, Sunday-school teachers 59,909, and Sunday scholars 476,844. President of the Baptist Union, 1932-33, Rev. R. Rowntree Clifford. Secretary, Rev. M. E. Aubrey. Office, 4, Southampton Row, London, W.C. 1.

The Baptist World Alliance (founded in 1905) is a Federation of National Conventions and Unions in 70 countries. Communicant membership nearly 12,000,000. General Sec., Rev. J. H. Rushbrooke, M.A., D.D. Office, 4 Southampton Row, W.C. 1.

The Strict and Particular Baptists have about 600 places of worship in England and Wales, and 20,000 members, with Foreign mission fields.

that the properties and assets, hitherto held by the General as Sole Trustee, should be vested in a Custodian Trustee Company.

In Dec., 1932, the number of Officers, Cadets and Employees was 35,000, of Corps and Outposts, 15,931, Local Officers (unpaid) 108,856. The number of countries occupied was 84, and of languages used 76. Connected with the Salvation Army are 1,582 philanthropic institutions, including 309 Industrial Homes, 93 Maternity Homes, 172 Slum Posts, 16 Prison-Gate Homes, 397 Shelters and Cheap Food Depôts for the Homeless, 136 Labour Bureaux, 12 Farms, &c., 1,030 Industrial Homes and Day Schools. The total raised in the British Isles during "Self-Denial Week" in 1933 amounted to £143,970. Balance-sheets and statements of account relating to the General Funds or to the Social Funds can be obtained, post free, from 101 Queen Victoria Street, E.C. 4.—GENERAL, Edward J. and the Reformed Episcopal Church founded (in New York) in 1873. In England there are 50 churches. Bishop Primus, Rt. Rev. F. Vaughan, D.D., Emmanuel Rectory, Morecambe. Gen. Sec., Rev. A. V. Bland, D.D., Rydal Mount, Morecambe. The Old Roman Catholic Church: Archbishop in Gt. Britain, Most Rev. Bernard Mary Williams, Madam's Wood, Painswick, Stroud, Glou. The Seventh Day Adventists (Hdqrs., Stanborough Park, Watford, Herts) have 75 organized churches, 39 companies, and 4,825 members in the British Isles. The Greeks (Exarch of Western and Northern Europe, Metropolitan of Thyateira, Archbishop Germanos, 20 Newton Rd., Bayswater, W. 2) have St. Sophia's Cathedral (Moscow Road, W. 2) and churches in Manchester, Liverpool, and Cardiff. The Russian Orthodox Church (St. Philip) is at 188, Buckingham Palace Road, S.W. 1. The Armenians have a church in London (St. Sarkis, Iverna Gardens) and in Manchester (St. Trinity, Upper Brook Street); the French, Dutch, Swedes, and Swiss in London, Norwich, Hull, and Canterbury. The Shah Jehan Mosque, Woking, Surrey, was built in 1890 at the cost of the Begum of Bhopal; it is the headquarters of the Muslim Mission and Literary Trust, with a resident Imam; there is also a mosque for Moslems in Melrose Road, Southfields, S.W. 18, with a resident Imam. A Buddhist mission is at 41, Gloucester Road, Regent's Park, N.W. 1.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL, City of London, E.C. 4. (1675-1710) cost £747,666. The cross on the dome is 365 ft. above the ground level, the inner cupola 228 ft. above the floor. "Great Paul," in S.W. tower, weighs 27 tons. Organ by Father Smith (enlarged by Willis) in case carved by Grinling Gibbons (who also carved the choir stalls). Nave and transepts free; Fees to the following parts (on week-days only): Library, whispering gallery, and stone gallery, 6d.; golden gallery, 2s.; crypt, 6d.; ball, 2s.; total, 3s. Service on Sundays at 8, *10.30, *2.15, and 4. Weekdays at 8, *10, 1.15, 4. (*Services are choral). To the S. are remains of the Chapter House and Cloisters of "Old St. Paul's," destroyed by the Fire of London in 1666.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY, S.W. 1 (built A.D. 1060-1760).—Open on week-days at 8 a.m. Admission to Royal Chapels by fee of 6d., except on Mondays (open free); wax effigies, 6d. Norman undercroft, 3d. Transepts open on Sundays for service only, and Nave only on certain services. Holy Communion at 8; Morning Prayer and Holy Communion at 10.30. Evening Prayer at 3. Sermon at 6.30. Daily: Holy Communion at 8 a.m.; School Service at 9.30; choral services at 10 and 3. Chapel of Henry VII., Chapter House, and Cloisters; King Edward the Confessor's shrine, A.D. 1269, tombs of kings (Edward I., Edward III., Henry V., Mary, Queen of Scots, Queen Elizabeth), and many other monuments and objects of interest, especially the grave of "An Unknown Warrior" and the Warrior's Chapel at the W. end of Nave (1900), and Poets' Corner. The Coronation Chair encloses the "Stone of Scone," brought from Scotland by Edward I. in 1297. The Chapel of the Pyx is open on Tuesday and Saturday.

SOUTHWARK CATHEDRAL, south side of the Thames, near London Bridge, S.E. 1.—Mainly 13th century. Known as St. Mary Overie previous to 1540. Open 7.30 a.m. to 6 p.m., free. Sunday services, 7.30, 8, and 11 a.m. (choral) and 6.30 p.m. (choral). Week-days: 7.30, 8, and 5 p.m. (choral). The tomb of John Gower (1330-1408) is between the Bunyan and Chancer memorial windows, in the N. aisle; Shakespeare effigy backed by view of Southwark and Globe Theatre in S. aisle; the altar screen (erected 1520) has been restored; the tomb of Bishop Andrews (died 1655) is near screen. The Early English Lady Chapel (behind the choir), restored 1930, is the scene of the Consistory Courts of the reign of Mary (Gardiner and Bonner); and is still used for this purpose.

ALL HALLOWS, Barking-by-the-Tower, E.C. 3.—15th century church, containing a very fine series of brass effigies; Jacobean pulpit with Sussex ironwork and font cover ascribed to Grinling Gibbons; crypt of earlier church.

ALL SAINTS, Margaret Street, W. 1.—Built by Butterfield in 1859. Anglo-Catholic and noted for its music.

BOW CHURCH (ST. MARY-LE-BOW), Cheapside, E.C. 2. Rebuilt by Wren with beautiful steeple (222 ft.). 11th century crypt and church open daily (except M.) 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Since 17th century, anyone born within sound of the bells of Bow Church has been designated a "Cockney." The 11th century church was built on stone arches or "bows."

CHRIST CHURCH, GREYFRIARS, E.C. 1.—Rebuilt by Wren. The organ (repaired 1921) is by Renatus Harris, and the marble font is attributed to Grinling Gibbons. Until removal to Horsham (1902) the boys of Christ's Hospital (Blue Coat School), the site of which is now occupied by the G.P.O., attended services at Christ Church and the galleries contain seats with raised benches for the "Greclaus." Blue Coat School boys still attend annually on St. Matthew's Day (Sept. 21). "Spital Sermon" is preached at Christ Church at Easter.

GEORGE'S CHAPEL, Wellington Barracks (Birdcage Walk, St. James's Park, S.W. 1).—Chapel redecorated in 1878. Open to visitors on week days, 10 to 1 and 2 to 4 (Mondays and Saturdays, 10 to 12). Parade service on Sundays at 11 a.m. (tickets of admission can be obtained on application to the Chaplain, R. M. Chapel, Wellington Barracks);

Holy Communion, 8 a.m.; Evening service at 6.30 p.m. (no tickets required for these services).

HOLY TRINITY, Minorities, Aldgate, E. 1.—(Dis-mantled and now a Sunday school). Contains a mural monument with the arms of the Earls of Dartmouth and of a member of that family (Legge) in which the arms of George Washington are quartered with those of the Legges.

MARYLEBONE CHAPEL, High Street, Marylebone, W. 1 (now replaced by St. Marylebone Church).—In the churchyard lie Allan Ramsay (poet), Hoyle (whist), Ferguson (astronomer), Charles Wesley (hymn writer) and his son Samuel Wesley (musician).

ST. ALBAN, Brooke Street, Holborn, E.C. 1.—A brick building by Butterfield (1858). Anglo-Catholic and noted for its music; organ by Willis. Vicar, Rev. R.S. Eves. Services on Sundays: Holy Eucharist at 7 and 8; choral at 10; solemn, with sermon at 11; matins, 10.30; baptisms, and churchings at 2.15; children's service and catechising, 3; evensong at 6.30; frequent mission services. Open daily, 6.45 a.m. to 9 p.m.

ST. ANDREW UNDERSHAFT, St. Mary Axe, Leadenhall Street, E.C. 3.—An early 17th century church, contains a monument of Stow, the London antiquary, and a memorial of Holbein. The organ is by Renatus Harris, the rival of Father Smith.

ST. ANNE'S, Wardour Street, Soho, W. 1.—Built in 17th century and noted for its music. Monument of William Hazlitt in the churchyard.

ST. BARTHOLOMEW'S Priory Church, Smithfield, E.C. 1, the oldest parish church in London (A.D. 1123).—Rector, Rev. Canon E. S. Savage, M.A. Fine old Norman building, with tomb of the first prior, Rahere. N. transept restored and re-opened in June, 1893. Crypt, Lady Chapel and Cloisters opened 1905-1908. Open daily (Sundays 3 to 5, and for services 8.30 to 11.0; 6.30).

ST. BENET, Paul's Wharf, Upper Thames Street, E.C. 4.—Rebuilt by Wren, 1683; Inigo Jones, 1573-1652, and his father and mother, were buried in former church. St. Benet is the Metropolitan Welsh Church.

ST. BRIDE'S CHURCH, Fleet Street, E.C. 4.—Rebuilt by Wren, with beautiful spire (226 ft.). Samuel Richardson, the novelist, is buried in the nave. In the old church Lovelace, Sackville and Winkyn de Worde were buried, and Samuel Pepys was baptized.

ST. CLEMENT DANES, Strand W.C. 2.—Rebuilt by Wren on site of earlier church assigned to the Danish settlers. The traditional burial place of Harold Harefoot (King Harold I., see p. 185) son of Canute. The organ is by Father Smith; the bells are those celebrated in the familiar nursery rhyme "Oranges and Lemons," and the air is among those played on the chimes (since 1920). Dr. Johnson's pew in gallery and monument outside E. end.

ST. DUNSTON IN THE EAST, Idol Lane, Lower Thames Street, E.C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren with fine tower and spire; rest of church rebuilt, 1817-1821; contains many monuments.

ST. EDMUND, KING AND MARTYR, Lombard Street, E.C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren, with altar at north end; organ by Renatus Harris. Restored and re-opened 1919, after damage by Air Raid, July 7, 1917.

ST. ETHELBURGA'S, Bishopsgate, E.C. 2 (14th and 15th century) with two "Hudson" windows.—On April 19, 1607, Henry Hudson (the navigator who gave his name to Hudson's Bay and to the Hudson River), his son John, and his ten sailors took communion in St. Ethelburga's, "purposing to goe to sea foure days after."

ST. GEORGE'S, Hanover Square, W. 1 (18th century; famous for fashionable marriages).

ST. GEORGE'S, Southwark, S.E.—(Rebuilt 1736) contains the tombs of Bishop Bonner (1497-1569) and Edward Cocker (1632-1673), the author of Cocker's "Arithmetick." (The expression "according to Cocker" refers to this book.)

ST. GILES'S, Cripplegate, E.C. 2 (14th century).—Contains the graves of John Milton, John Foxe, and Sir Martin Frobisher, the Elizabethan seaman, who attempted to discover a north-west passage to Cathay, and commanded the Primrose as vice-admiral to Drake in his expedition to the West Indies.

ST. HELEN'S, Bishopsgate, E.C. 2.—The "Westminster Abbey of the City" from its numerous monuments; building dates from 13th century. Contains a Shakespeare memorial window presented by Mr. William Prentice, an American. In St. Helen's Place the foundations of an earlier church were uncovered during rebuilding operations in 1922.

ST. JAMES'S, Piccadilly, W. 1.—Built by Wren, with font and wood carvings by Grinling Gibbons. Lord Chesterfield and Lord Chatham were baptized in St. James's.

ST. JOHN'S, St. John's Square, Clerkenwell, E.C. 1.—Built in early 18th century, includes part of the ancient priory of St. John (12th century crypt).

ST. KATHERINE CREEK, Leadenhall Street, E.C. 3. Rebuilt in early 17th century and ascribed to Inigo Jones. Contains a cathedra wheel E. window, an organ by Father Smith, Archbishop Laud's prayer book and bible, and a monument of Sir Nicholas Throgmorton. The "Lion" sermon is preached here annually before the Lord Mayor and Corporation of London to commemorate the escape of a Lord Mayor (Sir John Gayer) from a lion in Algeria (Oct. 16, 1630).

ST. MAGNUS THE MARTYR, Lower Thames Street, E.C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren, with steeple (185 feet) and lantern of great beauty, contains the tomb of Miles Coverdale (1488-1568), translator of the Bible, who was rector of St. Magnus (1564-1566) and Bishop of Exeter (1551-1557).

ST. MARGARET, Lothbury, E.C. 2.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains Grinling Gibbons carvings (font, chancel screen, and pulpit).

ST. MARGARET'S, Westminster, S.W. 1.—Founded 11th or 12th century; buildings date from 15th century, with frequent "restorations." The parish church of the Dominions beyond the Seas.

ST. MARGARET PATTERNS, Rood Lane, Eastcheap, E.C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren, with a leaden spire, contains two canopied pews and other curious survivals and relics.

ST. MARTIN IN THE FIELDS, Trafalgar Square, S.W. 1.—Built by James Gibbs (1721-6) in place of earlier church on same site. In register of burials are the names of Nell Gwynne (1687), Faquhar the dramatist (1707), and Roubillac the sculptor (1709). A bust of James Gibbs by Ryshrak is in the church.

ST. MARY, Aldermanbury, E.C. 2.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains the tomb of Judge Jeffreys and a marble monument to Lieutenant John Smith, "drowned off Staten Island in 1782." John Heminge and Henry Condell (Shakespeare's editors) were buried in the older church.

ST. MARY WOOLNETH (above the City and South London Tube Station), King William Street and Lombard Street, E.C. 3.—Built by Hawksmoor early 18th century, organ by Father Smith, contains a memorial to Sir Wm. Phipps, Governor of Massachusetts, who died in London in 1698.

ST. MICHAEL PATERNOSTER ROYAL, College Hill, Upper Thames Street, E.C. 4.—Rebuilt after the Fire by Strong (a pupil of Wren's), the former church contained the tomb of "Dick Whittington" and a Grinling Gibbons altarpiece.

ST. OLAVE, Hart Street, Mark Lane, E.C. 3.—A 15th century church, which survived the Fire of London, contains the tombs of Samuel Pepys and his wife, and a monument of John Watts, "President of the Council of New York"; also a memorial (formerly in All Hallows Staining) to Monkhouse Davison and Abram Newman, the exporters of the chests of tea which were thrown into Boston Harbour, Dec. 16, 1773. On Trinity Monday the Master and Brethren of Trinity House (g.v.) attend service here.

ST. PAUL'S, Covent Garden, W.C. 2.—Built by Inigo Jones. The tombstones round the exterior of the church record the burial places of Samuel Butler (Hudibras), Sir Peter Lely (Painter), Wycherley (Dramatist), Grinling Gibbons (Wood Carver), Dr. Arne ("Rule, Britannia"), and Macklin (Actor); Ellen Terry memorial.

ST. PETER'S, Kenilworth, E.C. 3.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains a carved choir screen also ascribed to him. The organ is by Father Smith.

ST. SEPULCHRE, Holborn, E.C. 1.—Part of this church escaped the Fire (see footnote, col. 2). The organ is by Renatus Harris, in a case attributed to Grinling Gibbons. Memorials in the church to Roger Ascham (Queen Elizabeth's tutor) and Capt. John Smith, "sometime Governor of Virginia and Admiral of New England," who would have been put to death but for the intercession of Pocahontas. (Princess Pocahontas is buried in Gravesend).

ST. STEPHEN'S, Coleman Street, E.C. 2.—The Rev. John Davenport, who, with other refugees, landed at Boston in 1637, and founded the colony of New Haven, Connecticut, in the following year was vicar of this church from 1644 to 1633. The colony was composed in part of former residents of this parish. The tablet in the church to Davenport's memory was erected by one of his American descendants.

ST. STEPHEN'S, Walbrook, E.C. 4.—Rebuilt by Wren, contains the tomb of Sir John Vanbrugh (architect and dramatist), and a painting by Benjamin West.

SAVOY CHAPEL, Savoy Street, Strand, W.C. 2 (re-built about 1809, on site of 13th century Savoy Palace, restored after disastrous fire in 1864).—Graves of Gavin Douglas and George Withers, and memorials of D'Oyly Carte, Laurence Irving.

ST. SWITHIN'S CHURCH, St. Swithin's Lane, E.C. 4 (rebuilt by Wren after the Fire of London, but since modernised).—Contains embedded in its external (S.) wall London Stone (mentioned in King Henry VI., Pt. II.), the milliarium from which in Roman times the miles were measured.

THE TEMPLE CHURCH, south side of Fleet Street, E.C. 4.—The largest of the five remaining round churches in England, the other four being the Churches of the Holy Sepulchre at Cambridge, Northampton, Little Maplestead (Essex), and Ludlow. The Norman church, restored 1840-1845, is open to the public on week-days, 10.30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Saturdays excepted. Organ by Father Smith. Church service (famous music) on Sunday at 11 a.m. and 3 p.m.: Service is discontinued in Aug. and Sept. Master of the Temple, Rev. Spencer Cecil Carpenter, B.D.

WREN'S CHURCHES.—Many of the "Churches in the City of London" were destroyed by the Fire of London (Sept. 2-6, 1666). Fifty of these were rebuilt by Wren at a total cost of £263,766 10s. 4½d., the most expensive being St. Mary-le-Bow, £15,400 6s. 8½d. (£7,300 8s. 7½d. for "Bow Tower"), and the cheapest, St. Vedast-Poster (£1,853 15s. 6d.).

Educational Statistics.

I.—ELEMENTARY.

Statutes require parents in England and Wales to cause their children to receive efficient elementary instruction or to attend school from 5 to 14 years of age; in Scotland, to provide efficient education up to 15 years; in Ireland, to cause their children to attend school from 6 to 14 years.

In England and Wales (1931) there were 20,907 public elementary schools with accommodation for 7,171,774 pupils, and average attendance of 4,935,737. In addition, there were 131 special schools for blind and deaf children, with accommodation for 9,443, and 476 for defective and epileptic children, with accommodation for 43,343. There were (1931) 35,059 certificated college-trained men teachers and 67,459 women, 5,143 certificated not college-trained men teachers and 18,730 women, and 1,896 uncertificated men and 28,774 uncertificated women.

In Scotland (1931) there were 2,924 primary schools with accommodation for 867,506, and average attendance of 594,066. There were (1931) 4,085 certificated men teachers and 15,341 women teachers, and 28 provisionally certificated women.

Elementary school education includes teaching in practical matters—needlework, drawing, gardening, handicrafts, cookery, &c.—and the sections upon health, medical attendance, physical training, evening play centres, home study, future employment, &c., show that the schools are valuable agencies in child-welfare generally.

II.—EDUCATION BEYOND ELEMENTARY.

Secondary.

The aims, methods, and instructions are in marked contrast to the comparative simplicity of those in Elementary Education. In all the four countries it is now felt that although technical instruction was the first branch to be promoted by statute, undifferentiated 4-year secondary (intermediate) courses should be gone through before pupils proceed to specialisation for industrial, commercial, &c., employments.

In England and Wales (1931) the number of Secondary schools recognised for grant was 1,367, with 10,925 full-time men and 10,769 full-time women teachers. The Authorities aim at securing graduate teachers as far as possible. The full-time pupils numbered 56,279 boys and 54,264 girls under 12; 121,263 boys and 120,790 girls between 12 and 16; 23,522 boys and 20,840 girls over 16—a total of 221,064 boys and 195,900 girls. Of these about one-fourth come up from elementary schools with "free places," others with scholarships. Nine-tenths of these schools receive State grants, and nearly one-third are controlled by Local Authorities. Fees are charged to most of the pupils. Of these "efficient" schools about 40 per cent. receive boarders (about 27,000) in varying proportions and drawn in many cases from distant areas. Most of them are endowed or under trusts, and their trust incomes and property form a considerable asset in secondary school finance. The system in Wales is much the same as in England, though the schools are under earlier statutory provisions, and are called "intermediate" in many cases. In Wales there is a Central Welsh Board.

In Scotland there are Preparatory and Secondary Departments under the same Commissioners and Local Authorities as the Elementary schools. In 1931 there were 207 Preparatory Departments with 75,796 children on the Register and average attendances of 67,020, and 251 Secondary Departments with 78,232 children on the Register and average attendances of 75,623. The Authorities aim at securing honours graduates as far as possible on the teaching staff, and all teachers are certificated.

Technical.

Technical Education in England and Wales is provided in Evening and similar schools and in Day Technical Classes and Technical Institution Courses (mostly controlled by Local Authorities). State grants are paid on the number of students, of whom about one-half are under 17 years of age. The average attendance of a student is about 50 hours per annum. There are also Teachers' Courses, Tutorial Classes, and also Schools of Art, Branch Schools of Art, and Art Classes. In Scotland Technical Education is provided in like manner.

Training.

Training is provided by the State for Elementary School Teachers, of whom 50 per cent. have been trained in Colleges having nearly 13,000 places. Progress is being made towards providing for the Training of Teachers for Secondary Schools, a small annual State grant being made for the purpose; and in Scotland all candidates for employment as teachers must undertake a course of training of at least one year in teaching.

Universities.

Many of these institutions now receive annual State grants, mainly in the form of "block" grants paid by the Treasury on the advice of the University Grants Committee. Substantial grants are also received from local Education Authorities in England and Wales. State grants to Irish institutions were transferred from the Treasury to the Irish Governments as from April, 1922.

In 1930-31 the Professors and Undergraduates were approximately as under:—

Universities	Professors, &c.	Under- graduates.
England (11)	3,900	34,960
Wales (1)	375	3,070
Scotland (4)	939	11,650
Total (16)	5,214	49,680

EXPENDITURE ON EDUCATION, 1933-34.

The combined total of expenditure of Local Education Authorities from the Exchequer and from the rates in 1933-34 is estimated at £81,840,000, as against £82,890,000 in 1932-33. The net expenditure falling on the Rates was estimated at £39,627,000, as against £40,216,000 in 1932-33. The grants payable by the Exchequer to Local Education Authorities are estimated at £37,964,000, as against £38,755,000 in 1932-33.

The assumed cost per child for Elementary Education in 1933-34 is estimated at £12s. 8d., as against £12s. 12d. in 1932-33. The average attendance estimated for 1933-34 is 4,930,000, as against an estimate of 4,960,000 for 1932-33. The grants to Universities and Colleges is £1,830,000, as against £1,680,000 in 1932-33.

THE UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

South Kensington, S.W. 7. 1836, 1900 and 1929.

IN 1927 the University of London, with the assistance of a gift of £400,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation of America and a grant from H.M. Treasury, purchased a site in Bloomsbury immediately to the north of the British Museum, upon which to erect a group of buildings which would form the headquarters of the University. The site, which is rectangular in shape and has an area of about 10½ acres, is bounded on the west by Malet Street, on the east by Russell Square and Woburn Square, on the north by Blyth Place and on the south by Montagu Place (with the British Museum on the other side of the road).

Since its acquisition, the problem of the development of the site for University purposes has been worked out stage by stage. With the assistance of the London County Council, parliamentary powers were obtained in 1928 for the closing of certain roadways which crossed the site, so as to secure a self-contained estate for the central University area. With a view to avoiding inconvenience to the public and the congestion of thoroughfares, the stipulation was made that before these powers were exercised certain of the roads surrounding the site should be widened and the cost borne by the University. The condition having been fulfilled, permission was given in February, 1932, by the Minister of Transport, with the concurrence of the London County Council and the Holborn Borough Council, to the enclosing of the southern portion of the site. This was completed in the early part of 1932.

The buildings to be erected on the site will be mainly for various central institutions and activities for which inadequate or no accommodation exists at present. These include the University Library, the newly established Courtauld Institute of Art, the Institute of Historical Research and the Institute of Education. Suitable quarters will be provided for the central administrative staff, and it is hoped that it will also be possible to erect a large ceremonial hall and an adequate building for the University Union. Certain other institutions, notably the Birkbeck College and the School of Oriental Studies, have been included provisionally in the building programme. With probably one or two exceptions, it is not proposed to transfer to the site any of the Colleges of the University, in which the greater part of the teaching work of the University is conducted. The aim is to establish a centre for the University system which extends over the whole of London.

In the preliminary consideration of the question of development the University had the assistance of Mr. H. V. Lanchester, F.R.I.B.A., who acted as consultant architect from 1929 to 1931. In June, 1931, Mr. Charles Holden, F.R.I.B.A., was appointed Architect for all the buildings to be erected. Although the scheme will have to be carried out in stages, Mr. Holden's first task was the preparation of a general design for the whole site. It was requisite that any such design should have regard to the immediate and future needs of the University, that it should preserve on the site at least as much open space as now exists, and that its scheme of buildings should not be out of harmony with other buildings adjoining the site. This task Mr. Holden accomplished, and his design has been generally approved by the Court and Senate.

The first stage of actual building operations was begun early in 1932. A contract for the work of excavating and of constructing the retaining walls for the Senate House and administrative offices was entered into and, on June 26, 1933, His Majesty the King, accompanied by Her Majesty the Queen, laid the foundation stone of the new buildings in the presence of a large and distinguished gathering, including representatives of most of the principal universities and learned societies of the world.

Towards the cost of building developments capital grants to an amount of £450,000 have been voted by the London County Council; the Corporation of the City of London have, subject to certain conditions, made a grant of £100,000 towards the cost of the Ceremonial Hall; and, for the same purpose, grants from the City Companies, amounting at present to about £72,000 in all, have been received or promised. The Goldsmiths' Company have offered, conditionally, £50,000 towards the cost of erecting and equipping the building of the University Library. Mr. Samuel Courtauld has generously provided for the cost of the building for the Courtauld Institute of Art, and the Czechoslovak Government have promised a substantial sum for a permanent home for the Institute of Slavonic Studies.

COMMERCIAL EDUCATION.

Commercial Students are well served by a number of independent schools or colleges in which class or private tuition is given or coaching undertaken by correspondence. Schools of Commerce can be found in practically every town: Book-keeping, Office Routine, Shorthand, Languages, are the usual subjects. Nearly every Education Authority has its system of Evening Institutes (Session—September to Easter and sometimes July) in which tuition may be obtained in most Commercial and Technical subjects. Classes are either free or subject to nominal charges.

The London County Council has Junior and Senior Evening Institutes to serve every district in the Metropolis. A child joining direct from an elementary day school and attending regularly can obtain all evening training from 6d. upwards. A postcard addressed to the L.C.C.

making a request for details will be promptly answered.

In addition to the Secondary Schools in London, at which various stages of commercial training are included in the general subjects, the L.C.C. has a series of voluntary and low fee Day Continuation Schools at which commercial and trade subjects are taught to children over 14 years. The L.C.C. has also several Central Schools at which free training is given to children 12-17 years in general education with either a commercial or industrial bias.

THE UNION JACK CLUB.

Waterloo Road, S.E. 1. Tel.: Hop. 3511.

Patron-in-Chief: His Majesty the King.

Patroness-in-Chief: Her Majesty the Queen.

Patrons: H.R.H. The Prince of Wales, K.G.; H.R.H. The Duke of Connaught, K.G.

President: Sir Walter R. Lawrence, Bt., G.C.E., G.C.V.O., C.B.

Vice-President: Colonel Sir Henry Streatfeild, G.C.V.O., C.B., C.M.G.

Hon. Treasurer: The Marquess of Cambridge, K.C.V.O.

Comptroller of Club: Vice-Admiral E. Wigram, C.M.G., D.S.O.

This is one of our great National Institutions, where Sailors, Soldiers and Airmen can go when on leave or passing through London; a place where they may obtain at moderate charges good meals and comfortable bedrooms and where they find the usual amenities of a club, including Library and Writing Room, Billiard Room, Baths, Barber's Shop, and also a Club Shop in which articles of everyday use and almost everything that Service men require may be purchased. The Club is open throughout the day and night.

The Union Jack Club was erected by public subscription as a National Memorial to those who had fallen in the South African War, and other campaigns, and was opened on July 1st, 1907, by His late Majesty King Edward VII. Membership is open to those below the rank of Officer who are serving on the Active List of the Regular Forces, honorary membership being extended to the Colonial Permanent Forces and to the Navies, Armies and Air Forces of Foreign Powers visiting England. A limited number of ex-Service Warrant Officers, Petty Officers, N.C.

officers and men may also be elected members of the Club.

The Club is managed by a Council and a General Committee, which includes representatives of the members.

A considerable extension of the Club with funds raised in all parts of the Empire to commemorate the services of our gallant fighting forces in the Great War of 1914-18 and to provide increased accommodation was completed in 1923.

Since 1926 the Council has been enabled, through the anonymous gift of one of its members, still further to enlarge the premises, bringing the number of beds available to 816, as against the original 208 when the Club opened.

THE UNION JACK HOSTEL.

Exton Street, Waterloo Road, S.E. 1.

Tel.: Hop. 2724. Opened June, 1913.

Patron-in-Chief: His Majesty the King.

Patroness-in-Chief: Her Majesty the Queen.

Patron: H.R.H. The Duke of Connaught, K.G.

President: Brig.-General Sir Frederick Gascoigne, K.C.V.O., C.M.G., D.S.O.

Vice-President: Sir Herbert J. Creedy, G.C.B., K.C.V.O.

Hon. Treasurer: The Marquess of Cambridge, K.C.V.O.

Secretary: J. R. Hayward, M.B.E.

Warden: Miss B. R. Morris.

The Hostel provides lodging and accommodation for the wives and children (with or without their husbands and fathers) of members and ex-members of the Naval and Military Forces of the Crown, below the rank of Officer. It is managed by a Council, and though run closely in connexion with the Union Jack Club, the organisation and finances of the two institutions are quite separate from one another.

Headmasters' Conference Schools.

THE HEADMASTERS' CONFERENCE.—Chairman (1933) Dr. C. Norwood (Harrow); Secy. W. A. Bulkeley-Evans, C.B.M., LL.D., 5 Paper Buildings, Temple, E.C. 4.—The Headmasters' Conference was founded in 1863 and incorporated in 1909. The object of the Conference is the discussion of educational questions. In considering what Schools shall be included in the List, or removed from it, the Committee will have regard to the Governing Scheme or other Instrument under which the School is administered, and if the School is maintained or aided by a Local Education Authority (a) how the Governing Body is constituted, (b) to what extent by right or in practice the Governing Body acts independently of the Local Education Authority in directing general policy or administering disposable funds, to the numbers in the School and, in the case of Schools in Great Britain and Ireland, the number of resident undergraduates of British Universities educated at the School. The Committee may also take into account the proportion of boys in the School who, having passed the School Certificate or other equivalent Examination, are continuing their studies beyond that stage. The annual meetings are, as a rule, held in December, alternately (a) at some school represented on the Conference, (b) at London or some other University town.

NOTES:—(a) "Annual Fees" represent the average amount payable annually, exclusive of fees for optional subjects; the fees quoted are the total amount for boarding and tuition, except where marked D. The accepted practice is for a term's notice to be given before a boy is withdrawn, and a term's fee is usually payable if a withdrawal takes place without notice.

(b) "Headmaster." In certain Schools other titles prevail, e.g., Beaumont, "Rector"; Belfast Academical, "Principal"; Dulwich, "Master"; Edinburgh Academy, "Rector"; Glenalmond, "Warden"; Haileybury, "Master"; King William's, I. of Man, "Principal"; Liverpool College, "Principal"; Magdalen Coll. Sch., "Master"; Manchester Gr., "High Master"; Marlborough, "Master"; Radley, "Warden"; St. Columba, Dublin, "Warden"; St. Edward's, Oxford, "Warden"; St. Paul's, "High Master"; Stonyhurst, "Rector"; Victoria College, Jersey, "Principal"; Wellington, "Master".

Secondary Schools.

A Secondary School, as defined by the Board of Education, is a school for pupils who intend to remain for at least four years, and up to at least the age of 16. It must provide a progressive course of general education of a kind and amount suited to an age-range at least from 12 to 17. The Board of Education issues annually a list of Secondary Schools recognized by the Board of Education as efficient, with the full official name of the school, the place where it is situated, the date of recognition, the fees payable and (in many cases) the examinations taken. A similar list is published for Wales and (with less detail) for Scotland. The list, in the case of England and Wales alone, occupies over 130 pages.

KING EDWARD'S HOSPITAL FUND FOR LONDON, 10 Old Jewry, E.C. 2.—Founded in 1897 by the late King Edward (then Prince of Wales) to secure more efficient support for the London Voluntary Hospitals. The Fund makes annual grants to hospitals within a radius of 11 miles from St. Paul's Cathedral, including special grants for approved schemes of extension or improvement. Each individual claim is carefully considered, and every effort is made to encourage efficiency and economy of working. The Fund also holds inquiries and publishes reports on matters affecting the welfare of the hospitals, and by various methods seeks to arouse and to maintain interest in the hospitals and their work. Total receipts, 1932, £325,504; expenses, £14,608; grants to hospitals and convalescent homes, £320,000; funds in hand (including gifts to capital), £3,888,632.—Pres., H.R.H. Prince of Wales. *Hon. THE BOYS' BRIGADE. (Incorporated.)

The senior boys' organisation; founded in 1883 by the late Sir William A. Smith. The object of the Brigade is attained by a combination of discipline and religious training. Every Company is connected with a Church or other Christian body. The total strength is over 120,000 officers and boys, with 50,000 juniors in The Life Boys.—Abbey House, Westminster, S.W. 1.

CHURCH LADS' BRIGADE.

An organisation especially valuable for helping a parish to keep the elder lads to their religious duties; was founded in 1891, and combines a military method with moral and religious instruction. It is estimated that 1,500,000 lads have had the advantage of the Brigade's training, and to-day there are over one thousand companies throughout the Empire, with upwards of 60,000 lads.—Headquarters, Aldwych House, Catherine Street, W.C. 2. H.Q. Staff Chaplain and Secretary, Rev. C. M. Armitage, M.A.

THE BROTHERHOOD.

THE BROTHERHOOD MOVEMENT. "To lead men and women into the Kingdom of God, to unite in Brotherhood of mutual help, to win the masses of the people for Jesus Christ, and to encourage the study of social service," may be said to have been founded in 1875 as the outcome of the Pleasant Sunday Afternoon movement initiated by John Blackham of West Bromwich. The movement is non-political and unsectarian, and connected with it are other societies—Sisterhoods, P.S.A., Bible Classes, &c. President, Rev. J. T. Hodgson; General Secretary, Rev. J. W. Tuffley; Headquarters, 37 Norfolk Street, Strand, W.C. 2.

ADDELPHI, Strand, W.C. a.—Adelphi Terrace and district commemorate the four architect brothers, James, John, Robert and William ADAM, who laid out the district (formerly Durham House) at the close of the 18th century. James, John, Robert, and William Streets (the last named is now Durham Street) commemorate these founders of the Adam style of architecture and internal decoration. In the neighbourhood of the Adelphi was York House, built by the Duke of Buckingham in 1645 (the Water Gate of which still stands in Embankment Gardens, q.v.), the commemorative streets being Charles Street, Villiers Street, Duke Street, Of Lane, Buckingham Street (Of Lane is now "York Place").

AUSTRALIA HOUSE, Strand, W.C. a.—A handsome and imposing building, erected 1911-4 by the Commonwealth of Australia as the offices of the High Commissioner for the Commonwealth. The Agents-General for VICTORIA, SOUTH AUSTRALIA and TASMANIA are accommodated in Australia House. NEW SOUTH WALES, QUEENSLAND and WESTERN AUSTRALIA have separate offices in the Strand.

BANK OF ENGLAND, Threadneedle Street, E.C. a. (Not open to sightseers).—The Bank of England was founded in 1694, and, although a joint stock bank, has always been closely connected with the Government. The present building (now being enlarged) was erected from the designs of Sampson (1734), and Sir John Soane (1788). A "Bank Guard" is furnished every evening by the Battalion of Foot Guards on duty.

BETHLEM ROYAL HOSPITAL.—The site in Lambeth, formerly occupied by this institution, will be laid out as a public park under the supervision of the L.C.C., through the generosity of Lord Rothenmere.

BELGRAVIA.—A fashionable district of London west of Buckingham Palace and south of Hyde Park, extends from Grosvenor Place on the east to Sloane Street on the west, and includes Belgrave, Chester, Lowndes, and Eaton Squares and Cadogan Place.

BRIDGES.—The bridges over the Thames (from East to West) are the Tower Bridge (built by the Corporation of London and opened in 1894), with its bascules, affording a fine view of the Pool and of the metropolis; London Bridge (opened after rebuilding in 1831, and until 1750 the only bridge over the Thames in London), with the Monument (q.v.) and Fishmongers' Hall; Southwark Bridge (opened in 1829, and rebuilt by the Corporation of London, 1901); St. Paul's Bridge (proposed to be built by the Corporation of London); Blackfriars Bridge (opened in 1869 and widened by the Corporation of London in 1908); width, 20 ft.; Waterloo Bridge (Kennie), width, 42 ft.; ans. (opened in 1827) commanding a fine view of western London (to be reconstructed or rebuilt by L.C.C.); Hungerford Bridge (for pedestrians only); Westminster Bridge (built in 1750 and then presenting a view that inspired Wordsworth's sonnet; rebuilt and reopened in 1862; width, 84 ft.) with Thomey-croft's Banister at the north-western end; this bridge leads from Westminster Abbey and the Houses of Parliament to the County Hall (q.v.) and St. Thomas's Hospital; Lambeth Bridge (rebuilt by L.C.C. and opened in 1922) leading from Lambeth Palace to Millbank; Vauxhall Bridge (rebuilt in 1905) leading to Kennington Oval; Victoria Bridge (1829); Chelsea, leading from Chelsea Hospital to Battersea Park, and Albert Bridge (1873); Battersea Bridge (opened in 1891); Wand- worth Bridge (opened in 1873); Putney Bridge (opened in 1886) where the Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race is started for Mortlake; Hammer-smith Bridge (rebuilt 1887); Barnes Bridge (for pedestrians only); Chiswick Bridge (opened in 1933); King Edward VII. Bridge, Kew (rebuilt in 1902), leading to the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew; Twickenham Lock Bridge; Twickenham Bridge (opened in 1933); Richmond Bridge (opened in 1777); Kingston Bridge and Hampton Court Bridge (opened in 1933).

BUCKINGHAM PALACE, St. James's Park, S.W. 1. (Not open to the public).—Was purchased by King George III. in 1762 from the Duke of Buckingham, and was altered by Nash for King George IV. The London home of the Sovereign since Queen Victoria's accession in 1837. Re-fronted in stone (part of the Queen Victoria Memorial) by Sir Aston Webb in 1913.

BURLINGTON HOUSE, Piccadilly, W. 1.—Occupied by Royal Academy of Arts (for annual exhibitions, see "Picture Galleries"); British Academy; Royal, Antiquarian, Astronomical, Linnean, Chemical and Geological Societies.

CANADA HOUSE, Trafalgar Square, S.W. 1.—A conspicuous building on the Western side of the Square, in which are the Offices of the High Commissioner of the Dominion and Officials dealing with Trade, Emigration, &c. Designed by Sir Robert Smirke in 1820, it was renovated and embellished when vacated by the Union Club. Certain interior features of the original building are preserved, and the spacious, richly furnished room now occupied by the High Commissioner is much admired. Surrounded by Offices of Canadian Agents-General, Banks, Steamship, Railway and other Dominion Companies, the Canadian Building is one of London's new landmarks. It was opened by H.M. King George V. in June, 1905.

CANONBURY TOWER, Canonbury, N. 1.—A social club for tenants of the Marquess of Northampton's estates in the vicinity (in the remains of the 16th century house of the Priors of St. Bartholomew). Contains the "Spencer" and "Compton" oak-panelled rooms. Other relics of Canonbury House can be seen in the vicinity.

CEMETERIES.—For Bunhill Fields, see p. 404. In Kensal Green Cemetery, North Kensington, W. 10 (70 acres), are tombs of W. M. Thackeray, Anthony Trollope, Sydney Smith, Shirley Brooks, Wilkie Collins, Tom Hood, W. Mulready, George Cruikshank, John Leech, Leigh Hunt, Brunel ("Great Eastern"), Ross (Arctic), Charles Kemble and Charles Matthews (Actors), Robert Owen (Social Reformer). In Highgate Cemetery, N. 6, are the tombs of George Eliot, Herbert Spencer, Michael Faraday, and G. J. Holyoake. In Abney Park Cemetery, Stoke Newington, N. 16, are the tomb of General Booth, founder of the Salvation Army, and memorials to many Nonconformist Divines. C. 4 (dating from early 15th century).—Grand Civic Hall, where Sovereigns and Princes are entertained, Freedoms conferred, and the great City functions take place; Offices and Council Chamber of the Corporation of the City of London (see p. 666). Admission free. The library contains Plan of London in 1570; Deed of Sale with Shakespeare's signature; first, second and fourth folios of Shakespeare's plays, &c., and (with Newspaper Room adjoining) is open free on week days, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Keeper of the Guildhall, G. W. Bodman (1922).

HOLBORN VIADUCT, E. C. 1, was constructed in 1867-1869 by order of the Corporation of the City of London from the designs of William Haywood, to carry the roadway over the valley of the Fleet river (the "Hole-bourne"). The Holborn Viaduct is 1,400 ft. long, and is mainly of brick with iron bridges over Farringdon Street and Shoe Lane. The cost (£1,575,000) was borne by the City of London, the loan raised for the purposes of the improvement being secured on the Coal and Corn dues; these dues were abolished in 1899 and 1902, and the loan is being otherwise discharged.

HONOURABLE ARTILLERY COMPANY'S HEAD QUARTERS, City Road, E. C. 1.—The H.A.C. (See Maj. G. Walker, D.S.O., M.C.) received its charter of incorporation from Henry VIII. in 1537, and has occupied its present ground since 1641. Four of its members—Duncan Keayne, Sedgwick, and Spencer—who emigrated in the seventeenth century, founded in 1638 the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, U.S.A. American soldiers and sailors may view the armory, on request.

HORSE GUARDS. Whitehall, S.W. 1.—Archway and offices built about 1750. The mounting of the guard (Life Guards, or Royal Horse Guards) at 11 a.m. (so a.m. on Sundays) and the dismounting at 4 p.m. are picturesque ceremonies. Only those on the Lord Chamberlain's list may drive through the gates and archway into Horse Guards Parade, (300,000 sq. ft.), where the Colour is "trooped" on the King's Birthday. (Trafalgar Square is 168,850 sq. ft.; Parliament Square, 136,900 sq. ft.; Leicester Square, 100,000 sq. ft.)

HOUSES OF PARLIAMENT. Westminster, S.W. 1.—The "Palace of Westminster" was re-built in 1840-1850 from the designs of Sir Charles Barry and Augustus Pugin, at a cost of £3,108,000.—Open to visitors on Saturdays, and on Easter and Whit Mondays and Tuesdays and August Bank Holiday if neither House be sitting. Admission at the Norman Porch, House of Lords, on the above-mentioned days, from 10 a.m. to 3.30 p.m. Admission to the Strangers' Gallery of the House of Commons, during session, by member's order, or order obtained on personal application at the Admission Order Office in St. Stephen's Hall. The Victoria Tower (House of Lords) is 336 ft. high, and when Parliament is sitting the Union Jack flies by day from its flagstaff. The Clock Tower of the House of Commons is 300 ft. high and contains "Big Ben" (13½ tons, named after Sir Benjamin Hall, First Commissioner of Works when it was hung in 1856. A light is displayed from this tower when Parliament is sitting.

INNS OF COURT.—The Inner and Middle Temple, S. of Fleet Street, E.C. 4, and N. of Victoria Embankment, to which the gardens extend, occupy (since early 14th century) the site of the buildings of the Order of Knights Templars, the Temple Church (q.v.) surviving. Middle Temple Hall is Elizabethan, and in Middle Temple Gardens Shakespeare (Henry VI, Pt. I) places the incident which led to the "Wars of the Roses" (1455-1485). Lincoln's Inn, from Chancery Lane to Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C. 2, occupies the site of the palace of a former Bishop of Winchester and of a Black Friars' monastery. It was founded early in the 14th century. The new Hall is modern, the Library is 15th century, and the old Hall early 16th century. The Chapel (Inigo Jones) early 17th century. Lincoln's Inn Fields (7 acres): the Square contains many fine old houses with handsome interiors. Gray's Inn, Gray's Inn Road, W.C. 1, was founded in late 14th century. The Hall is 16th century (the "Comedy of Errors" was performed there in 1594); the Gardens were laid out (according to tradition) by Lord Chancellor Bacon (died 1626). No other "Inns" are active, but Staple Inn is worth visiting as a relic of Elizabethan London; it has a picturesque gabled front on Holborn (opposite Gray's Inn Road), and the Hall, with hammer beam roof, is intact. Clement's Inn (near St. Clement Dane's Church); Clifford's Inn, Fleet Street, and Thavies Inn, Holborn Circus. Serjeants' Inn, Fleet Street, and another (now demolished) of the same name in Chancery Lane, were composed of Serjeants-at-Law, the last of whom died in 1922.

KENSINGTON PALACE, W. 8.—Enlarged by Christopher Wren for King William III. (1697), and continued as a royal residence until 1760. The birthplace of Queen Victoria in 1819. Open on Saturdays and Sundays (March-Sept. 2 to 6; Oct. 2 to 5, Nov.-Feb. 2 to 4). Kensington Gardens (q.v.) adjoin.

LAMBETH PALACE, S.E. 1.—The official residence of the Archbishop of Canterbury, on south bank of Thames; the oldest part is 13th century, the house itself is early 19th century. For leave to visit the historical portions, applications should be made by letter to the Archbishop's Secretary.

LAW COURTS. Strand, W.C. 2.—The Royal Courts of Justice were erected from the designs of G. E. Street (completed by Sir A. Blomfield and A. E. Street) in 1874-1882 at a cost of £1,000,000 (the site cost £1,500,000 in addition). Until they were occupied by the Supreme Court of Judicature (established in 1873 by the fusion of High Court, Chancery, Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, Exchequer, Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty) the Courts met in Westminster Hall (q.v.). The Central Hall is 136 ft. long.

LITTLE BRITAIN, Smithfield, E.C. 1.—Benjamin Franklin lived in Little Britain on his first coming to London. It was then a centre of the bookselling and printing trade, and Franklin is reputed to have set type in the works which extended into the Lady Chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church (q.v.).

LIVERY COMPANIES' HALLS.—The Principal Companies (see p. 672) have magnificent halls, but admission to view them has generally to be arranged beforehand.

LONDON MONUMENT (commonly called "The Monument"), Pudding Lane, Eastcheap, E.C. 3.—Built from designs of Wren, 1671-1677, to commemorate the Great Fire of London, which broke out in Pudding Lane, Sept. 2, 1666. The fluted Doric column is 202 feet high (the flames of fire 42 feet in addition), and is based on a square plinth, with fine carvings on W. face. Splendid views of London from gallery at top of column. Admission 3d., 9 to 6 (Oct.-April to 4).

LONDON UNIVERSITY.—Administrative buildings, hall, union, &c., will be erected on 20 acre site in Bloomsbury. Foundation stone will probably be laid early in 1933. Office accommodation is at present afforded in the Imperial Institute Buildings, South Kensington.

LORD'S CRICKET GROUND. St. John's Wood Road, N.W. 8.—The headquarters (since 1814) of the Marylebone Cricket Club, the premier cricket club in England and the governing body of cricket, the scene of some of the principal matches of the season and Middlesex County headquarters. Admission to ordinary matches 12s., to special matches 2s. or 3s. (including tax). The public can obtain reserved seats on payment. Tennis Court in building behind members' pavilion, where interesting games are played.

MANSION HOUSE, City, E.C. 4.—(Reconstructed 1930-31). The official residence of the Lord Mayor; the Egyptian Hall and Ballroom are the chief attractions. Admission by order from the Lord Mayor's Secretary.

MARKETS.—The London markets (administered by the Corporation of the City of London) provide foodstuffs for 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 people. The dead meat market at Smithfield is the largest in the world, the supplies marketed amounting to nearly 300,000 tons annually. Central Meat, Fish, Fruit, Vegetable, and Poultry Markets, Smithfield; Leadenhall Market (Meat and Poultry); Billingsgate (Fish), Thames Street; Spitalfields, E. 1 (Vegetables, Fruit, &c.), enlarged 1928, and opened by H.M. the Queen; London Fruit Exchange, Brushfield Street (built by Corporation of London 1788-9) faces Spitalfields Market; Metropolitan Cattle Market (Mon. and Th. General or Pedlars' Market, Tu. and Fri.) and Abattoirs, Caledonian Road, N.1. Other markets are—Covent Garden, W.C.1 (established under a charter of Charles II. in 1662) and Borough Market, S.E.1, for Vegetables, Fruit, Flowers, &c. MARLBOROUGH HOUSE, Pall Mall, S.W.1. (Not open to the public).—Built by Wren for the great Duke of Marlborough about 1720, and purchased as a London residence for the Prince of Wales in 1863.

MAYFAIR.—A fashionable district of London, north of Buckingham Palace and east of Hyde Park, extends from Oxford Street (N.) to Piccadilly (S.), and from Bond Street (E.) to Park Lane (W.), includes Curzon Street and Grosvenor and Berkeley Squares. The most fashionable shopping centres of London are included in Mayfair in Old and New Bond Street and Oxford Street. Regent Street almost adjoins Mayfair.

MONUMENTS.—VICTORIA MEMORIAL in front of Buckingham Palace; ALBERT MEMORIAL, South Kensington; AIR, Victoria Embankment; BEAUCONSFIELD, Parliament Square; BELGIAN, Victoria Embankment; BOADICEA (more correctly "Boudicca"), Queen of the Iceni, E. PATENT OFFICE (including PUBLIC LIBRARY), 25 Southampton Buildings, W.C.1.—In 1932, the Patent Office sealed 21,150 patents and registered 19,887 designs and 6,000 trade marks. The library (252,600 volumes) is open to the public daily from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

PEOPLE'S PALACE, Mile End Road, E.1.—The Queen's Hall was destroyed by fire on February 25, 1932, and no decision has yet been arrived at as to rebuilding. Small Hall—Dances and concerts. Social clubs, hard tennis courts, Badminton courts and indoor cricket pitches. Hall can be hired.

PORT OF LONDON.—The Port of London comprises the tidal portion of the River Thames from Teddington to the sea, a distance of 69 miles and five dock systems covering an area of 4,203 acres, of which 722 acres are water. The governing body is the Port of London Authority (see pp. 315-6) whose Head Offices in Trinity Square, E.C.3, were designed by Sir Edwin Cooper, A.R.A., F.R.I.B.A. The value of the overseas trade of the Port, including transshipments under bond in 1932 was £505,189,000 and represents over one-third of the overseas trade of the United Kingdom. Particulars of the docks are as follows:—London & St. Katharine Docks, E.1.—Area 123½ acres including 45 acres water. Chief commodities handled are Wool, Ivory, Spices, Shells, Tea, Rubber, Wine, Marble, Canned Goods, Hides, Perfumes, &c., and general cargo from Continental and coastwise ports. Surrey Commercial Docks, S.E.16.—Area 381 acres, including 133 acres water. The chief centre of the London and Provincial Softwood Trade. Also handles Grain, Canadian Dairy Produce, &c. West India & Millwall Docks, E.14.—Area 473 acres including 133½ acres water. Principal commodities handled are Rum, Sugar, Grain, Hardwood, Fruit, Plywood and Wood pulp. In Millwall Dock a special feature is the Granary. East India Dock, E.14.—Area 67½ acres including 31½ acres water. Centre of South African and West India Trade. Special equipment for handling bananas. Royal Victoria & Albert & King George V. Docks, E.16.—Area 1,102½ acres including 246 acres water—have special facilities for handling Frozen and Chilled Meat, Grain, Tobacco. Large quantities of Wool, Fruit, Dairy Produce and general cargo are also dealt with. The King George V. Dock, opened in 1922, provides accommodation for vessels up to 30,000 tons. Tilbury Docks, Essex.—Area 675 acres, including 104½ acres water. These docks are 26 miles below London Bridge and are used principally by vessels plying on the Australian, Indian and other Eastern routes. The Cargo Jetty in the River at Tilbury is available for vessels to discharge or load part cargoes. Tilbury Passenger Landing Stage provides accommodation for liners at all states of the tide and adjoins Tilbury Riverside Station, giving direct rail connexion with London, the Midlands and the North.

POST OFFICE.—The "General Post Office" is in King Edward Street, E.C.1, a handsomely fronted, ferro-concrete building (Tanner), with marble inlaid hall, opened in 1920. The public Hall is open for usual postal business from 6.45 a.m. to 9 p.m. (Sat. 8 p.m.). In the neighbourhood are G.P.O. North and G.P.O. West (the Central Telegraph Office).

PRINCE HENRY'S ROOM, 17, Fleet Street, E.C.4 (bought by the L.C.C. in 1920, and open free to 4 or 5) is in a timbered 17th century house, and contains a Jacobean plaster ceiling and Jacobean and Georgian panelling. (Available for lettings—Apply Architect, County Hall S.E.1.)

ROMAN LONDON.—Visible remains of the Roman city are now very few. The most striking is a fine piece of the city wall, including an angle bastion, beneath the pavement of the yard of the General Post Office at Giltspur Street. Other portions of this three mile wall which encircled the city may be seen at Roman Wall House, Crutched Friars, and near the White Tower of the Tower of London. The fragments showing in the churchyards of Cripplegate, Saint Alphage, London Wall, and All Hallows, London Wall, are mediæval reconstructions, the actual Roman masonry of the lower portion being here concealed beneath the soil. Recent excavations in Jewry Street, where the wall crossed the bed of a small stream, give good grounds for supposing that it was built about 75 to 85 A.D. In the basement of the Coal Exchange of Lower Thames Street are the remains of a hypocaust, perhaps once forming part of public baths. The governmental headquarters of the town were a great basilica, more than 400 feet long from east to west, the massive walls of which have been encountered, extending from Lendenhall Market across Gracechurch Street as far as St. Michael's, Cornhill. Excavations during the past few years have shown that the river front was embanked in Roman times with a construction of huge oaken timbers for a considerable distance both east and west of the present London Bridge. Many relics of Roman London may be seen in the Guildhall, British and London Museums (q.v.).

ROYAL EXCHANGE, Cornhill, E.C. 3, founded by Sir Thomas Gresham, 1566, opened by Queen Elizabeth 1571, rebuilt 1667-9 and 1842-1844.—Admission free. Statues of Queen Elizabeth, Charles II., Queen Victoria, Sir Thomas Gresham, Wellington (Chantry), riding without stirrups, Peabody, and others; frescoes in the ambulatory by Leighton, Abbey, Brangwyn, Wyllie, and others. The chimes of the Royal Exchange (re-cast 1921) play English, Scottish and Irish melodies at 9 a.m., 12 noon, and 3 and 6 p.m. With the exception of the ambulatory practically the whole of the building is now occupied by the Royal Exchange Assurance, which has had its head office there since 1720.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY, Kensington Gore, S.W. 7.—Map Room open to public, free.

ROYAL MINT, Tower Hill, E.C. 3 (building erected 1820), where gold, silver, and bronze are coined. Admission by order only, application for which should be made to the Deputy Master of the Mint, about 4 weeks in advance of intended visit. Hours of admission, 10 to 3 Mon. to Fri., except Bank Holidays, &c., when the Mint is closed.

ST. JAMES'S PALACE, in Pall Mall, S.W. 1.—(Not open to the public). Built by Henry VIII. (according to tradition, from designs by Holbein); the Gatehouse and Presence Chamber remain, and part of the Chapel Royal. A royal residence from 1608 to 1837. Royal Levees held here during the season. Representatives of Foreign Powers are still accredited "to the Court of St. James's," and (by the King's permission) the Conference of the Allies was held there in February, 1921.

ST. JOHN'S GATE, Clerkenwell, E.C. 1.—Now the Chancery of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, and formerly the gate of the Priory of that Order, of which the gate house (early 16th century) and choir of Church (crypt 12th century) alone survive. The gatehouse may be inspected by written permission of the Secretary at the Chancery.

SMITHFIELD, E.C. 1.—Sir William Wallace was executed there (1305) in the reign of Edward I., and Wat Tyler was "despatched" by Lord Mayor of Waltham (1381) in the reign of Richard II. Anne Askew, a Protestant martyr (1546), was burned there in the reign of Henry VIII.; and under Mary I. (1553-1558) many suffered there for the Protestant faith. (A memorial is affixed to the W. wall of St. Bartholomew's Hospital.) The last to suffer for religion at Smithfield was Bartholomew Leggett, Unitarian (1621), in the reign of James I. At the corner of Cock Lane (W. side of West Smithfield) is a small gilt figure commemorating the spot where the Fire of London was finally checked by the demolition of houses, Sept. 6, 1666.

SOMERSET HOUSE, Strand, W.C. 2, and Victoria Embankment, W.C. 2.—The beautiful river façade (600 feet long) was built at the close of the 18th century from the designs of Sir W. Chambers; the remainder of the building is early 19th century. Somerset House was the property of Lord Protector Somerset, at whose attainder in 1552 the palace passed to the Crown, and it was a royal residence until about the close of the 17th century. The building is now occupied by the Board of Inland Revenue and by the Principal Probate Registry and the office of the Registrar-General of Births, Marriages and Deaths. In the Probate Registry (Central Hall) are the wills (inter alia) of Shakespeare, Milton, Newton, Van Dyck, Pitt, Dr. Johnson, Nelson, Wellington and Burke.

SOUTH AFRICA HOUSE, Trafalgar Square, W.C. 2.—A conspicuous building on the east side of Trafalgar Square erected from the design of Sir Herbert Baker and opened by H.M. King George V. (June 22, 1933). The London headquarters of the Union of South Africa, Offices of the High Commissioner, with general enquiry offices, exhibition, halls, travel bureau, reading-room, cinema, &c.

STOCK EXCHANGE, E.C. 2. (Strangers not admitted).—Known in the City as the "House," was founded in 1773 and now consists of about 4,000 members. A dealer ("jobber") does business only with other members; a "broker" is the intermediary with the public. Speculators for a rise in prices are "bulls"; those for a fall are "bears." Chairman of the Committee for General Purposes, Sir Archibald Henry Campbell; Deputy Chairman, Robert B. Pearson; Secretary, General Purposes Committee, A. L. F. Green; Secretary, Trustees and Managers, R. M. Brydone; Office, 23, Throgmorton St., E.C. 2.

THAMES EMBANKMENTS.—The Victoria Embankment, on the N. side (from Westminster to Blackfriars), was constructed by Sir J. W. Bazalgette for the Metropolitan Board of Works, 1864-1870 (the seats, of which the supports of some are a kneeling camel, laden with spicery, and of others a winged sphinx, were presented by the Grocers' Company, and by Rt. Hon. W. H. Smith, M.P., in 1874); the Albert Embankment on the S. side (from Westminster Bridge to Vauxhall), 1866-1869; the Chelsea Embankment, 1871-1874. The total cost exceeded £2,000,000. Sir J. W.

* The "Sword of St. Paul" appears in the 2nd quarter of the City Arms, not "Walworth's dagger" as once commonly believed, an error still repeated in an inscription in Falmington's Hall.

Basilgette (1859-1891) also inaugurated the London main drainage system, 1858-1865. A medallion has been placed on a pier of the Victoria Embankment to commemorate the engineer of the Thames waterside improvements ("Plumini vincula posuit"). The County Hall of the L.C.C. includes an embankment on the Surrey side.

THAMES TUNNELS.—The Rotherhithe Tunnel (foot passengers and vehicles), constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1908, connects Commercial Road East, with Lower Road, Rotherhithe; the total length is 1 mile 332 yards, of which 474 yards are under the river. The cost of the tunnel and its approaches was £1,583,173. The Blackwall Tunnel (foot passengers and vehicles) was constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1897, connects East India Dock Road, Poplar, with Blackwall Lane, East Greenwich. The total length of the tunnel is 1 mile 276 yards, of which 407 yds. are under the river. The cost of the tunnel with its approaches was about £1,328,592. Greenwich Tunnel (foot passengers only) constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1902, connects the Isle of Dogs, Poplar, with Greenwich. The length of the subway is 406 yards, and the cost was about £180,000. The Woodwich Tunnel (foot passengers only), constructed by the L.C.C. and opened in 1912, connects North and South Woolwich below the passenger and vehicular ferry from North Woolwich Station, E. 16, to High Street, Woolwich, S.E. 18. The length of the subway is 528 yards, and its cost was about £86,000. The Thames Tunnel (2300 feet) was opened in 1843 to connect Wapping (N.) with Rotherhithe (S.). In 1866 it was closed to the public, and purchased by the East London Railway Company. The Tower Subway for foot passengers was opened in 1870, and has long been closed.

TOWER HILL, E.C. 3 and E.C. 3, was formerly the place of execution for condemned prisoners from the Tower, the site of the scaffold being marked in the gardens of Trinity Square.

TOWER OF LONDON, E.C. 3 (built by William the Conqueror, A.D. 1066-1087).—Admission to Jewel House, on all week days, 6d.; White Tower and Armouries, including Vault, 6d.; to Bloody Tower, on all week days, 6d. Free on Saturdays (except Jewel House and Bloody Tower) by tickets issued at the office at gateway. Open from 1 May to 30 Sept., 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.; 1 Oct. to 30 April, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Not open on Good Friday, Christmas Day, or Sunday. Constable, Field Marshal Lord Milne, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., D.S.O., D.C.L., LL.D.; Lieutenant, Lt.-Gen. H. H. S. Knox, C.B., D.S.O.; Major and Resident Governor, Lt.-Col. W. F. O. Fawcett, D.S.O.; Keeper of the Jewel House, Major-Gen. Sir George J. Younghusband, K.C.M.G., K.C.I.E., C.B.; Curator of the Armouries, Charles Houliker, F.S.A. The Yeoman Warders retain their picturesque Tudor uniforms. During the Great War the use of the Tower as a prison was revived. Sir William Wallace, King David II. and King James I. of Scotland, the "Little Princes" (Edward V. and his brother), Anne Boleyn, Katherine Howard, Lady Jane Grey, Queen Elizabeth, Sir Walter Raleigh, William Penn, Cranmer, Ridley and Latimer and many others were imprisoned in the Tower.

TRAFALGAR SQUARE, S.W. 1.—This space was laid out in the second quarter of the 19th century. In the Square are the Nelson Monument 124 feet high, with Landseer's lions round the base.

WESTMINSTER HALL, S.W. 1 (built by William Rufus, A.D. 1097-1100 and altered by Richard II., 1377-1399), adjacent to and incorporated in the Houses of Parliament.—Westminster Hall is part of the Palace of Westminster and survived the fire, which destroyed the remainder of the Palace (Oct. 16, 1834). The Hall is 200 feet long, 68 feet wide, and 90 feet high. The hammer beam roof of carved oak, dating from 1399, is one of the principal attractions. King Charles I. was tried in the Hall. For admission, see regulations as to Houses of Parliament.

WHITEHALL, opposite Horse Guards, S.W. 1.—Erected by Inigo Jones as a banqueting-house for the projected Whitehall Palace. King Charles I. was beheaded here.

ENVIRONS OF LONDON.

BARNET AND HADLEY GREEN.—Scene of Battle, A.D. 1471. Hadley Woods.

BROOKLANDS, Weybridge.—Motor and motor-cycle races.

BURNHAM BEECHES AND FLEET WOOD, Bucks.—Magnificent sylvan scenery (125 acres), purchased by the Corporation of London for the benefit of the public in 1879; Fleet Wood (65 acres) presented in 1921. During summer omnibus runs daily, Sundays included, from Slough Station, G.W.R., passing within 250 yards of "Gray's Elegy" Church, see "Stoke Poges."

BUSHY PARK (1,100 acres).—Adjoining Hampton Court, contains many fine trees and avenue of horse-chestnuts enclosed in a fourfold avenue of limes, planted by King William III. "Chestnut Sunday" (when the trees are in full bloom with their "candles") is usually about 1st to 15th May. A herd of tame deer is maintained.

CHEQUERS, a country residence for Prime Ministers (from Jan. 1, 1921), was presented to the Nation (with an endowment to maintain the estate, &c.) by Lord and Lady Lee of Fareham, as the official country residence for the Prime Minister of the day, and the gift was approved by Parliament in the Chequers Estate Act, 1927. In 1921 the Chequers Estate of 200 acres was added to the gift by Lord Lee. Chequers is a Tudor mansion in the Chilterns, about 3 miles from Princes Risborough, Bucks, and contains a collection of Cromwellian portraits and relics.

CHILTERN HUNDREDS (Stoke, Burnham and Desborough, in Buckinghamshire).—No duly selected member of the Commons can resign his seat; he must apply for some office of profit under the Crown, and so vacate his seat under the Act of Settlement, 1707 (6 Anne, c. 7), and the usual practice is to apply for the Stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds, or of the Manor of Poyning, or Northstead, or the Escheatorship of Munster, whereupon the seat is declared vacant (under the Place Act of 1742, which expressly permitted acceptance of such offices to serve as an excuse for resignation) and a new writ is issued by the Speaker.

CUFFLEY, Herts.—Memorial to Capt. W. L. Robinson, 17th, on spot above which the first German Zeppelin (L 12) was destroyed.

DARWIN AND DOWN HOUSE, Downe, Farnborough Kent.—Where Charles Darwin thought and worked for 40 years and died in 1882. Maintained by the British Association. Open free daily (except Good Friday and Christmas Day) 10 to 6, April to Sept., and 11 to 4 Oct. to March.

DULWICH, S.E. 21 (5 miles from London) contains Dulwich College (founded by Edward Alleyn in 1559), Dulwich Picture Gallery, built by Sir John Soane to house the collection bequeathed by the artist, Sir Francis Bourgeois (open free daily, 10 to 4, 5, or 6, and on Sunday afternoons during the Summer), the Hornerian Museum (see p. 310), and Dulwich Park (72 acres). In Dulwich Village the rural characteristics of the pre-suburban period are preserved.

ELTHAM, Kent (10 miles from London by Southern Ry.). Remains of 13th-15th century Eltham Palace, the birthplace of John of Eltham (1316), son of Edward II. The hall, built by Edward IV., contains fine hammer-beam roof of chestnut. In the churchyard of St. John the Baptist is the tomb of Thomas Doggett, the comedian and founder of the Thames Watermen's championship.

ENFIELD, Middlesex (10 miles from London by L.N.E. Ry.). Parish Church contains well-preserved brasses and monuments.

ENFIELD LOCK, Middlesex. Royal Small Arms Factory may be visited by appointment (intending visitors must be British subjects and should apply beforehand by letter).

EPPING FOREST (5,655 acres, originally purchased by the Corporation of London for £250,000 and thrown open to the public in 1882; the present forest is 22 miles long by 1 to 2 miles wide, about one-tenth of its original area; in recent years the deer in the forest have averaged 120). LOUGHTON, BUCKHURST HILL, CHINGFORD, HIGH BEECH, on L. & N.E. Railway. Beautiful forest scenery.

ETON COLLEGE.—22 miles from London. The most famous of English schools, founded by Henry VI. in 1440, the scholars numbering 1,155 in Sept. 1933. Buildings date from 1445.

GRAVESEND, a borough and river port, 22 miles from London (Southern Ry.). A favourite resort for Londoners. St. George's Church (1797) contains memorials to Princess Pocahontas, who was buried in the former church in 1657.

GREENWICH, S.E. 10.—A south-eastern metropolitan borough (see p. 667) with a frontage of 4½ miles on the Thames. Greenwich Hospital (since 1879, the Royal Naval College) was built by Charles II., from designs by Inigo Jones, and by Queen Anne and William III., from designs by Wren, on the site of an ancient royal palace of the more recent Placentia, an enlarged sketch of the palace, constructed by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester (1391-1447), son of Henry IV.

HENRY VIII., Queen Mary I. and Queen Elizabeth were born in the Royal Palace (which reverted to the Crown in 1447) and King Edward VI. died there. The Painted Hall of Greenwich Hospital (Thornhill), Nelson Relics, &c., open on week-days (except Friday) from 10 (and on Sundays from 2) till 4 or 6, according to time of year. In the principal quadrangle is a marble statue of George II., by Rysbrack. Naval Museum, interesting Collection of Models, &c., open daily, except Friday and Sunday, from 10 till 4 or 6; admission 6d. per person (except Sundays and Bank Holidays)—bona fide parties of 20 or more, 3d. per person. Chapel open daily except Sundays and Fridays, and after 4 p.m. on Saturdays. Greenwich Park (188 acres) was enclosed by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, and laid out by Charles II., from the designs of Le Notre. On a hill in Greenwich Park is Greenwich Observatory (founded 1675), the zero meridian of longitude and of "Greenwich Time." Admission to the Observatory (children excluded) only by permission of the Astronomer Royal. The parish church of Greenwich (St. Alfege) was rebuilt by Hawksmoor (Wren's pupil) in 1728, and contains a pulpit and other carvings attributed to Grinling Gibbons. General Wolfe (Heights of Abraham) and Tallis ("the father of Church Music") are buried in the church. Henry VIII. was christened in the former church. The Ministerial Whitebait Dinner, at the "Ship" Hotel, was last held in 1894.

HAMPTON COURT.—Sixteenth century Palace built by Cardinal Wolsey, with additions by Sir Christopher Wren for William and Mary, 15 miles from London. Fine view of river. Beautiful gardens with maze and prolific grape vine (planted in 1568). Old Royal Apartments and collection of pictures. Tennis Court, built by King Henry VIII. in 1530. The State Apartments and Great Hall are open every week-day from 10 a.m., and on Sundays from 2 p.m. Hours of closing, May to Sept. 6 p.m.; March, April and Oct. 5 p.m.; Nov., Dec., Jan. and Feb. 4 p.m. Admission, Mon., Tues., Wed., Thurs. and Fri., 1s.; Sat., 6d. (children half price). Admission to the Tudor Kitchen, Wine Cellars and Great Hall cellars, 3d. (inclusive charge), no half-price. Sun. and Bank Holidays, free. Tickets obtainable at the King's Staircase. Bushy Park adjoins the Lion Gates of Hampton Court Palace.

HARROW-ON-THE-HILL.—10 miles by Metropolitan and other railways. Large public school (about 650 scholars), founded by John Lyon in 1572. The "Fourth Form Room" dates from 1608.

JORDANS AND CHALFONT ST. GILES, near Beaconsfield, Bucks, contain the Old Quaker Meeting House (1688) at Jordans, in the burial ground of which lies William Penn (Pennsylvania); a barn in the farm ground is believed to have been built out of the timbers of the Mayflower by the 17th century owner of Jordans (Gardener). At Chalfont St. Giles is the cottage where Milton lived during the Great Plague (1665-1666).

KINGSTON-UPON-THAMES, Surrey (about 12 miles from London), is the ancient place of coronation of the Kings of Saxo England. The Coronation Stone (hence the name "King's Stone") is preserved within railings in the market place.

RICHMUND, Surrey, contains the red brick Palace of Richmond (Henry VII., 1494-1501) and buildings of the Jacobean, Queen Anne, and early Georgian periods, including White Lodge in Richmond Park, the home of Queen Mary's mother (the Prince of Wales was born there June 23, 1564). The Star and Garter Home for Disabled Soldiers, Sailors, and Airmen (the Women's Memorial of the Great War) was opened by Queen Mary in 1904. Richmond Park (8,358 acres) contains herds of fallow and red deer. From the Terrace Gardens, Richmond Hill, can be obtained a wonderful view of the Valley of the Thames.

RUNNEMEDE.—A meadow of about 100 acres, on S. bank of Thames (part of the Crown Lands), between Windsor and Staines. From June 15-23, 1215, the hostile Barons encamped on this meadow during negotiations with King John, who rode over each day from Windsor. The 48 "Articles of the Barons" were accepted by the King on June 15, and were subsequently embodied in a charter, since known as Magna Carta, of which several copies were sealed on June 19. About half a mile N.E. of the meadow is Magna Carta Island (claimed as the actual site of the sealing) presented to the Nation in 1930 by Lady Fairhaven and her sons.

RYE HOUSE, at Hoddeston, on the River Lee. Scene of the celebrated plot. Old castle and dungeons, pictures, oak fireplaces, chests and panels; Queen Elizabeth's bed. The Great Bed of Ware (mentioned in "Twelfth Night"), formerly at Rye House, is now at the Victoria and Albert Museum.

ST. ALBANS.—A city in Hertfordshire, on the river Ver, 22 miles N.W. of London. The abbey church, built partly of materials from the old Roman city of Verulamium by Paul of Caen, was consecrated in 1125. Parts still remain of the Norman structure. The city was the scene of the overthrow of Henry VI. in 1455, and of the Earl of Warwick in 1461. On a printing press set up in the abbey the first English translation of the Bible was printed. Ruins of ancient City of Verulam; St. Michael's Church, with tomb of Lord Bacon.

STOKE POGES (2 miles from Slough station on G.W. Ry.) contains the 14th century church with the Churchyard of Gray's "Elegy" and "Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College." The poet was buried in the church in 1771.

WALTHAM ABBEY (or WALTHAM HOLY CROSS), 23 miles from London (L.N.E. Ry.).—The Abbey ruins, Harold's Bridge (11th century), the Nave of the former cruciform Abbey Church (the oldest Norman building in England (consecrated May 3, 1060) and the traditional burial place of King Harold II., 1066) and a Lady Chapel of Edward II., with crypt below. New evidence of the position and style of several buildings, which once stood on the site of the Augustinian monastery, were revealed by the prolonged drought in the summer of 1933. At Waltham Cross, 1 mile from the Abbey, is one of the crosses (partly restored) erected by Edward I. to mark a resting place of the corpse of Queen Eleanor on its way to Westminster Abbey. (Ten crosses were erected, but only those at Geddington, Northampton and Waltham remain; "Charing" Cross originally stood on the spot now occupied by the statue of Charles I. at Whitehall.)

WINDSOR CASTLE (begun by William the Conqueror, A.D. 1066-1087).—22 miles from London, by Great Western and Southern Railways. When the Court is not in residence, the State Apartments of Windsor Castle are generally open to the public, during His Majesty's pleasure, on every week-day except Friday. The charges for admission are: Adults, 1s.; children, 6d. On Bank Holidays half the usual fees are charged; by the King's command, the proceeds to go to local charities. An authorised guide book can be obtained at the office, price 6d. The hours of admission to the State Apartments are from 1 April to 30 June, and 1 to 31 Oct. between 11 and 4; 1 July to 30 Sept., 11 to 5; and from 1 Nov. to 31 March, between 11 and 3. The Queen's Dolls' House is open on the same days and hours as the State Apartments, admission 6d. each person. The Albert Memorial Chapel is open on the same days and at the same hours as the State Apartments (except between 1 and 2 p.m.); the Round Tower or Keep is open from 1 April–30 Sept. the same days and hours as the State Apartments. The royal stables and riding school may be viewed daily between the hours of 1 and 3. St. George's Chapel may be viewed on week-days (Fridays excepted), between 11 a.m. and 4 p.m.

WOOLWICH.—5 miles from London; (Southern Railway), Dockyard and Arsenal Station for Barracks, Rotunda, &c. Old Dockyard; Extensive Barracks for Royal Artillery, Royal Army Service Corps, &c. Common for military evolutions. For Rotunda Museum, see p. 311.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.—The fares by Taximeter Motor Cabs are based upon a combination of time and distance. When the cab is kept waiting, delayed by traffic, or caused to travel at the rate of less than 15 miles an hour, then the charge is by time. When travelling at a speed of 15 or more miles an hour, then the charge is by distance. Fares for horse-drawn cabs are according to distance or time, at the option of the hirer, expressed at the commencement of the hiring; if not otherwise expressed, the fare to be paid according to distance; but driver can refuse to be hired by time between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m.

DRIVER. If hired by distance, is not compelled to drive more than six miles, nor more than one hour if hired by time; further, if hired by time, the driver may be required to drive at any rate not exceeding four miles an hour; if required to drive more than four miles within the hour he may demand, in addition to the fare regulated by time, for every mile or any part exceeding four miles, the fare regulated by distance.

AGREEMENT to pay more than legal fare is not binding. If the driver agree beforehand to take any sum less than the proper fare, the penalty for demanding more than the sum agreed upon is 40s.

Driver may demand a reasonable sum as a deposit from persons hiring and requiring him to wait at any place, over and above the fare to which the driver is entitled for driving thither. Penalty 40s., if driver, having received such deposit, refuse to wait, or go away before the expiration of the time for which the deposit shall be a sufficient compensation; or if the driver shall refuse to account for such deposit.

The London Cab Act, 1896, enacts that if any person hires a cab, knowing, or having reason to believe, he cannot pay the fare; or, fraudulently endeavours to avoid payment of a fare; or, having failed, or refused, to pay a fare, refuses, or gives a false address, is liable, in addition to the fare, to a penalty of 40s.

All property left in any cab shall be deposited by the driver at any Police Station within twenty-four hours, if not sooner claimed by the owner; such property to be returned to the person who shall prove to the satisfaction of the Commissioner of Police that the same belonged to him, on payment of all expenses incurred, and of such sum to the driver as the Secretary of State has by order prescribed.

All inquiries, &c., relating to cabs and cab drivers should be addressed to the Public Carriage Office, 109, Lambeth Road, S.E.; but inquiries as to property left in a cab should be made at the Lost Property Office (see p. 484).

CAB DRIVERS before obtaining a licence are required to pass an examination as to their ability to drive, and, in addition, have to pass an examination as to their knowledge of town. It extends to a knowledge of the principal squares, clubs, hospitals, hotels, theatres, streets, and public buildings in London. During 1932, 588 applicants for cab drivers' licences passed the examination as to knowledge of London and its environs. 18,346 separate examinations were held.

LOST PROPERTY.

Of lost property, 171,548 articles were deposited, of which 60,546 were claimed by the owners. The number of awards paid to drivers, &c., was 50,822.

Enquiries as to property left in a cab should be made at the Lost Property Office, 109, Lambeth Road, S.E. 1. Office hours, 10 to 4 (Saturdays, 10 to 1). The office is not open on Sundays, Good Friday, Christmas Day and Bank Holidays. For property left in a motor coach, enquiry should be made at the office of the coach company concerned. For property left in a London omnibus, tramcar or trolley vehicle, enquiry should be made at the Lost Property Office of the London Passenger Transport Board, 200-202, Baker Street, W. 1.

· LIGHTING-UP TIME.

By the Road Transport Lighting Act, 1927 (17 and 18 Geo. 5, ch. 37) "every vehicle on any road shall during the hours of darkness carry—

- (a) two lamps, each showing to the front a white light visible from a reasonable distance;
- (b) one lamp showing to the rear a red light visible from a reasonable distance; and every such lamp shall, while the vehicle is on any road during such hours as aforesaid, be kept properly trimmed, lighted and in efficient condition, and shall be attached to the vehicle in such position and manner as the Minister (of Transport) may by regulations prescribe.

It shall be the duty of any person who causes or permits a vehicle to be on any road during the hours of darkness to provide the vehicle with lamps in accordance with the requirements of this Act and of any regulations made thereunder." (Sec. 1 (1).)

(Regulations have been made and are contained in S.R. & O. No. 723 of 1929.)

Whole or partial exemption may be given to vehicles used for naval, military or air force purposes (Sec. 1 (3) (b)); vehicles carrying inflammable or explosive goods of a nature specified in the regulations; vehicles when standing on places specially set aside for the purpose; vehicles drawn or propelled by hand, save as provided (Sec. 1 (a)).

The Minister may by regulation require or permit, on conditions, distinctive lamps to be carried displaying coloured lights on vehicles used as Hackney Carriages or public service vehicles or vehicles used for naval, military, or air force, or police purposes, or as ambulances.

The "hours of darkness" are defined thus:—

- (a) As respects the period of summer time, the time between one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise.
- (b) As respects the remainder of the year the time between half an hour after sunset and half an hour before sunrise.

Bicycles (pedal and mechanical solo), pedal tricycles, and invalid carriages, require a single white light to the front.

Pedal bicycles and tricycles need not show a red light to the rear if they have attached an unobscured and efficient red reflector.

Pedal bicycles and tricycles and solo motor cycles need not carry a lamp if being wheeled by a person on foot as near as possible to the rear or left hand edge of the carriage way.

Horse Vehicles.—A separate lamp showing a red light to the rear shall not be required to be carried if the lamps showing a light to the front also show a red light to the rear visible from a reasonable distance and no part of the vehicle or load extends more than 6 feet behind such lamps.

Any vehicle carrying a load overhanging laterally more than 12 inches from the centre of the nearest side lamp must have either an additional lamp on the sides where the load overhangs or the position of the one lamp must be such that no part of the load projects outwards more than 12 inches beyond a vertical line drawn through the centre of the substituted or additional lamp.

On any vehicle carrying a load more than 6 feet behind any lamp showing a red light to the rear carried in accordance with the Act, an additional or substituted lamp shall be carried so that such load shall not project more than 6 feet beyond such additional or substituted lamp.

Certain vehicles engaged in agriculture are exempt from carrying lamps.

ON TOW.

There are special provisions as to vehicles towing and being towed. A lamp showing a red light need not be carried by the drawing vehicle; no lamp showing a light to the front need be carried on any vehicle being drawn; a lamp showing a red light need not be carried on any vehicle being drawn except the rearmost vehicle. Provided—if the distance between any such vehicles exceeds 5 feet, each vehicle shall be required to carry the same lamps as if it were not a drawing vehicle or a vehicle being drawn, and if a drawn vehicle carries a load that projects laterally more than 12 inches beyond the outermost of the lamps showing a white light to the front, an additional lamp shall be carried on the projecting load so that no part projects more than 12 inches beyond a vertical line through the centre of such lamp.

INSIDE LIGHTING.

Public Service Vehicles must, in compliance with the requirements of The Public Service Vehicles (Conditions of Fitness) and (Equipment and Use) Provisional Regulations, 1931, be adequately lighted inside, and, in the case of double-decked vehicles fitted with a permanent top, also lighted outside at all times during the hours of darkness when carrying passengers.

The Service is established for the conveyance to hospital of persons suffering from accident or sudden illness in the streets or public places, or from accident in private houses. It is not, in ordinary circumstances, intended for the removal of persons suffering from illness in private houses. Urgent parturition cases are removed to hospitals on the application of a duly qualified medical practitioner or a certified midwife, provided that either a certified midwife or doctor accompanies the case. Calls for ambulances are made by means of the telephone, the operator being asked for "Ambulance." When communication is established the locality of the accident or illness should be given, and the name of the caller.

THE BREAKDOWN OF THE GOLD STANDARD.

The breakdown of the gold standard was a gradual process, beginning in 1929 and continuing until April, 1933 (when the United States dollar depreciated in relation to gold). The nations which have abandoned the gold standard are placed in order of the time that their currencies first depreciated in terms of gold.

LIFE ASSURANCE.

THE list on the following two pages contains the names of all the more important British Life offices, and of nine Colonial companies (marked C), all of which transact business in this country.

CLASS OF BUSINESS.—The second column shows whether the company is conducted on the Mutual system whereby the whole of the divisible profit is allotted to participating policy-holders (M), or whether the company has proprietors by whom part (usually a very small proportion) of such profit is received (P). Life offices transacting other insurance business are marked O in this column. In such cases the Life funds are kept separately, and are not liable for the claims of other departments. The Share Capital is usually liable for the claims of all branches. Those having an Industrial branch are indicated by letter I.

FIGURES.—These are taken from the latest annual accounts available at date of going to press, and in the majority of cases refer to annual reports for the financial year ended December 31, 1932.

LIFE FUNDS.—The amounts of these funds, though interesting, are not in themselves a sufficient indication of the financial stability of a company, which cannot be judged unless liabilities are actuarially compared with assets.

PREMIUM INCOME.—The annual premium income is in all cases stated after deduction of the amount paid to other companies for reinsuring parts of the risks.

EXPENSES.—The expenses of a Life office include, in all cases where paid, commission to agents. The amount of expenses is less important in itself than in relation to premium income, consequently the percentage of the premium income absorbed in expenses is shown. The average percentage of British offices is about 22½%, of which about 5% is expended on commission and 7½% on other expenses. This ratio taken by itself is frequently misleading, because, if the proportion of new business is large, the percentage of the total premiums absorbed in expenses may legitimately be higher than where the new business is small. Moreover, where rates of premium are below the average any comparisons of percentage should be considered, with due regard to this feature, a gain to the policyholder through reduced premium being equivalent to an immediate cash bonus.

INTEREST.—The rate of interest earned is important for comparison with the rate assumed in valuing liabilities, since the greater the margin between these rates the greater is the surplus available from this source for bonus. The rate of interest given is without deduction of Income Tax except where marked (N)—net.

VALUATIONS.—The last columns of the table are derived from the valuation returns made by the companies to the Board of Trade. A valuation indicates liability under existing policies, after making allowance for the amounts to be paid and received. It is assumed that deaths will occur in accordance with a mortality table, and that interest will be earned at a certain rate. Various mortality tables are employed, those most usual being known as the H^m and O^m, and the corresponding Tables H^m(2) and O^m(2) which exclude mortality in the first five years of assurance. If a company assumes that it will earn a high rate of interest in the future, the net liability will appear less than if it assumes a low rate, while the liability on account of mortality appears greater by some tables than by others. The position of an office is most satisfactory when a stringent basis of valuation is adopted, because the margin between the calculated and experienced liability is larger and the surplus available for bonuses is greater. The O^m and O^m(2) tables in conjunction are more stringent than the O^m table alone, the H^m is more stringent than the American, and with every table the lower the rate of interest assumed the more stringent is the valuation.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES.

MOST large fire offices belong to the tariff association, charging identical rates of premium. There are, however, a number of non-tariff offices which claim to assess individual risks independently on merits. Tariff rates of premium per £100 insured against fire for the more common classes of risk are as follows.—

Private Dwelling Houses, built of brick or stone and tiled or slated and in no hazardous proximity, 1s. 6d.

Household goods therein, usually ss.

A number of companies issue "comprehensive" policies embracing in one contract all risks incidental to private houses and contents.

Shops and Warehouses, similarly built and circumstanced, in which no hazardous goods are deposited nor hazardous trades carried on, from ss.

Stock and Utensils in trade, fixtures, and household furniture in such shops and warehouses, from ss.

Most fire insurance companies transact accident and miscellaneous business, and if a strong company be selected with a reputation for liberal dealing it will probably be found to the advantage of a householder that he should effect with it all such policies as he may require, in place of dividing them amongst several companies. The "comprehensive" policies previously referred to, combine in one contract protection against damage by fire to the contents of a house, or from burglary, housebreaking, larceny, theft, &c., and insurance against domestic servants' employers' liability, damage from storm or tempest, third party risks, and other hazards. This can usually be arranged for an annual premium of 5s. per £100 of the full value of the contents of the house. Fire insurance of the house itself is not included, however, in this estimate, but can be included under the same policy, if desired. The advantage of a policy of this description is that it obviates the inconvenience of payments of small amounts in insurance premiums at different dates, and that in one comprehensive form it supplies protection at a moderate cost for all a householder's ordinary insurance requirements.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR WHOLE LIFE ASSURANCE.

Life assurance may be effected either with or without participation in profits. If without participation, both sum assured and premium remain unchanged. If with participation, a higher premium is charged, and bonuses can either be payable with the sum assured, applied to reduce the premium, or surrendered for cash. An alternative plan is available in some offices whereby future bonuses are anticipated and used to reduce premiums from the outset. This is called the "Discounted Bonus" or "Cost Price" system.

If the bonuses actually declared exceed those anticipated, the difference is credited to the policyholder; if, however, the anticipated bonuses exceed those declared, the balance has to be liquidated by the policyholder or remains as a debt. Policies should only be effected on this system in companies which can point to good and consistent bonus records, and whose valuation reserves are particularly strong.

The ages applicable to the life and endowment assurance (but not the annuity) rates as hereafter given are "next birthday" unless otherwise stated.

AVERAGE ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR WHOLE LIFE ASSURANCE OF £100.

The next table shows the annual premiums payable throughout life for a policy of £100 payable at death, with profits. It is not sufficient to judge a life office by premium rates only. An office charging a high premium may give higher bonuses than one charging a low premium, and therefore bonus results and prospects as well as premiums have to be considered. Some offices only allow bonuses to be taken in reduction of premium, and on this plan the rates are usually high to commence with, but are greatly reduced after a few years. Some reserve bonuses for the older classes of policyholders, and in these cases lower premiums than the average are usually charged. Most offices grant interim bonuses between valuation periods, and it is important to ascertain if this is the case before an assurance is effected, and how such interim bonuses compare with valuation bonuses, especially in cases of endowment assurance.

† Offices thus marked have a plan for accepting Assurances without medical examination, but in the majority of cases there is a limit to the amount that can be assured under this arrangement.

Abolition and General—Abolition Section.
African Life—These rates are for the first 30 years and are then reduced and carry a guaranteed Bonus.

General Life—Rates reduced by 1/6 per cent. for sums assured of £2,000 to £4,999 or by 1/4 per cent. for £5,000 and over.

London Life—Allowance is made for quarter-years in ages at entry.

Manufacturers—Rates are for age nearest birthday.

Nat. Mut. of Aust.—Rates are for age nearest birthday.

Prudential—A reduction in the rate is made for Assurances of £1,000 or over, up to £5,000, and a further reduction for over £5,000. Royal—Rates reduced by 1/4 per cent. for Assurances of £1,000 and over. Scottish Life—Rates reduced by 1/4 per cent. for Assurances of £1,000 and over on medically examined lives.

Temperance—Rates for abstainers are 10 per cent. less, limited to 9/10 per £100. Sun Life—Reductions granted to total abstainers.

University Life—Total Bonuses guaranteed to amount to at least 30 per cent. per annum for first 10 years and 35 per cent. per annum thereafter.

ENDOWMENT ASSURANCES.

Endowment Assurances are very popular, and are extremely attractive to persons who desire to combine a provision for their dependants, in event of premature death, with the investment of savings for the realisation of a fund for their own personal enjoyment in later life. For the investment of small annual sums there is no medium promising more satisfactory results than an Endowment Assurance participating in profits in a good bonus-paying life office. The selection of such an office is all-important, as so much depends upon profit-earning capacity—see first page of Life Assurance section.

ANNUAL PREMIUMS FOR ENDOWMENT ASSURANCE OF £100. WITH PROFITS.

Under endowment assurances the sum assured is paid after a given number of years, or on the attainment of a fixed age. Should the life assured, however, die during the endowment period, the sum assured is paid at death together with any Bonuses attaching under a "with profit" Policy.

The following table shows the annual premiums, for various ages at entry, charged by the offices named, to secure £100 at the end of 15, 20 and 25 years, or at death, if previous, with profits.

- * Sun Life of Canada—Rates for exact ages.

IMMEDIATE ANNUITIES.

THIS Table shows amount of Annuity granted for every £100 paid. The age is calculated from the last birthday, but many offices quote intermediate rates for every half or quarter year. By some a proportionate amount is payable to day of death. Some Companies pay whole or part of stamp duty. [For Notes see page 517.]

The Annuity is calculated as payable half-yearly. In some cases the quarterly rate is the same; in others it is a little less. Some offices grant special terms in case of impaired lives.

ADVICE REGARDING LIFE ASSURANCE.

Apart from the immediate protection thereby given, a life or endowment assurance policy, if effected in a first-class bonus-paying company, provides exceptional opportunity for the remunerative investment of savings. Policyholders can claim relief from Income Tax in respect of life assurance premiums not exceeding in amount one-sixth of their income, where the death risk is involved.

The selection of the office best suited to requirements and likely to produce the best results should be carefully made, but the study of any tables or suggestions is not sufficient to enable persons without technical knowledge to gauge the respective merits of the various companies. There are many good offices, and in the most select class some are better adapted than others for particular purposes, and large sums may be saved or earned by intending proposers through obtaining reliable advice before a proposal is made.

Medical examinations are sometimes dispensed with in the case of new proposals, but policies in these instances are sometimes subject to certain restrictive conditions.

In view of the fact that life assurance premiums are governed by age, it is advisable to produce a birth certificate or other satisfactory evidence of this, when effecting a Policy. It is not always asked for then but is required by the offices before the policy monies are paid.

INQUIRIES.—On receipt of an inquiry containing particulars of requirements (accompanied by 2s.) addressed to "The Insurance Editor, 12, Warwick-lane, E.C. 4," advice will be given as to the system and policies best adapted to the special requirements. Inquiries should state the date of birth of the person who requires the Insurance. The following are suggested as the policies most likely to be required:—

Building Societies.

Building Societies are for the most part associations incorporated with limited liability under the Building Societies Acts. The exceptions are a few societies established prior to 1857, which have chosen to remain unincorporated. The object of building societies is to assist their members in acquiring dwelling houses, business premises, or other freehold or leasehold property, for occupation or investment. Members' subscriptions are accumulated in a fund which may be augmented by deposits and loans, and advances are made from the fund to assist members in the purchase of properties. Security for advances is given by a mortgage upon the property purchased. Many, if not most, of the earlier societies were terminating. In these societies the share subscriptions were accumulated until there was sufficient capital to make an advance to a member upon mortgage, and the right to an advance, or as it was called an "appropriation," was conferred upon the fortunate member as a result of a ballot among the members who had not already received advances, or by sale to the member bidding the highest premium for the privilege of the appropriation. By later legislation, however, balloting for advances was prohibited for new societies. The Acts define a terminating society as one in which the rules provide for the termination of the society at a fixed date, or when a result specified in its rules is attained. Usually the rules provide that a society shall terminate when all the members have received advances. Terminating societies have been almost entirely superseded by the permanent societies, some of which have become very wealthy and important financial institutions.

All building societies are required to register their rules and file their accounts with the Registrar of Friendly Societies, who is also Registrar of Building Societies.

The lowering of the general level of interest rates, following the War Loan conversion in 1932, led many building societies to restrict the inflow of money for investment, and to reduce the rates of interest payable, at first on new but later on all shares and deposits. Towards the end of the year there was a reduction in the rate of interest charged on new mortgages, and subsequently many societies allowed some relief on old mortgages. During 1933 there have been further reductions in the rates of interest payable on shares and deposits, and also a further reduction in the rate charged on mortgages. The rate of interest on new mortgage advances to owner-occupiers is now stated to be 5 per cent. per annum. It is understood that the rates of interest payable to share investors vary among the large societies from 3½ to 4½ per cent. per annum, and that the rate payable to depositors is generally 3 per cent. per annum. In the later part of 1933 some of the large societies found it possible to relax restrictions which had been placed on the receipt of money for investment.

The Fourth International Congress of Building Societies was held in London in June, 1933. It was attended by delegates from 26 countries, including the United Kingdom. Building societies in the countries represented at the Congress number approximately 13,000, with assets exceeding £2,000,000,000. It is stated that the total membership is some 25,000,000.

The following is a summary of particulars extracted from the Registrar's Report:—

The "Remedy" is the amount of variation from standard permitted in fineness and in weight of coins when first issued from the Mint. Standard Gold contains twenty-two twenty-fourths (carats) of fine gold and two twenty-fourths of alloy; fineness, 916⁵/₁₆, or 22 carats; 220 troy ounces of standard gold are coined into 934 sovereigns and one half-sovereign; one troy ounce is, therefore, worth £3 17s. 10¹/₂d., and one ounce of pure gold, on the same basis, £4 4s. 11¹/₂d. During 1923 the average market price of gold fluctuated in accordance with the franc-sterling exchange, being 128¹/₂ on Oct. 21. Bar Gold.—The "bar" as purchased in the bullion market, is 200 oz. troy (except for the Far East, which requires 10 oz. bars). Standard Silver formerly consisted of thirty-seven-fortieths of fine silver and three-fortieths of alloy; fineness, 925. Silver for coinage, by an Amending Act (10 Geo. V. ch. 3), consists of one-half silver, one-half alloy; or in millennial fineness, 500; 12 troy ounces of 500 fineness are coined into 66 shillings.† [Another Standard, called the "New Sterling" or Britannia, of the fineness 12 oz. 10 dwt. (958³/₁₆), is practically obsolete. It is occasionally used, however, for high-class plate.] The Average Yearly Price of Silver per standard Troy Ounce in the London Market during the last twelve years was as follows:—1919, 57¹/₂d.; 1920, 61¹/₂d.; 1921, 56¹/₂d.; 1922, 34¹/₂d.; 1923, 31¹/₂d.; 1924, 34¹/₂d.; 1925, 33¹/₂d.; 1926, 28¹/₂d.; 1927, 26¹/₂d.; 1928, 26¹/₂d.; 1929, 24¹/₂d.; 1930, 17¹/₂d.; 1931, 14¹/₂d.; 1932, 17¹/₂d. On Oct. 21, 1933, the price of silver was 18¹/₂d. per oz.

In the United States the price of silver is quoted in cents per troy ounce fine. In order to convert an English quotation into cents per ounce fine, first express the pence as a whole number and decimal fraction and then multiply by 2.592; to express a United States price on the English system, multiply the cents by 0.456. † Bronze is an alloy of copper 95 parts, tin 4 parts, and zinc 1 part, or of copper 95½ parts, tin 3 parts and zinc 1½ parts.

* Issued on special occasions.
† By law a shilling weighs one sixty-sixth of 22 oz. Troy; 12 oz. of pure silver would be used in coining 72 shillings of 925 fineness and 12 of 500 fineness.
‡ The legal weight of a penny is one-third, of the halfpenny one-sixth, and of the farthing one-tenth of an ounce avoirdupois; the halfpenny is one inch in diameter.
§ Discontinued

Tokens.—No person is allowed to coin any token to pass for, or as representing, bronze or other money, under a penalty of £20.

Melting of Coins.—The melting of British gold and silver coin is prohibited.

Light Gold.—Any person to whom it is tendered should break, cut, or deface any gold coin below the least current weight; but under the provisions of the Coinage Act, 1891, and an Order in Council of March 16, 1892, light gold coin which has not been illegally dealt with is received by the Bank of England on behalf of the Mint at its full nominal value.

Bank of England Notes are issued for sums of 10s., £1, £5, £10, £20, £50; also for £100, £500, and £1,000.

Treasury Notes of the value of £1 and 10s. were replaced by Bank of England notes as from November 22, 1928.

Bank Post Bills can be obtained at the Bank of England for amounts of £10 and over at seven days' sight. They are issued for the full sum named thereon, without allowance for discount. No charge is made for bills so drawn; they may be obtained at the Chief Office of the Bank of England in London, or at any of the branches.

Legal Tender of Money.—Bank of England Notes of £1 and 10s. are legal tender in Great Britain and Northern Ireland for the payment of any amount, those of the higher denominations are legal tender in England and Wales only. Change cannot be demanded except from the Bank of England. Gold, if of or above the least current weight, is legal tender to any amount. Silver is legal tender for sums up to £2, and bronze up to 6d.

British Coinage Statistics.—During 1930 the number of coins struck at the Royal Mint was 185,090,208, of which 73,847,176 were Imperial, 27,797,032 Colonial, and 83,446,000 Foreign.

BRITISH DOMINIONS.

Imperial Sterling Coins are the sole legal metallic currency in:—

NEW ZEALAND. FALKLAND ISLANDS.

FIJI. GIBRALTAR. ST. HELENA.

WEST INDIES. See also JAMAICA, below.

Special Coins are current in addition to the Imperial series in:—

AUSTRALIAN COMMONWEALTH.—Special florins, shillings, sixpences, and three-pences in silver, and pence and half-pence in bronze, of the same weights and composition as Imperial coins of these denominations, but of special designs, while the silver coins are of 500 fineness.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.—Silver and bronze coins, bearing special designs, and corresponding to Imperial coins in denominations, weights and composition, except that the fineness of the silver is 800. Currency Bill of 1923 provides for a florin and cent currency.

BRITISH GUIANA.—A special groat or four-pence.

BRITISH WEST AFRICA.—Silver and also "alloy metal" ss., 2s., 6d., and 3d., One penny, one halfpenny, and one-tenth penny (nickel-bronze).

GUERNSEY.—Eight doubles (= 1 penny), 4s., and 2 double.

JAMAICA.—Nickel-bronze pence, halfpence, and farthings.

JERSEY.—Special pence, halfpence, and farthings.

MALTA.—One-third* of a farthing (bronze).

HALL MARKS ON PLATE.*

Assay Office Marks.—Official marks stamped on gold and silver plate at Assay Offices:—

Assay Office ... Distinguishing Mark.
London (Goldsmiths' Hall) Leopard's Head (uncrowned from 1300 to 1478-9, when it became crowned until 1861, since when it has been uncrowned). From 1697-1700 this mark was not used in London.

Birmingham .. Anchor.
Chester City Arms (3 Garbs and a Sword).
Sheffield Crown.
Edinburgh ... Castle.
Glasgow Tree, Fish & Bell.
Dublin Harp crowned.

The Assay Offices at Bristol, Exeter, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Norwich and York have long been closed.

Makers' Mark (Instituted in 1353).—This is impressed by the maker, and consists of initial letter (or letters) indicating the Surname (or Christian and Surname) of the maker.

Date Mark (Instituted in 1478-9).—The year in which the article is marked at the Assay Office is indicated by a letter on a shield, the type of letter and the shape of the shield being changed in cycles of 20, 25 or 26 years. In 20-year cycles (London, invariably, Chester, alternately with 25, and Sheffield, alternately with 25), the letters J, V, W, X, Y, Z are omitted; in 25-year cycles (Birmingham, Edinburgh and Dublin, and alternately at Chester and Sheffield) the letter "I" is omitted from the alphabet; at Glasgow all the letters are employed in a 26-year cycle.

The Sovereign's Mark.—The "lion passant," for silver articles only, was first used in 1544, and has been in use ever since (except during the Higher Standard period, 1697-1700). From 1544-9 it was crowned, since then, uncrowned.

The Sovereign's Head.—The portrait of the reigning Sovereign was impressed on all plate chargeable to duty assayed from 1784-1880-90. The duty on plate was removed in 1890, and the Sovereign's head does not appear on plate assayed before 1784 or after 1890.

The Crown.—On gold articles only, in lieu of the "lion passant" on silver.

Britannia.—A full-length figure of Britannia was impressed on silver plate of a special standard of fineness (11 oz. 10 dwt. of fine metal to each 10 dwt. of alloy) during a short period only, 1697-1700; since that date the Britannia quality has been manufactured in small quantities, bearing the figure of Britannia, with the lion's head erased and the date mark.

Sterling Silver.—Articles of silver plate marked at an assay office are guaranteed to be of the requisite standard of purity and to contain 11 oz. 2 dwt. of fine metal to each 12 dwt. of alloy.

Sterling Gold.—Articles of gold plate marked at an assay office are guaranteed to contain such amount of pure gold as is marked thereon by the assaying office in carats and decimals thereof. The relative values of the various standards is shown below:—

Pure gold, 24 c.	4 4 11½		3rd Stand., 15 c.	2 13 1
Standard, 22 c.	3 17 10½		4th ditto, 22 c.	2 5 ½
and ditto, 18 c.	3 3 8½		5th ditto, 9 c.	2 11 10½

	Old English, capitals	1756-7 to 1775-6	The Collector will find but little difficulty in distinguishing a letter of one cycle from that of another, presuming his knowledge to be insufficient to judge by the style and period of the article itself, e.g.:
	Roman letter, small	1776-7 .. 1795-6	An article marked with the letter F 1791-2 can be distinguished from letter F 1821-2 by the difference in the shape of the respective shields; as also those containing the crowned leopard's head and the lion passant; the absence of the sovereign's head in the former as against its presence in the latter case; the different form of the leopard's head (which was "crowned" until 1823); and lastly the irregularity of the stamp in the first case as compared with the uniformity of the latter stamp. These again can be distinguished from F 1821-2 as before, by the different shield of the date letter only (the shields of the remaining marks being the same as those of 1801-2); the absence of crown on leopard's head, and the presence of the Queen's vice the King's head.

Imported Plate.

Any gold or silver plate or article manufactured out of the United Kingdom and brought to be assayed, stamped or marked at a British or an Irish Assay Office must be marked in the manner prescribed by the Order in Council of May 11, 1906, under which the mark for each Assay Office is ordained to be:—London, the sign of the Constellation Leo; Birmingham, Equilateral Triangle; Chester, Acorn and two leaves; Sheffield, the sign of the Constellation Libra; Edinburgh, St. Andrew's Cross; Glasgow, double block letter F inverted; Dublin, Boulet. The annual date letter is to be added by the Assay Office, as for plate, etc., of home manufacture.

Modern Architecture } (The Age of Revivals) }	19th cent. to present time

This Comparative Table shows the approximate period of each style. It must, however, be remembered that the transition from one style to the next was slow and gradual, and can often hardly be traced, so minute are the differences. It is only for convenience in alluding to the different stages of evolution that the division is made, for it must not be forgotten that the Architecture of England is one continuous development.

Note.—The first portion (I-VIII) of this table is based upon that given on p. 347, Parts IX and X on p. 777, and "Modern" on p. 82a, of "A History of Architecture on the Comparative Method" (9th ed.), by Sir Banister Fletcher, F.R.S.A., F.S.A. (Batsford.)

MARKS ON PORCELAIN.

POTTERY or porcelain usually bear distinctive marks either painted on or stamped into the bottom of the article. These marks may indicate the factory, the potter, or the decorator, and in the case of Chinese or Japanese ware the dynasty at the date of manufacture. In the factory at Sévres the practice of marking the date by letters was also followed, and this has led to the forging of many bogus pieces. The factories in Europe generally indicate the place of origin only. Special knowledge is therefore required of the collector, and the learned amateur notes not only the mark, but the material, the colouring, and the decoration of the article, and frequently has to compare it with one that is unquestionably genuine. The following hints will, in the absence of the more learned dissertation of Mr. Chaffers, serve as a guide to the ordinary possessor or purchaser.

In the manufacture of porcelain, two main varieties of paste are used, termed respectively hard and soft; or, as the French have it, pâte dure et pâte tendre. The hard paste contains more alumina and less silica than the soft. When baked, it is translucent, hard, and sonorous on being struck; it has a white, milky colour, and can sustain, without injury, sudden alternations of high and low temperature. Its essential constituent is pure white kaolin, a variety of clay which is exceedingly scarce in England and other parts of Europe, but of comparatively common occurrence in many districts of China and Japan. The soft variety has an unctuous, cream-like enamel, and is soapy to the touch; it is lighter than the other kind, and less hard (a knife will scratch it), and does not require so great a heat for solidification.

The manufacture of hard, and what is often considered the only true, porcelain, was invented by the Chinese about 280 B.C., and attained its greatest perfection at the beginning of the 13th century. The secrets of the art were, in 1521, carried over to Japan, whose inhabitants soon became formidable rivals to the older makers. Specimens of this eastern ware had, from a very early date, occasionally found their way into Europe, but no regular importation took place until the middle of the 16th century, when a small settlement was formed on the Japanese coast by some enterprising traders from Portugal. It was from them that the ware first received the name it now bears, its translucence probably reminding them of the cowrie-shell which, from a supposed resemblance to the shape of a young pig, had been termed, in their language, porcellana.

In 1641 the Japanese authorities, having viewed with strong disapproval the many conversions to Christianity effected by the Portuguese missionaries, expelled the settlers from the island, and gave to the Dutch, who could always be trusted to refrain from proselytizing, the exclusive privilege of trading with them. Although the commercial industry of the Hollanders supplied England and the Continent with comparatively large quantities of the Oriental porcelain ware, the finer specimens were eagerly sought after, and, by Queen Anne's time, all classes seem to have become infected by a collecting mania. The high prices they fetched naturally led to many attempts at imitation, which, owing to the difficulty in finding a suitable clay, all resulted in more or less marked failure, nothing but the inferior pâte tendre being produced.

The first successful experiment was made, with the kaolin from Aue in the Erzgebirge, by J. F. Böttcher, who had accidentally gained a knowledge of its valuable properties. In consequence of the discovery, Augustus, Elector of Saxony, was induced to set up a porcelain factory near Dresden, with Böttcher as director, and, in 1713, the latter succeeded in producing an almost perfect imitation of the hard, white porcelain of the East. The most elaborate precautions were taken to prevent the secret of its manufacture getting abroad, but a very few years later, a heavy bribe extracted it from one of the workmen, and a rival factory was established at Vienna. The works at Berlin, Baden, and other towns in Germany all owed their origin in the same way to the dishonesty of different employes. The decorations of the earlier German productions were merely imitations, in blue and white, of the Chinese and Japanese; but towards the middle of the 18th century elaborate miniature paintings of flowers, insects, and copies of well-known pictures became fashionable. The best statuettes and groups were made between 1731 and 1756; the finest of these are in plain glazed white, though many are gaily decorated, and the dress richly ornamented with fine lace.

Of the factories in England, it is doubtful which has best claim to be termed the oldest; both the Chelsea and the Bow works were established before 1730, and those of Derby and Worcester very shortly after that date. Though at first confining themselves to imitations of the simple Oriental models, the English makers soon attained great perfection in the German and French styles, and, after the discovery of the Cornwall kaolin in 1755, their best productions ranked, in every respect, very little lower than the masterpieces of Dresden and Sévres.

In France, a factory for the soft variety had been set up at St. Cloud as early as 1695, and some excellent work was produced there. In 1753, works under royal patronage were set up at Vincennes, and, three years later, removed to Sévres. The best productions were sent out during the nine years which followed the purchase of the manufactory by Louis XV. in 1766. At the end of this period the discovery of kaolin near Limoges led to a discontinuance of the manufacture of pâte tendre in favour of the more highly valued pâte dure. Sévres porcelain, made for use, is usually painted with flowers or figure-subjects on a plain white ground. The purely decorative pieces have panels with pictures on a white ground surrounded by frames of gold scroll-work; the main body of the piece is covered with one deep or brilliant colour.

The following are the chief marks used in the more important European manufactories. The description of the appearance of the various porcelains may be found useful in the detection of forgeries, spurious pieces being unfortunately almost as abundant as genuine specimens:—

GERMANY—(Hard Paste).

DRESDEN.—The porcelain has a cold white, almost bluish, tint. The marks are always in blue.

1709-1712.—The initials of Augustus Rex.

1712-1720.—The wand of Esculapius.

1722, with intervals to present time.—The crossed swords.

1731-1733.—The same, with a dot between the handles.

1796-1814 (Marcolini period)—The same, with a star between the handles.

Scratches across the mark show there is some defect in the piece.

Sometimes the handles meet, and cause a slight variation in the appearance of the mark.

K P M, was painted in italics on pieces intended for royal use

VIENNA.—The porcelain has, generally, a greyish tint. The usual mark is a shield, in blue.

BERLIN.—The porcelain closely resembles that of Dresden. In 1761 the manufactory was made a royal establishment. The marks are generally in blue, though a brown sceptre is occasionally found.

1751-1761.—A capital W, with two of the strokes crossing.

1761 onwards.—A sceptre. Occasionally there are two sceptres, crossed to imitate the Dresden mark. At the present day the porcelain is stamped with the Prussian eagle, encircled by the words KOENIGL. PORZELLAN MANUFACTUR.

ENGLAND—(Soft Paste till 1755).

CHELSEA.—The porcelain is of a pure white colour, with a tint almost equal to that of the hard kind. The mark is an anchor, in gold for the best, in red for the second quality.

Bow.—The porcelain is of a fine milky white. In 1750 the works received the name of New Canton; and in 1775 were transferred to Derby. The marks are very various, and often not distinguishable from those of Chelsea. We give two varieties, which generally occur in blue.

DERBY.—The porcelain is very transparent, and of a good white colour. In 1769, the proprietor of the factory, W. Duesbury, purchased the kilns and moulds of the Chelsea works. The marks are in pink, violet, or gold. The earliest mark was an italic D.

After 1769, the same, crossed with an anchor (DERBY-CHELSEA).

After 1775, the date of the first royal order, a crown with crossed daggers, or a D, or an anchor (CROWN-DERBY).

WORCESTER.—The porcelain is not of a very good colour, but is tolerably transparent.

The earliest mark was a W or a crescent, in blue. Crossed arrows, and imitations of Chinese and Dresden marks are also found.

FRANCE—(Soft Paste till 1770).

VINCENNES and SEVRES.—The porcelain is remarkable for its creamy softness of colour. The Sevres period dates from 1756, when the factory was removed thither from Vincennes.

1745-1753.—Two italic L's crossed 1753-1756.—The same, with a letter in the centre. The letters A-Z denote the years 1753-77. The Sevres period begins with B.

1776-1795.—The period of double letters AA-RE.

1795-1800.—R F, the initials of République Française.

From 1800 to the present time, the mark has varied with each change of sovereign or government, and is, generally, self-explaining.

The Weights and Measures Act of 1878, superseding all previous laws, enacts the legal measures for Great Britain, basing them upon the Standard Yard and the Standard Pound, in the custody of the Standards Department of the Board of Trade.

The YARD and the POUND are the only two independent standards for weights and measures. The GALLON, the capacity standard, wet or dry, is based upon the Pound. The Act of 1878 defines the Gallon as the volume of ten standard pounds of distilled water weighed in air against brass weights, both water and air at the temperature of 62° Fahrenheit, with the barometer at 30 inches.

Apothecaries' Weight.

Measures of Weight.

20 grains = 1 scruple (3*ʒ*) (= 1.296 Grammes).
3 scruples = 1 drachm (3*ʒ*) (= 3.888 Grammes).
8 drachms = 1 ounce (= 31.1035 Grammes).

Measures of Capacity.

60 minims (min.) = 1 fluid drachm (= 3.552 Millilitres).
8 fluid drachms = 1 fluid ounce (= 28.4133 Centilitres).
20 fluid ounces = 1 pint (= 0.568 Litre).
8 pints = 1 GALLON (= 4.545963 Litres).

The Apothecaries' grain is the Avoirdupois grain, and the Apothecaries' ounce is the Troy ounce, of 480 grains. The Apothecaries' drachm is not the same as the Avoirdupois drachm, and is spelt differently. A fluid ounce of distilled water at a temperature of 62° Fahrenheit is equal in weight to the Avoirdupois ounce (437.5 grains). A fluid drachm (54.6875 grains) is equal in weight to TWO Avoirdupois drams.

Approximate Equivalents:—

1 "table-spoon" = ½ fluid oz.; 1 "dessert-spoon" = ⅓ fluid oz.; 1 "tea-spoon" = ⅙ fluid oz.

Avoirdupois Weight.

16 drams (dr.) = 1 ounce (oz.) (= 28.350 Grammes).
16 ounces = 1 POUND (= 0.45359243 Kilogram).
14 pounds = 1 stone* (= 6.350 Kilograms).
28 pounds = 1 quarter (of a cwt.) (= 12.70 Kilograms).
100 pounds = 1 cental (= 45.359243 Kilograms).
4 quarters (224 lb.) = 1 hundredweight (cwt.) (= 50.8023 Kilograms).
20 hundredweight (2,240 lb.) = 1 ton (= 1.016 Tonnes or 1016.0 Kilograms).

Troy Weight.

24 grains = 1 pennyweight (dwt.) (= 1.555 Grammes).
20 dwt. = 1 ounce (= 31.1035 Grammes).
For gold and silver the ounce, divided decimally, and not into grains, is the sole unit of weight. The Troy ounce is the same as the Apothecaries' ounce, = 480 Avoirdupois grains (31.1035 Grammes) in weight. There is no Troy POUND.

Jewellers' Weight.

The metriccarat of 200 milligrammes is the legal standard of weight for precious stones and pearls.

* The Smithfield stone (for dead meat) is 8 lb. only.

Measures of Capacity.

4 gills = 1 pint (= 0.568 Litre).
2 pints = 1 quart (= 1.136 Litres).
4 quarts = 1 GALLON (= 4.545963 Litres).
1 gallon = 277.274 cubic inches.
2 gallons = 1 peck (= 9.0909 Litres).
8 gallons = 1 bushel (= 3.637 Dekalitres).
8 bushels = 1 quarter (= 3.637 Hectolitres).
A chaldron is 36 bushels = 4½ quarters.

Measures of Length.

12 inches (in.) = 1 foot (ft.) (= 0.30480 Metre).
3 feet = 1 yard (yd.) (= 0.914399 Metre).
6 feet = 1 fathom (= 1.8288 Metres).
5½ yards = 1 pole (= 5.09292 Metres).
22 yards = 1 chain = 100 links (= 20.1168 Metres).
10 chains = 1 furlong (= 201.168 Metres).
8 furlongs = 1 mile = 1,760 yards (= 1.6093 miles = 1 league (obsolete). [Kilometres].
A Cricket Pitch is 22 yards (one chain) between the stumps.

A Lawn Tennis Court is 78 × 36 feet (double) and 78 × 27 feet (single).

A Croquet Lawn is 105 × 84 feet (full size) or a smaller multiple of 5 × 4 feet.

A Badminton Court is 44 × 20 ft., with net 30 ins. deep and 5 ft. high at centre.

A Polo Ground is 300 × 160 yds.

A Football Ground (Association) is 120 × 80 yds. (full size); (Rugby) 120 × 75 yds. (full size).

Birmingham Gauge.

The equivalent of an inch is 15/16 B.G. The numbers proceed by units down to 1/16 B.G., which = 0.3964 inch, and from 1 B.G. (.3532 inch) by units to 52 B.G. (.00095 inch).

Square or Surface Measure.

144 sq. inches = 1 sq. foot (= 9.2903 Sq. Decimetres).

9 sq. feet = 1 sq. yard (= 0.836126 Sq. Metre).

30½ sq. yards = 1 perch, or rod, or pole (= 25.293 Sq. Metres).

40 perches = 1 rood (= 0.10117 Hectare).

4 roods = 1 acre (= 0.40468 Hectare).

10 square chains = 1 acre. [metres].

640 acres = 1 square mile (= 2.58995 Sq. Kilo-

Dimensions of an Acre.—The acre is 4,840 sq. yards, or 220 × 220 yards. The length of a side of a square acre is 69.57 yards; an area 120 × 22 yards (or 220 × 12 yards) would be half an acre; an area 55 × 22 yards (or 120 × 12 yards) would be one quarter of an acre, and so on.

Cubic Measure.

1,728 cubic inches = 1 cubic foot (= 0.028317 Cubic Metre).

27 cubic feet = 1 cubic yard (= 0.764553 Cubic metre).

Angular or Circular Measure.

60 seconds (") = 1 minute (').

60 minutes = 1 degree (°).

30 degrees = 1 sign.

90 degrees = 1 right angle or quadrant.

12 signs (4 quadrants) = 1 circumference.

Diameter of circle × 3.1416 = circumference.

Diameter squared × 7/64 = area of circle.

Diameter squared × 3.1416 = surface of sphere

Diameter cubed × 5/32 = solidity of sphere

One degree of circumference × 57.3 = radius.

Diameter of cylinder × 3.1416; product by length or height, gives the surface.

Diameter squared × 7/64; product by length or height, gives solid content.

Note.—A circle of 7 yards diameter has, in practice, a circumference of 22 yards = 1 chain.

Miscellaneous Weights and Measures.

Apples (Bushel) = 37 to 43 lb. (average 40 lb.).

Ballast (Fig) = 36 lb.

Beef (Barrel) = 200 lb.

Biscuits (Bag) = 100 lb.

Blacklead (Cask) = 12½ cwt.

Butter (Barrel) = 4 firkins = 224 lb.

Camphor (Box) = 1 cwt.

Cloves (Matt) = 80 lb.

" (Chest) = 200 lb.

Coal (Sack) = 224 lb.

" (Bushel) = 80 lb.

" (Chaldron) = 85 bushels.

" (Ton) = 20 sacks.

Cocoa (Bag) = 122 lb.

" (Cask) = 1 cwt. 28 lb.

Coffee (Bag) = 120 to 168 lb.

" (Bale of Mocha) = 224 to 280 lb.

" (Barrel) = 122 to 168 lb.

" (Tierce) = 5 to 7 cwt.

Cotton (U.S. Bale) = 450 to 550 lb.

" (Egyptian Bale) = 700 to 740 lb.

" (Indian Bale) = 400 lb.

" (Tinnivelly) 500 lb.

Currants (Carotell) = 5 to 9 cwt.

Flour (Peck) = 24 lb.

" (Bag) = 140 lb.

Glass (Seam) = 24 stone of 5 lb. = 120 lb.

Gunpowder (Barrel) = 100 lb.

Hides (Last) = 12 dozen.

Honey (Gallon) = 12 lb.

Hops (Bag) = 280 lb.

" (Pocket) = 1½ to 2 cwt.

Lead (Fodder) :-

London and Hull = 19½ cwt.

Derby and Newcastle = 22½ cwt.

Meat (Stone) = 8 lb.

Nuts (Barcelona, Bag) = 126 lb.

Oats (Barrel) = 34 stone.

Pepper (Bag of black) = 326 lb.

" (Bag of white) = 168 lb.

Pork (Barrel) = 224 lb.

Potatoes (Sack) = 122 lb. (since 1923).

Raisins (Barrel) = 122 lb.

Rice (Bag) = 168 lb.

Sago (Bag) = 122 lb.

Saltpetre (Bag) = 168 lb.

Soft Soap (Barrel or Pack) = 256 lb.

Steel (Faggot) = 100 lb.

Sugar (Bag) = 122-126 lb.

" (Hogshead) = 12 to 16 cwt.

" (Tierce) = 5 cwt.

Tar (Barrel) = 26½ gallons.

Tea (Chest) = 84 lb.

Tobacco (Hogshead) = 12 to 18 cwt.

Turpentine (Barrel) = 224 to 280 lb.

Wood (Cord) = 128 cubic feet.

Wool (Sack) = 364 lb.

Wheat, Corn, and Flour.

Under the Corn Sales Act of 1921 the Corn Returns Act of 1882 is amended, and provision is made for the sale of cereals by weight in terms of the hundredweight of 112 imperial standard pounds.

100 lb. wheat produces 70 lb. flour.

100 lb. flour produces 130 lb. bread.

A quartern loaf = 4 lb.

A last of grain = 80 bushels.

NOTE.—A Quarter is a heaped measure of 8 bushels. A quarter of English wheat is reckoned as 504 lb. weight. On the Winnipeg Grain Market the standard bushel of oats is reckoned at 34 lb.; in U.S.A. at 32 lb.

Hay and Straw.

Truss of Straw, 26 lb. Truss of Old Hay, 26 lb.

Truss of New Hay (to September 1st), 60 lb.

Load of hay or straw = 36 trusses.

Ton of hay = 36 trusses.

An acre of grass should yield 1 to 2 tons of hay.

Sizes of Barrels and Bottles.

Firkin or Quarter Barrel..... 9 = 9 × 1

Kilderkin, Rundlet, or ½ Barrel 12 = 9 × 2

Barrel 36 = 9 × 4

Hogshead (1½ barrels) 54 = 9 × 6

Punchon (2 barrels) 72 = 9 × 8

Butt of Ale (3 barrels) 108 = 9 × 12

An Anker = 10 gallons; a Tierce = 42 gallons; a Pipe of Port or Masdev = 125 gals.; Teneriffe

= 100 gals.; Marsala = 93 gals.; Madeira and

Cape = 92 gals.; Sherry and Tent = 108 gals.;

Butt of Lisbon and Bucellas = 127 gals.; Arm of Hock and Rhenish = 30 gals.; Hogshead of Brandy, 60 gals.; Claret, 45; Port, 57; Sherry, 54;

Madeira, 46 gallons; Punchon of Brandy or

Rum = 120 gals.

Bottles.—The customary glass bottle of wine or spirits should contain one-sixth of a gallon

= 26½ fluid ounces.

In the drug trade two large bottles are used :-

Corbyn..... = 40 fluid oz (quart).

Winchester quart = 80 " (½ gallon).

Water.

Cubic Inch..... = 252.458 grains.

Gallon (277.274 cub. in.) = 10 lb. (distilled).

Cubic foot..... = 62.321 lb.

35.243 cubic ft. (224 gals.) = 1 ton.

Water for Ships: Tun, 252 gals.; Butt, 120, Puncheon 72, Barrel 36, Kilderkin 18 gals.

An Inch of Rain on the surface of an acre

(43,560 sq. feet) = 3,630 cubic feet = 100,000

Cisterns: A cistern 4 feet by 1½ and 3 deep will hold brimful 286.763 gallons, weighing 16 cwt.

2 qrs. 22.6 lb. in addition to its own weight.

Railway Gauges.

In Great Britain = 4 ft. 8½ in.

" Ireland = 5 ft. 3 in.

" U.S.A. = 4 ft. 8½ in.

The 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge is also used in Canada, France, Germany, Netherlands,

Belgium, Denmark, Austria, Hungary,

Italy, Switzerland, Sweden and European

" Australia :-

N.S.W. = 3 ft. 6 in. and 4 ft. 8½ in.

Victoria and South Australia = 5 ft. 3 in.

Queensland and Western Australia =

3 ft. 6 in.

" New Zealand = 3 ft. 6 in.

" India = 2 ft. 6 in.; 3 ft. 3½ in. and 5 ft. 6 in.

" South Africa = 3 ft. 6 in.

" Egypt = 4 ft. 8½ in.

" Ceylon = 5 ft. 6 in.

" Japan = 3 ft. 6 in.

" Spain and Portugal = 5 ft. 6 in.

" U.S.S.R. = 5 ft. 0 in.

" Asia Minor = 4 ft. 8½ in. and 3 ft. 5½ in.

A single track of 4 ft. 8½ in. gauge requires

12 ft. of roadway; a double track requires 23 ft.

Electrical Measures.

It is customary to express electrical measurements in terms of the centimetre, the gramme, and the second (C.G.S. units), and the value of the units has been fixed by international agreement. The principal units are as follow :—

As a unit of resistance, the international Ohm, which is based upon the ohm equal to 10^9 units of resistance of the C.G.S. system of electromagnetic units, and is represented by the resistance offered to an unvarying electric current by a column of mercury at the temperature of melting ice, 14.4521 grammes in mass, of a constant cross-sectional area, and of a length of 106.3 centimetres.

As a unit of current, the international Ampere, which is one-tenth of the unit of current of the C.G.S. system of electro-magnetic units and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the unvarying current which, when passed through a solution of nitrate of silver in water, in accordance with a certain specification, deposits silver at the rate of 0.001118 of a gramme per second.

As a unit of electro-motive force, the international Volt, which is the E.M.F. that, steadily applied to a conductor whose resistance is one international ohm, will produce a current of one international ampere, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by 1.103 of the E.M.F. between the poles or electrodes of the voltaic cell known as Clark's cell at a temperature of 15° C., and prepared in the manner described in a certain specification.

As a unit of quantity, the international Coulomb, which is the quantity of electricity transferred by a current of one international ampère in one second.

As a unit of capacity, the international Farad, which is the capacity of a conductor charged to a potential of one international volt by one international coulomb of electricity. The unit generally used in practice is one-millionth part of this, or the microfarad.

As the unit of work, the Joule, which is 10^7 units of work in the C.G.S. system, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the energy expended in one second by an international ampere in an international ohm. In practice the watt-hour is usually employed. It represents the work done by such a current in an hour, and equals 3,600 joules.

As the unit of power, the Watt, which is 10⁷ units of power in the C.G.S. system, and which is represented sufficiently well for practical use by the work done at the rate of one joule per second $746 \text{ watts} = 1 \text{ horse-power}$, and the value of a Board of Trade unit (B.O.T.U.) is 1,000 watt-hours, or 3,600,000 joules, or $1\frac{1}{2}$ horse-power hours.

As the unit of induction, the Henry, which is the induction in the circuit when the E.M.F. induced in this circuit is one international volt, while the inducing current varies at the rate of one international ampère per second.

A Rod of Brickwork $16\frac{1}{2}$ feet \times $16\frac{1}{2}$ feet \times $1\frac{1}{2}$ brick thick = 306 cubic feet, or $11\frac{1}{2}$ cubic yards, and contains about 4,500 bricks with about 75 cubic feet of mortar. The rod being 5 British metres, a rod of brickwork is 25 square metres $1\frac{1}{2}$ bricks thick = very nearly 10 cubic metres.

Ordinary bricks weigh about 7 lb. each; a load of 500 weighs about 1 ton 11 cwt. 1 qr.

A Piece of machine printed Wall Paper is 11½ yd. long and 21 in. wide; of hand printed 12 yd. long × 21 in. wide. French wall papers are usually 9 yd. × 18 in.

Timber and Wood.

100 superficial feet = 1 square of flooring.
50 cubic feet of planks = 1 load.
42 do. timber = 1 shipping ton.
108 do. do. = 1 stack.
128 do. do. = 1 cord.

A standard hundred of deals contains 120 pieces.
The Petrograd standard consists of 165 cubic feet, or 120 pieces $1\frac{1}{2}$ in. \times 11 in. \times 12 ft., or 120 pieces 3 in. \times 11 in. \times 6 ft.

A Batten is not more than 7 inches wide; a Deal not more than 9 inches; Planks are 2 to 4 inches thick, and 10 inches and up in width.

Fish.

In Scotland, and at certain places in England and Wales at which the Cran Measures Act, 1908, has been put into operation, fresh herrings must be sold by the Cran, containing $37\frac{1}{2}$

Imperial gallons, or Quarter Cran of 93½ Imperial gallons. In the Isle of Man and in Ireland herrings are sold by the Maze, which contains 5 long hundreds of 226 each. On the East Coast of England, at places where the above-mentioned Act is not in force, they are sold by the Last, which contains 13,300 fish. They are counted by the Warp, which is 4 fish. 33 Warps = 1 Long Hundred, 132 = 10 Hundred = 1 Thousand, 1,300 = 10 Thousand = 1 Last, 13,000. Cured herrings are sold in barrels, the capacity of which, in Scotland, must always be 26½ Imperial gallons, or in half-barrels of 13¼ gallons. Herring barrels or half-barrels must be of corresponding capacity in England and Wales if they are presented for the Government Brand at any place at which the Herring Fishery (Branding) Act, 1873, is in force.

A Quintal of fish (Newfoundland, &c.) is 112 lb.; a barrel of anchovies = 30 lb.; a "box of fish," is about 90 lb.; a Newfoundland "box of fish" contains 100 lb., 112 lb., or 126 lb., to suit the requirements of the different markets.

Geographical Measures.

The North and South Poles are two points at the opposite extremities of that diameter of the earth round which it revolves. The Equator is a great circle, equally distant from the North and South Poles. For geographical purposes, the surface of the earth is divided by circles, called the circles of Latitude and Longitude. The circles of Latitude are small circles parallel to the Equator. The circles of Longitude are great circles perpendicular to the Equator, and passing through the North and South Poles. These circles are divided into Degrees, Minutes, and Seconds. Degrees of Latitude are numbered from the Equator to the North and South Poles. Degrees of Longitude are numbered from the primary circle of Longitude, or Meridian, which passes through the astronomical observatory of Greenwich (England). The Date or Calendar Line is shown on p. 128.

A Geographical Mile is the length of one minute of Latitude. If the earth was a sphere, every minute of Latitude would be of the same length; but, as it is a spheroid, the length of a minute increases from 6,046 feet at the Equator to 6,108 feet at the Poles. The mean length of the geographical mile is 6,076½ feet. The Nautical Mile is (strictly speaking) the length of a minute of the meridian, and is thus identical with the geographical mile. In practice, however, it is taken as the Admiralty Knot of 6,080 feet, divided into 10 cables, which are assumed to be 100 fathoms, or 600 feet.

The Polar diameter of the Earth is 7,899 English miles. The mean equatorial diameter is 7,926 miles. The circumference at the Equator is 24,902 miles.

Measures of Heat.

The comparisons in col. 3 are of Thermometers constructed by Fahrenheit, Celsius and Réaumur. Gabriel Daniel Fahrenheit, F.R.S. (1686-1736), was born at Danzig, and lived a great part of his life in England and the Netherlands. He was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1724. Anders Celsius (1701-1744), inventor of the Centigrade Thermometer, was born at Upsala, Sweden, and was for many years Professor of Astronomy at the University of Upsala. René Antoine Ferchault de Réaumur (1683-1757), was born at La Rochelle, France, and became known as "The Pliny of the XVIIIth Century" on account of his work as a Natural Historian.

NOTE.—The normal temperature of the human body is 98.6° F., or 37° C., or 86.6° R. Let F = Fahr. " C = Cent. " R = Réaumur. 32° F. = 0° C., and 32° F. subtract 32 from F to get C. Below 32° F. subtract 32 from F to get C. Below 0° C. subtract 0 from C to get F. Below 32° F. subtract 32 from F to get C. Below 0° C. subtract 0 from C to get F. Below 32° F. subtract 32 from F to get C. Below 0° C. subtract 0 from C to get F.

Nautical Measures.

6 feet = 1 fathom.
100 fathoms = 1 cable length.
10 cables = 1 nautical mile.
60 nautical miles = 1 degree.

The assumed length of the cable is 600 feet (=182·87 metres), but it is strictly 606·97 feet (=185 metres). The conventional Nautical Mile (the Knot in speed measurements) is 10 cables, assumed at 6,060 feet (strictly 6,066·7 feet), but the Nautical Mile is strictly the length of a minute of the meridian and differs according to latitude. Ship Measurement.

The Ton-measurement of cargo was originally the space occupied by 4 hogheads (= a Tun) of wine = 50 cubic feet. It is now 40 cubic feet, which is approximately the bulk of 4 quarters, or a short ton, of wheat.

The Ton-register, the unit of capacity of a ship, was originally the space occupied by a Last of 10 Quarters of wheat = 100 cubic feet. This cubic space is the Ton-register used by all maritime nations, 100 English cubic feet.

Gross tonnage is the sum in cubic feet of all the various enclosed spaces of a vessel, divided by 100.

Net tonnage is the gross tonnage less certain deductions on account of crew spaces, engine room, water ballast, and other spaces not used for passengers or cargo.

Dead-weight tonnage, or carrying capacity, is the number of tons (of 2,240 lb.) of cargo that a vessel is capable of carrying when charged to the load water line (q.v.).

Displacement tonnage is the number of tons of sea water displaced by a vessel when charged to the load water line (q.v.), i.e., it is the weight of vessel and contents in tons.

Load-water-line is the line that would be made round the shell of a vessel when loaded as deep as the minimum freeboard regulations permit.

Draught is the distance in feet from the lowest part of the bottom of a vessel to the actual water line at which the vessel is floating. Thus the load-water-line marks the greatest, or loaded, draught of a vessel. A vessel without any cargo in her hold or passengers or their luggage aboard is said to be "light ship," or "light," or "in ballast."

Free Board is the distance from the main or upper deck to the load-water-line of a vessel. As a general rule the minimum free board provides an amount of reserve buoyancy that will keep a vessel afloat with two compartments holed.

Bells and Watches on Board Ship.

Bells.—Time is kept by means of a bell, which is struck every half hour. Anyone who, in an effort to terminate his watch prematurely, strikes the bell early, is accused of "warming the bell," an expression which has grown to include the doing of anything before the appointed time.

Watches.—For purposes of discipline, and to divide the work fairly, the crew is mustered in two divisions: the Starboard (right side, looking forward) and the Port (left). The day commences at noon, and is thus divided:—

Watch.	Bells (in ½ hours).
Afternoon.....	noon to 4 p.m., 1 to 8.
First Dog.....	4 p.m. to 6 p.m., 1, 2, 3, 4.
†Last or §Second
Dog.....	6 p.m. to 8 p.m., 1, 2, 3, 8.
First.....	8 p.m. to midnight, 1 to 8.
Middle.....	midnight to 4 a.m., 1 to 8.
Morning.....	4 a.m. to 8 a.m., 1 to 8.
Forenoon.....	8 a.m. to noon, 1 to 8.

§ Second in Mercantile Marine

This makes seven Watches, enabling the crew to keep them alternately, as the Watch which is on duty in the forenoon one day has the afternoon next day, and the men who have only four hours' rest one night have eight hours the next. This is the reason for having Dog Watches, which are made by dividing the hours between 4 p.m. and 8 p.m. into two Watches.

For TIME AT SEA see p. 158.

Speed of Ships.

The Knot is a measure of speed of ships. The following table shows the equivalents of 1 to 42 knots in land (statute) miles per hour:—

Knots	Miles	Knots	Miles	Knots	Miles
1	1·1515	15	17·2727	39	33·2939

Measures of Energy, &c.

In Physics the unit of force is the dyne, the amount that, acting for one second on one gramme mass, gives it a velocity of one centimetre per second. The British unit is the poundal, which in one second gives one pound a velocity of one foot per second. One poundal = 13,825·5 dynes. In Meteorology the unit of atmospheric pressure is the Bar, equal to the pressure of 1,000,000 dynes (1 megadyne) per sq. centimetre. The Meteorological Bar is thus 1,000,000 Chemical Bars.

Horse power is energy exerted at the rate of 550 foot-pounds per second; an alternative unit is the kilowatt (102 kilogram-meters per second) = 737·59 foot pounds per second.

Thermal Unit.—The British Thermal Unit (B.Th.U.) is the amount of heat required to raise one pound of water one degree Fahrenheit. The Gas Therm = 100,000 B.Th.U. If V = cu. ft. consumed, H = declared heat value of the Company's gas (in B.Th.U. per cu. ft.), P = cost of the therm in pence, B = total bill in pence—then $B = V \times H \times P / 100,000$, whence equivalent cost (in pence) per 1,000 cu. ft. = $B \times 1,000 \div V = H \times P \div 100$.

Yarn Measures.

Cotton and Spun Silk Count.—

Thread = 1½ yards.

Lea or Skein, skn. = 120 yards.

Hank, hk. = 7 Skeins, or Leas = 840 yards

Spindle, spdl. = 18 Hanks.

Counts = the number of Hanks in 1 lb.

Bundle Hanks, either of 5 lb. or 10 lb.

Reels of cotton vary from 30 to 1,760 yards; they must be marked correctly.

Bundles of Cotton are chiefly made up for export.

Worsted Count.—Wrap, 80 yards; Hank = 560 yards = 7 Wraps; Counts or Numbers are the number of hanks in 1 lb.

Linen Count.—The Hank or Lea is 300 yards, and the number of these in 1 lb. is the count of the yarn. A Spindle is 48 hanks; a Bundle is 200 hanks.

West of England Count.—The Hank is 320 yards, and the number of hanks in 1 lb. is the count of the yarn.

Paper and Book Measure.

Writing Paper.

24 sheets = 1 quire.
20 quires = 1 ream.

Printing Paper.

516 sheets = 1 ream.
2 reams = 1 bundle.
5 bundles = 1 bale.

Regular Sizes of Printing Paper.

Super Royal	= 27½ × 20½ "
Elephant	= 28 × 23 "
Imperial	= 30 × 22 "

NOTE.—Books are usually bound up in sheets of 16 or 32 pages. Octavo books are generally printed 64 pages at a time (32 pages on each side of a sheet of quad); a crown octavo book of 320 pages will therefore require 5 sheets of quad crown, and a ream will provide 200 books, the odd 40 sheets being reckoned as waste. Newspapers (and books circulating in large numbers) are printed on rotary presses, for which the paper is supplied on reels (and not in cut reams). "Whitaker" is printed on a rotary press, 128 pages at a time, the paper being served to the press from a reel, and 6 sheets of 32 pages are delivered, printed and folded, at the opposite end of the press.

Sizes of Type.

The type chiefly used in "Whitaker" is named Nonpareil (6 point). The column contains 75 lines, and is 12 Pica ems wide, on an average every column contains about 3,000 letters, or 600 words.

All Founders cast their type to one uniform height ("type high"), which is 1½ inch. Individual letters vary in breadth, but the "body" of each character is of uniform depth throughout the alphabet in each fount. The unit of breadth is the Pica M (Em) 6 of which, side by side, occupy one inch of space. The unit of depth is the Point (72 Points = 1 inch), so that 6 lines of 12 Point occupy 1 inch in depth. The names and sizes of the various founts are:—

Brilliant (3½ point). A column the size of this in "Whitaker," if set in Brilliant would contain 124 lines, and about 7,500 letters

METRIC WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

See also "Double Conversion Tables for Weights and Measures."

In addition to the Imperial standard weights and measures, the use of the French or Metric system of weights and measures was made permissive in Great Britain in 1897.

In the Metric system, the standard of length is the METRE, the standard of weight is the KILOGRAM, and the standard of capacity is the LITRE. Accurate copies of the Metre, Kilogram, and Litre are kept in the custody of the Standards Office of the Board of Trade

1.—MEASURES OF LENGTH.

10 millimetres	= 1 centimetre	= 0.39370113 inch.
(mm.)	(cm.)
10 centimetres	= 1 decimetre	= 3.9370113 inches.
	(dm.)
10 decimetres	= 1 METRE (m.)	= 1.0936143 yards.
10 metres	= 1 dekametre	= 10.936143 yards.
	(dam.)
10 dekametres	= 1 hectometre	= 109.36143 yards.
10 hectometres	= 1 kilometre	= 0.68137 mile.
	(km.)

A kilometre is approximately five eighths of a mile, so that 8 kilometres may be regarded by pedestrians as 5 miles.

2.—MEASURES OF WEIGHT.

10 milligrams	= 1 centigram	= 0.15432 grains.
(mg.)	(cg.)
10 centigrams	= 1 decigram	= 1.5432 "
	(dg.)
10 decigrams	= 1 gramme	= 15.4323 "
	(gm.)
10 grammes	= 1 dekagram	= 5.6438 drams.
	(dag.)
10 dekagrams	= 1 hectogram	= 3.5274 oz.
	(hg.)
10 hectograms	= 1 KILOGRAM	= 2.2046223 lb.
	(kg.)
10 kilograms	= 1 myriagram	= 22.046223 lb.
10 myriagrams	= 1 quintal (q.)	= 1.9684 cwt.
10 quintals	= 1 tonne (t.)	= 0.9842 ton.

3.—MEASURES OF CAPACITY.

10 millilitres	= 1 centilitre	= 0.0704 gill.
10 centilitres	= 1 decilitre (dl.)	= 0.17598 pint.
10 decilitres	= 1 LITRE (lit.)	= 1.7598 pints.
10 litres	= 1 dekalitre	= 2.1997 gals.
	(dal.)
10 dekalitres	= 1 hectolitre	= 2.7497 bushels.
	(hl.)

1 cubic cm. (water) = 1 gram; 1,000 cubic cm. (water) or 1 litre = 1 kilogram; 1 cubic metre (1,000 litres, 1,000 kilograms) = 1 metric ton.

4.—MEASURES OF LAND.

100 sq. metres	= 1 are (a.)	= 0.0988 rood.
100 ares	= 1 hectare (ha.)	= 2.4711 acres.
100 hectares	= 1 sq. kilometre	= 0.38611 sq. mile.

NOTES.

1 hectolitre	= 2.75 bushels.
1 centilitre per hectare	= 1.12 bushels per acre.
1 quintal	= 3.67 bushels.
1 quintal per hectare	= 1.49 bushels per acre.
1 franc a hectolitre	= 3.6d. a bushel (par).
1 " a quintal	= 1.43d. a central (par).
1 " a quintal	= 1.33d. a quarter (par).
7 francs " (duty)	= 12s. 6d. a quarter (par).

THE UNITED STATES.

Weight.—In the short ton of 2,000 lb., the Cental of 100 lb. takes the place of the Cwt. in the long ton. There are two tons, therefore, the long ton of 2,240 lb., the short ton of 2,000 lb.

Capacity.—For grain, the old bushel of 2,150.42 cubic inches; its gallon = 288.8 cubic inches. This is commonly called the Winchester bushel, though really of the slightly different London standard.

For liquids, the old wine-gallon of 231 cubic inches, five-sixths of the British gallon and = 58.3178 grains of water. It is divided into 8 pints = 7,889.7 grains of water = 26.6 Imperial ounces. In medicine the pint is divided into 16 fluid ounces = 455.6 grains of water, and the ounce into 8 fluid drachms of 60 minims.

BRITISH DOMINIONS.

Australia and New Zealand.—Same as British. Canada.—Same as British but with short ton of 2,000 lb., as in U.S.A.

Newfoundland.—Same as British.

Channel Islands.

The weights and measures in use in the Channel Islands are those of Great Britain, the cental of 100 lb. being used as well as the cwt. of 112 lb. The Old Island Measures are as follows:—
 Vergée (Normandy) Jersey. Guernsey rood) = 0.44 acre 0.4 acre.
 Bushel = 8.9 gallons 5.8 gallons.
 Pound = 7,561 grains 7,623 grains.
 Cwt. (104 lb.) = 112.3 lb. (100 lb.) = 108.9 lb.

British India.

Ungul = 0.75 inch.
 Guz, usual) 7.33 inches; also the yard.
 Koss = 2,000 yards.
 Bigha (Bengal) usually = 0.65 acre.
 Cawny (Madras) = 1.23 "
 Tola (rupee-weight) = 180 grains.
 Chittak = 1.0571 oz.
 Seer, 16 chittak, or 80 tolas = 2.0571 lb.
 Maund, 40 seers = 82.284 lb.
 " (Bombay) = 27.864 lb.
 " (Madras) = 24.68 lb.
 Seer (Liquid) = 1.760 pints.
 Candy " = 500 lb.
 Visham = 3 lb.; Dangali = 3 pints.
 Parah = 15 gallons.
 Caty (Singapore) = 1½ lb.
 Pikul 100 catties = 133 lb.

Iriah Free State.—Same as British.

Malta.

The Metric System.
 Old Maltese Measures.

1 Palm = 10.3125 inches.
 8 Palmi = 1 canna = 6 ft. 10½ inches.
 1 sq. Canna = 47.26 sq. feet.
 256 sq. Canna = 1 tumulo = 6 mondelli = 12.100 sq. feet.
 1 mondello = 10 misure.
 1 acre = 3 tumuli, 3 mondelli, 6 misure.

Sudan.—See Egypt.

South Africa.

The Metric System is compulsory in the case of chemists, and is permissible (along with British weights and measures) in other cases. In addition, the following old Dutch measures are still used:—Liquid Measure: Leaguer = about 228 Imperial gallons; half aum = 15½ Imperial gallons; anker = 7½ Imperial gallons. Capacity: Muid = 3 bushels. The general surface measure is Morgen, equal to 2,126.400 acres; 1,000 Cape lineal feet are equal to 1.233 British feet. The short ton of 2,000 lb. is used.

FOREIGN WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

The Metric System has been adopted by the whole of Europe (except Great Britain) and is permissive in all countries.

China.

Tael weight	= 1.33 oz.	Ch'ih	= 1.75 feet.

Egypt.

The Metric System of Weights and Measures and the foot and pound and their multiples, are legal in Egypt. The foot and pound are rarely used and the Metric System is little known except in the large towns.

The Weights and Measures in common use, with their British equivalents, are as follows:—

Length—

Dra Baladi (used for pise goods)	= 29.83 inches
Dra Mamari, or Pic (used by architects)	= 29.33 inches
Qasaba (used for agricultural land)	= 11.65 feet

Area—

1 Qiraf	= 209.3 sq. yards; 1 Feddau (= 24 qirats) = 1.038 acres.
---------	--

1 Kéla	= 0.454 bushel; 1 Ardeh (= 12 kélas) = 5.444 bushels.

Weight—

1 Roti	= 0.99 lb.; 1 Oke = 2.75 lb.; 1 Qantar (= 100 rotis) = 99.05 lb.
--------	--

A Qantar of unguined cotton = 315 lb., of ginned cotton = 306 lb.; an Ardeh of wheat = 130 kilogrammes, of barley = 120 kilogrammes, of beans = 125 kilogrammes, of maize = 120 kilogrammes, of whole lentils = 127 kilogrammes, of split lentils = 123 kilogrammes.

Germany.

The Metric System.

Old Prussian Land Measure.

Morgen (3090 sq. yds. or 0.63 English acre) is still in general use.

Greece.

1 ocque	= 2.84 lb.	1 livre	= 1.2 lb.

Old Russian Measures.

Standard of length the Sajen, equal to seven British feet; standard of weight the Funt = 0.9088 lb.

16 verшок	= 1 arshin.
3 arshin	= 1 sajén.
500 sajén	= 1 verst.
1 verst	= 1.06666 yards (0.6666 mile).

Surface.

1 sq. verшок	= 3.0865 sq. inches.
1 sq. arshin	= 5.4444 sq. feet
1 sq. sajén	= 5.4444 sq. yards.
1 sq. verst	= 0.4394 sq. miles

Weight.

1 zolotnik	= 65.3266 grains.
3 zolotnik	= 1 loth.
32 loth	= 1 punt.
40 punt	= 1 pood (66.1128 lb.).
10 poods	= 1 berkovatz.

Capacity.

1 tcharka	= 0.2164 pint.
1 shloff (10 tcharkas)	= 1.0822 quarts.
1 vedro (10 shloffs)	= 2.705 British gallons.
1 chetvert (8 chetveriks)	= 5.771 British bushels.

Siam.

EXAMPLE 1.—What is the present value of a Lease having 37 years to run of the net annual value of £200. interest being reckoned at 4 per cent. ? ANSWER.—19 14 years' purchase, or £1,914.

EXAMPLE 2.—A man, aged 55, in the receipt of a pension or annuity of £200 a year net, wishes to commute that for a present payment, interest being reckoned at 5 per cent. How much will he receive? ANSWER.—Looking at the Table of Expectation of Life (q v.), it will be seen that the expectation for age 55 is about 17 years; and from the above table an annuity certain for 17 years interest at 5 per cent., is worth 17 27 years purchase. The present payment required would therefore be £1,27 approximately.

Note to Example 2.—This method is only approximate. The value of annuities which depend on lives of a given present age, when properly calculated according to a given mortality table and a given rate of interest, are always somewhat less than those given by the method used in this example.

REPAYMENT OF PUBLIC LOANS.

SUMS needed annually for the liquidation of a debt (principal and interest) of £100, at the stated percentage, in 5 to 80 years. If the loan be for £1,000, each annual instalment must be multiplied by 10, and so on. Thus, a Municipal Loan of £1,000,000 at 5 per cent., repayable in 80 years, would cost the ratepayers £51,031 5s. annually for that period, and would then be extinguished.

REDEMPTION OF CAPITAL

BY ANNUAL PAYMENTS.

THE following are the rates charged by certain first-class Insurance Companies for "Redemption Policies," to secure the payment of £100 in return for so many annual premiums, e.g., an Insurance Company will undertake to pay £100 on Midsummer Day, 1951, in return for the payment of £2 5s. 2d. on Midsummer Day, 1923, and each year afterwards until 1950, or 28 payments in all; for £1,000 the annual premium would be £22 11s. 8d., and so on. This table is of particular interest to purchasers of Leasehold property, as it enables such purchasers to see, at a glance, the amount to be paid out of the income from the property for a redemption policy to provide the sum originally expended (with a margin for dilapidations, if necessary), by the time the leasehold interest has expired.

THE RULE OF THE ROAD.

The Rule of the Road is a paradox quite,
For in driving your carriage along,
If you bear to the left you are sure to go right,
If you bear to the right you go wrong.
But in walking the streets 'tis a different case,
To the right it is right you should steer,
On the left should be left enough of clear space
For the people who wish to walk there.

THE WALKER'S MAXIMS.

(From The Times, April 9, 1930).
Two rules the walker must obey
If he would reach his home to-day—
On roadway always keep the Right
On Footpath just the op-po-site.

G. BUCKSTON BROWNE.

THE RULE OF THE ROAD AT SEA.

1. Two steamships meeting.

When both side-lights you see ahead,
Port your helm, and show your RED.

2. Two steamships passing.

GREEN to GREEN, or RED to RED,
Perfect safety—Go a-head!

3. Two steamships crossing.

If to your starboard RED appear,
It is your duty to keep clear;
To act as judgment says is proper:—
To Port—or Starboard—Back, or Stop her.
But when upon your port is seen
A Steamer's starboard light of GREEN,
There's not so much for you to do,
For GREEN to Port keeps clear of you.
Both in safety and in doubt,
Always keep a good look-out;
In danger, with no room to turn,
Ease her—stop her—go astern.

Scotland in 1921 showed longevity, both of males and females, less than England and Wales at all ages, ranging from 25.4 years and 23.3 years at birth to fractions of a year at later ages, but while at every age women's longevity exceeds that of men in Scotland the excess is much less marked than in England. In Ireland up to 1911 the longevity of males up to 25 and over 25 years was less than in England, but between ages 25 and 65 was greater. Of females the Irish longevity was consistently less than that of England, except for the ages 55 to 75. Northern Ireland in 1921 showed remarkable improvements over 1911 as regards longevity, and again high figures for males of 55 and over were repeated, though less prominently, England having improved in the decade of years 1911-1921. The 1921 Census in the I.F.S. showed further improvements, except that the figures for females were disappointing, ranging from 26.1 years to 2.25 years below the improvements shown in England and Wales at various ages. The ratio of females to males in I.F.S. is also small, being 973 to 1,000.

IMPERIAL POLITICS.

(For Parliament see pp. 254-8).

(1932) Nov. 1. As final stage of War Loan conversion scheme, Government announced £300,000,000 3 per cent. loan at 97½. 7. Report of Royal Commission on Unemployment Insurance recommended dual system of relief, providing help after insurance rights are exhausted, and establishment of a statutory Commission. Adjustments of contributions and benefits were estimated to result in saving of £14,000,000 a year. 8. Government's new rules for operation of means test issued. 17. Third Indian Round Table Conference opened by Prime Minister. After passage of Ottawa Agreements Bill, Order was issued bringing parts of it into operation. 24. Committee on Local Expenditure issued report suggesting local expenditure could be reduced by £35,000,000 to £40,000,000, proposals including additional saving of £4,000,000 on education and cut of £5,000,000 in salaries of local government employees. Dec. 2. Britain made strong representations to Persian Government against cancellation of the oil concession. 11. Britain agreed to pay American Debt instalment, not as resumption of the annual payments, but as a capital payment of which account should be taken in any final settlement. 12. Final Note explained that these conditions related solely to Britain's position. 15. Mr. R. C. Norman, Viscount Bridgeman and Mrs. Mary Hamilton appointed Governors of B.B.C. in place of Lord Gainsford, Dr. Montague Landell and Lady Suowien. 24. Third India Round Table Conference ended. Sir Samuel Hoare declaring Government would do its utmost to remove quickly every obstacle in way of federation. (1933) Jan. 9. Interim report of Royal Commission on Lotteries and Betting recommended that totalisator betting in clubs and on greyhound tracks should be declared illegal, and declared totalisator clubs a grave social menace. Advisory Council for the Post Office set up. 10. National candidate won Exchange division of Liverpool from Labour, but by greatly reduced majority. Feb. 2. Mr. J. H. Stewart, National Liberal, retained East Fife, defeating four other candidates. 6. Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador to United States, arrived in London and consulted with Premier and other Ministers on debts question. 7. Parliamentary Liberal Party decided not to go into opposition. 13. Prime Minister announced that Government had decided to discontinue policy of attempting to deal with unemployment by system of State-assisted relief works. 16. Vote of censure on Government defeated in House of Commons by 414 to 49. 22. Mr. P. J. Pybus, Minister of Transport, resigned, and was succeeded by Mr. Oliver Stanley. Mr. Douglas Haig becoming Parliamentary Under-Secretary. 27. Committee appointed to consider the question recommended that income tax should be paid by co-operative societies on all trading, but not on discount on purchases. 28. Labour won Rotherham from Conservatives. March 2. Army Estimates totalled £37,950,000, increase of £1,450,000.

8. Air Estimates raised by £26,000 to £17,426,000. 9. Navy Estimates amounted to £53,570,000, increase of £3,093,700, due to new building programme of 21 warships, including four cruisers. 13. Mr. Lloyd George, addressing Free Church demonstration at Sheffield, urged the Churches to cry "Halt" to war before it was too late. 17. Government's proposals for new Indian constitution, published as a White Paper, gave self-government to India, subject to safeguards, and provided for creation of responsibly-governed federation of States and Provinces, with Federal Legislature of two Chambers and eleven Provincial Legislatures. Defence, external affairs and ecclesiastical affairs were reserved. Government retained Ashford division in triangular contest. 20. Owing to arrest of British subjects in Moscow, negotiations for commercial treaty with Russia were suspended. 31. Financial year closed with Budget deficit of £32,779,000, including payment of war debt to United States. April 2. Sir Edmond Ovey, British Ambassador to Moscow, arrived in London and conferred with Sir John Simon on arrests of British subjects. 6. Membership of Joint Select Committee to examine Indian government plan announced. Mr. Churchill declined to serve. Import Duties Advisory Committee issued draft scheme for reorganisation of iron and steel industry submitted by committee of the industry. 12. Lord Linlithgow elected chairman of Indian Joint Committee. 15. Mr. MacDonald and his daughter left England for Washington. 19. Few hours after trial of Britons at Moscow proclamation was signed by the King prohibiting importation of large number of Russian goods, including timber and petrol. 23. Three Britons expelled from Russia and Mr. Gregory warmly welcomed on arrival in London. 24. Anglo-Danish trade agreement signed in London. 25. The Budget introduced. Embargo on Russian imports came into force. 27. Anglo-German trade agreement published and Anglo-Argentine agreement initiated. May 2. Lord Trenchard, Commissioner of Metropolitan Police, in his report, urged direct recruitment for higher posts of men from outside the service, and criticised "attempts to stir up discontent" in Police Federation. 3. Prime Minister arrived home from United States. 11. Government's new plan for Metropolitan Police included institution of new officer class recruited from Universities and public and secondary schools and trained at a police college, ten years' service for section of the Force, swifter promotion, and restriction of activities of Police Federation. 12. Mr. Churchill attacked White Paper plan for India at Manchester. Organising Committee of World Economic Conference accepted United States tariff truce proposal with reservations and decided to urge other nations to agree to its immediate coming into force. 15. Trade agreements with Sweden and Norway signed. 19. National Liberal Conference at Scarborough carried resolution expressing view that Sir Herbert Samuel and his colleagues in Parliament should sit on Opposition benches. June 5. Royal Commission on Lotteries and Betting in final report recommended legalisation of cash betting by post, and restriction of newspaper competitions for forecasting results of sporting events. They made proposals to check growth of greyhound racing and declared large lotteries to be undesirable, adding that if they were permitted least objectionable form was State lottery for benefit of Exchequer. Hitchin returned Conservative by reduced majority. 10. Government decided to offer "token payment" for United States debt instalment. 12. World Economic Conference inaugurated in London by speech of welcome by the King, who appealed to all the delegates to co-operate for sake of the ultimate good of the whole world. Mr MacDonald followed with plea for rapidity of agreement. 13. Chief delegates to the Conference made their opening speeches. 14. Mr. Chamberlain announced that Britain would pay 10,000,000 dollars in silver, obtained from Government of India, as instalment of debt to United States. Chancellor placed Britain's proposals for world recovery before Economic Conference, and declared action must be taken simultaneously in monetary, financial and economic spheres, and that final settlement of reparations and war debts was essential. 15. Conference set up Monetary and Financial Commission with Governor Cox as chairman and Economic Commission with M. Colijn as chairman. 19. The two Commissions began work. 22. Announced that United States Government considered that measures of temporary stabilisation would be untimely. 28. By 838 votes to 356, Conservative Central Council, meeting in London, supported Mr. Baldwin and endorsed Government's action in submitting problem of India to Joint Committee. 30. Gold countries asked United States to agree to certain currency proposals. July 1. Negotiations between Sir John Simon and M. Litvinoff resulted in commutation by the Soviet of sentences on Mr. Thornton and Mr. MacDonald, and British embargo against Russian imports was at once lifted. American delegation to Conference announced Mr. Roosevelt's rejection of proposed compromise on currency question. 3. Mr. Roosevelt's Note read to the Conference referred to "specious fallacy" of temporary stabilisation and led to suggestions to wind up the Conference. 6. Proposal to adjourn the Conference rejected by the Bureau. 17. Mr. Lloyd George entertained at luncheon to celebrate 21st anniversary of National Health Insurance. 27. World Economic Conference went into "recess," Mr. MacDonald declaring that it was not a finish. Efforts to open up way for discussion of tariffs and quotas must be renewed, he said. THE DERBY, 1890-1933.

For particulars of the Derby from 1780-1889 see 1921 edition.

The Distance of the Derby course at Epsom is now exactly 1 mile 4 furlongs, having been shortened 20 yards by the rounding off of Tattenham Corner. Sir J. Hawley scored four successes with Teedinton, Beaulman, Mugil, and Blue Gown, the second and third being consecutive victories. The late Duke of Westminster also scored four wins with Bend Or, Shotover, Ormoude, and Flying Fox. Lady James Douglas was the first lady to win the Derby.

COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP TABLE, 1933.

1933 Commenced—Win, 15 pts; each In Drawn Games—Side leading on 1st innings, 5 pts; side losing on 1st innings, 3 pts; no result on 1st innings, 4 pts each; Scores equal on 1st innings, 4 pts each. Where there is no play on the first two days the match will come under the law for one day games, except that a side may not declare its first innings closed until it has batted for at least sixty minutes. In this case, should the match be decided on the first innings, the winners will score ten points and their opponents three points. Matches in which no play takes place will not be included in the table.

OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE.

Principal Events and Winners, 1933.

The first Cricket Match between Oxford and Cambridge was on June 4, 1887, on Lord's Ground; the result was "unfinished." Annual contests started in 1896.
 In Rowing, Oxford and Cambridge met in 1889 at Henley (Hambleton Lock to Henley Bridge, 21 miles), and Oxford won easily in 14 min. 30 sec. The next match was in 1896 from Westminster to Putney, and Cambridge won in 36 min., but for several years Henley Regatta was used for the match. The first regularly annual race on the tide-way was in 1896.
 The Athletic Sports were instituted in 1894, and the first meeting was on Christ Church Cricket Ground. Since 1896, London has always been the ground.

The British Empire.

AREA AND POPULATION.

Continental Distribution.	English Square Miles.	Estimated Population.
In Europe	121,512	48,000,000
In Asia	1,824,550	365,000,000
In Africa	4,652,000	60,000,000
In North America	3,893,020	9,000,000
In Central America	8,600	50,000
In the West Indies	12,300	2,000,000
In South America	97,800	320,000
In Oceania	3,300,000	9,000,000
Total	13,909,782	493,370,000

GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION.—The British Empire occupies over one-quarter of the known surface of the globe, and its population exceeds one-quarter of the estimated number of the human race. The total area is distributed almost equally over the Northern and Southern Hemispheres, but more than two-thirds lie in the Eastern and less than one-third in the Western Hemisphere.

ETHNOLOGY.—The estimated white population of the Dominions in 1931 was 70,000,000, mainly British and Irish, but partly French, Dutch, and Spanish. The remaining 430,000,000 include 360,000,000 of the native races of India and Ceylon, 40,000,000 black races, 6,000,000 Arabs, 6,000,000 Malays, 1,000,000 Chinese, and 1,000,000 Polynesians, with various other elements, including 100,000 "Red Indians" in Canada.

RELIGIONS.—Of the total population over 220,000,000 are Hindus, 100,000,000 Muhammadans, 80,000,000 Christians (67,000,000 Protestants, 13,000,000 Roman Catholics), 12,000,000 Buddhists, 12,000,000 Animists, 4,000,000 Sikhs, Jains and Parsees, 750,000 Jews, and the remainder with tribal religions.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT.—There is no fundamental law upon which the Constitution of the British Empire rests, but there are three main principles underlying its administration, viz., self-government, self-support, and self-defence. The first of these principles has been applied for many years, and is fully developed in the case of Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, and the Irish Free State. The second principle is equally developed, almost every unit being financially self-supporting, and few requiring aid from the central Government. The third principle is of modern growth, and may be said to be the outcome of the Imperial Conference.

THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.—The origin of the Imperial Conference may be traced to the presence in London (in 1889) of the Prime Ministers of the various Dominions, at the celebrations of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria. Similar gatherings took place in London in 1897, 1902, 1907 and 1911, and in 1907 the title of "Colonial" Conference was changed to Imperial Conference. At the earlier meetings the Colonial Secretary presided, but with the change of title additional importance was given to the assembly by the assumption of the Presidency by the Prime Minister of Great Britain. In 1917 and 1928 the Conference, which was held concurrently with the sessions of the Imperial War Cabinet, was called the Imperial War Conference, and was held under the Chairmanship of the Secretary of State for the Colonies. In 1921, the Premiers' Conference, under the Presidency of the Prime Minister of Great Britain, discussed all matters of general interest to the Empire as a whole. The constitution of the Conference, which again met in 1923, 1926 and 1930, is as follows:—The Prime Ministers and other Ministers of the United Kingdom, Canada, Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, the Irish Free State, and Newfoundland, the Secretary of State for India and other representatives of India. The Secretariat of the Conference is provided by the Governments represented.

SELF-GOVERNMENT.—(1) Great Britain.—The Constitution recognises certain great principles, including the fair administration of justice, the prohibition of taxation without the consent of the people, and a limited monarchy, the power of the monarch being, in effect, wielded by a Ministry supported by a majority of the House of Commons, the members of which House are elected on a wide franchise, exercised by electors of both sexes. The component parts of the British Government are the King; the Legislature (House of Lords and House of Commons); the Executive, appointed by the Sovereign and responsible to Parliament; and the Judicature.

(2) The Indian Empire.—India is governed by the King as Emperor, acting on the advice of the Secretary of State for India, who is assisted by a Council whose members are appointed by the Secretary of State. The latter is responsible to, and represents the authority of, Parliament. Subject to the Secretary of State's direction, the supreme executive authority in India is the Governor-General and his Executive Council, with a legislature of two houses, the Council of State of 60 members (of whom not more than 20 are government officials), and the Legislative Assembly of 145 members (25 official).

(3) Imperial Dominions.—Until 1931, all British Dominions were subject (except as regards taxation) to the legislation of the British Parliament, but no Act of Parliament affected a Dominion unless that Dominion was specially mentioned, and if the legislature of a Dominion enacted a law which was repugnant to an Imperial law affecting the Dominion, it was to the extent to which it was repugnant absolutely void. The Statute of Westminster (which received the Royal Assent Dec. 21, 1931) removed the restrictions on legislative autonomy of the self-governing Dominions. Dominion legislatures may be controlled by the refusal of the Governor's assent to any measure passed; by reservation of a measure for the consideration of the Crown, and refusal of the Crown's assent; by a suspensory clause and the refusal of the Royal assent. Subject to such control the parliament of a self-governing Dominion exercises within its borders all the ordinary powers of a sovereign assembly. The Imperial Dominions may be divided into four classes, according to the way in which they are governed:—

(a) Those having Dominion Status. Where "Dominion Status" is enjoyed the executive is entrusted to political chiefs who are responsible, not merely or mainly to the Crown, but to the elected legislature of the Dominion. The Dominions thus governed are Canada, Newfoundland, Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, and the Irish Free State. Malta and Southern Rhodesia have "responsible government," but certain powers are reserved.

(b) Where there is government by legislative assembly wholly or partly elected, and an executive council nominated by the Crown or the Governor representing the Crown. In this class may be placed Northern Rhodesia, the Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Guiana, Jamaica, Leeward Islands, and Mauritius.

(c) Where there is government by a Governor acting with an executive and a legislative council, the councils being nominated by the Crown or a Governor representing the Crown. Dependencies so governed include Ceylon, Falkland Islands, Fiji, Gambia, Gibraltar, Kenya, Nigeria, St. Vincent, Sierra Leone, Straits Settlements, Tanganyika, Trinidad.

(d) Wherein both legislative and executive powers are vested in the Governor alone. In this class are Labuan and St. Helena, where power is also reserved to the Crown to legislate by Order in Council. In South Africa, Bechuanaland, Basutoland, and Swaziland are governed in substantially the same way, but no power is reserved to the Crown.

(e) Protectorates. The protectorates are countries which, as regards their foreign relations, are under the exclusive control of the Crown. The protectorates of the British Empire include Nyasaland, Somaliland, Swaziland, Uganda.

(f) Spheres of Influence. A sphere of influence may be described as an area wherein other Powers undertake not to attempt to acquire influence or territory by treaty or annexation; such British spheres exist in the Persian Gulf and in Arabia.

(g) Mandatory Spheres, where the responsibility for securing good government and a reasonable development of natural resources is confided to an already established government by mandate from the League of Nations. Such British spheres are parts of the former German Colonies in West Africa, and the former Turkish government of Palestine.

SELF-SUPPORT.—With but few exceptions the British Dominions are self-supporting, revenue being raised locally to meet the expenditure. Occasional grants are made by the Central Government to meet exceptional expenditure, or in aid of administration in the earlier stages of development. Certain capital expenses are also undertaken from time to time by the Central Authority, e.g., the Nigerian purchase, the Uganda Railway, &c. No taxes are imposed on the subjects of a Dominion or Colony by the Central Government, as such subjects are not directly represented in the British House of Commons; this principle, "No taxation without representation," was the mainspring of the revolt in the North American Colonies at the close of the eighteenth century. Since that disastrous attempt to impose taxes without the consent of the taxpayers, the principle, which had for many years been accepted in Great Britain, has become an accepted maxim of British Overseas administration.

SELF-DEFENCE.—The Dominions, generally, provide for the defence of their immediate area, but the general strategical defence of the Empire is undertaken by the United Kingdom Government. Questions affecting general strategical defence are considered and determined by the Imperial Defence Committee, which co-ordinates the work of the sea, land and air forces. In the Great War of 1914-1918 the Dominions provided Armies or Contingents, which fought in every area and bore a full share of the sacrifices by which victory was achieved. The land and air forces of the Dominions are maintained at the expense of the Dominions concerned. The amounts provided for Naval Defence in the estimates of the under-mentioned parts of the Empire for the year 1930-31 are as follows:—Great Britain £51,739,000; Canada $3,600,000; Australia £1,778,633; New Zealand £675,480 (including £125,000 as a contribution towards the Naval Base at Singapore, and £100,000 interest and sinking fund on account of H.M.S. New Zealand); Union of South Africa £28,580. The proportion of expenditure on Naval Defence to the total Import and Export trade of these parts of the Empire is as follows: Great Britain 3·04 per cent.; Canada 0·15 per cent.; Australia 1·06 per cent.; New Zealand 0·77 per cent.; Union of South Africa 0·043 per cent. Per caput of population the expenditure is, Great Britain £1 ss. 7d.; Canada 36 cents; Australia 5s. 6d.; New Zealand 9s. 2d.; Union of South Africa (European population only) 10½d. As regards Colonies not possessing responsible governments, contributions to Imperial Defence are paid to the War Office.

THE LEGISLATURE.—The Parliament of Great Britain is the supreme legislative authority of the Empire. This Parliament has, with the consent of the King-Emperor, delegated its legislative authority to other parliaments constituted by itself, while retaining a general supervision of Imperial affairs. The Secretaries of State for the Dominions and Colonies are Cabinet Ministers, their active participation in the government of the nations of the Empire decreasing with the measure of self-government accorded to each. Parliament also exercises a control over Indian affairs through a Secretary of State.

THE JUDICATURE.—The Supreme Judicial Authority of the Empire is the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, before which appeals may be brought (in the form of a petition to the Crown) from Consular Courts and Courts of Vice-Admiralty, and from the Courts of India and every British Dominion. The Committee (see p. 330) consists of such members of the Privy Council as have held or are holding high judicial office, provision being made for the inclusion of representatives of India and the self-governing Dominions. India and the Dominions have each a judicial system, with judges appointed by the Crown. The Supreme Judicial Authority for Great Britain and Northern Ireland is the House of Lords.

EDUCATION.—Universities (see pp. 406-417) and University Colleges have been established and degrees are conferred. Under the will of Cecil Rhodes scholarships were founded at Oxford, his old University, for students from the British Dominions and Colonies, the United States of America, and Germany. Rhodes Scholarships, of the annual value of £400 tenable at any college at Oxford, are awarded in each of the United States, in each State or Province of Canada, Australia and South Africa (where there are also scholarships for Rhodesia and for certain towns and schools in Cape Colony), in New Zealand, Newfoundland, Jamaica, Bermuda and Malta. The normal number in residence together is about 196, of whom 100 come from the British Empire and 96 from America. Secretary to the Rhodes Trustees, The Marquess of Lothian, C.B., 17, Waterloo Place, London, S.W.1. Oxford Secretary, Dr. C. K. Allen, M.A., Rhodes House, Oxford.

Statistics issued by the Universities Bureau of the British Empire show that the total number of students from overseas attending Universities and Colleges in the United Kingdom at the beginning of the 1932-33 session was 4,915, of whom 836 are from Africa, 1,157 from America, 1,849 from Asia, 792 from Europe, and 281 from the Pacific. The principal figures are: India, Burma, and Ceylon, 1,392; United States, 705; South Africa, 492; Egypt, 253; Australia, 177; Canada and Newfoundland, 213; Germany, 169; China, 153; West Indies, 154; New Zealand, 104; Russia, 80; France, 80; Japan, 47; Netherlands, 46; Poland, 43; Persia, 58; Switzerland, 50; Norway, 41.

The Davison Scholarships, established in 1923, have been withdrawn.

The Prince of Wales's Scholarships (founded 1932).—Two scholarships tenable for two years at Oxford University by selected students of the University of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Under The Commonwealth Fund (41 East 57th Street, New York, U.S.A.), established in 1918 by Mrs. Stephen V. Harkness, there are available for candidates of British descent a varying number of Fellowships, of an annual value of approximately $3,000 each, tenable for two years at certain American Universities. For 1934 they may be awarded as follows:

1. Twenty Fellowships open to men and women of British descent, unmarried, under thirty years of age on Sept. 1, domiciled in England, Scotland, Wales or Ireland and graduates of recognised universities therein;

2. Two Fellowships open to candidates of British descent from the British Dominions who have studied, but not necessarily graduated, at a University in the United Kingdom or in the Irish Free State. Candidates must be graduates of a recognised University in a British Dominion or Colony, and must fulfil the conditions regarding age and marriage prescribed above, but need not show a domicile in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

3. Five Fellowships open to candidates of British descent who hold appointments overseas under the British Government, or the Government of India, or the Government of a British Dominion, Colony, Protectorate or Mandated Territory. Candidates may be single or married, but must not be more than thirty-five years of age on September 1 of the year of award.

FINANCE.—Complete financial autonomy is enjoyed, in fact, by all British Dominions, and customs tariffs are in most cases the principal source of revenue. The tariffs are generally lower for merchandise of British origin than for importations from foreign countries. There is no Imperial Debt, but certain obligations of Crown Colonies and Protectorates are met in the early stages of their development by the central Government, and occasional grants in aid of revenue are also made at need. Advances so made and still outstanding are shown under the heading "National Debt" (see Index).

Stocks authorised under the Colonial Stock Act 1900 are Trustee Securities, and the price at which some of them may be obtained is shown on p. 550.

PRODUCTION.—Canada, India, Australia, and Great Britain are the principal wheat-producing units. Barley, oats, rice and maize, and tea, coffee and rubber are largely cultivated, while more than half the world's output of cocoa is produced in British Dominions. Cane sugar is produced in India (for local consumption), West Indies, Australia, New Zealand, Natal, and Mauritius, and beet sugar in Great Britain, Canada and elsewhere. Fruit is grown in most of the Dominions and figures largely in the sales of the London Fruit Exchange (Spitalfields). Meat is produced in large quantities in New Zealand, Australia and South Africa. Australia and New Zealand are the greatest wool-producing countries of the world, and the output of coal in Great Britain exceeds that of every country except the U.S.A.; coal is also abundant in Australia, Canada, India and South Africa. Cotton is extensively grown in India, West Africa, East Africa, Sudan, West Indies, and in the tropical parts of Australia; chemical and mechanical wood pulp for paper-making is extensively produced in Canada and Newfoundland. Iron ore is found in many of the Dominions, and pig iron is largely produced; tin is produced mainly within the Commonwealth (particularly in the Malay peninsula), while 70 per cent. of the world's supply of gold is drawn from South and South-West Africa, Australia, New Zealand and Canada; it is produced also in Borneo, British East Africa, British Guiana, Ceylon, India, Malay States, Sarawak, Sudan, and West Africa. Precious stones are found in various parts of the Commonwealth, South Africa producing the principal supply of diamonds, and India of rubies and emeralds. Petroleum is produced in India, Trinidad and Canada.

CENSUS POPULATION OF THE BRITISH ISLANDS.

Previous to 1801 there existed no official return of the population of either England or Scotland; nor was it till 1833 that statesmen had anything more than surmise to guide them respecting Ireland, and the census then taken of that country was far from correct. The estimate formed of the English population at various periods, calculated from the numbers of baptisms, burials, and marriages, was in the years—

1570.....4,160,221	1670.....5,773,646
1600.....4,811,718	1700.....6,045,008
1630.....5,600,517	1750.....6,517,035

The first general Census of Great Britain and Ireland was taken in 1801, and since the time named there has been a fresh numbering every ten years, with the following results:

1801.....16,345,646	1871.....31,629,299
1811.....18,509,116	1881.....35,026,108
1821.....20,983,022	1891.....37,880,764
1831.....24,132,294	1901.....41,609,091

1851.....27,533,755	1921.....42,769,196
1861.....29,070,932	1931.....44,790,485

*. The population of Great Britain and Ireland a month before the outbreak of the Great War was officially estimated at 46,089,249. The number of persons to the square mile was in 1921: England and Wales, 649; Scotland, 164; Ireland (1911), 135.6.

CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

THE BRITISH CONSTITUTION.—The British Constitution is mainly unwritten and customary, but its development is marked by certain outstanding and fundamental laws, of which the principal are Magna Carta (1215), which secured annual Parliaments and the equal administration of justice; the Habeas Corpus Act (1679), securing the liberty of the person; the Act of Settlement (1701), providing for the Protestant succession to the throne; the Act of Union with Scotland (1707), the Act of Union with Ireland (1800), the Parliament Act (1911), which enabled the Commons to pass certain Acts without the concurrence of the other chamber; the Government of Ireland Act (1920), the Irish Free State (Agreement) Act, 1922, and The Statute of Westminster (1931).

1. The Sovereign.—The throne is hereditary in the British house of Windsor with mixed succession, the sons of the Sovereign and their descendants having precedence of daughters, but daughters and their descendants preference over lateral lines. The Monarchy is constitutional and limited. The King has a right to veto Bills passed by both Houses of Parliament, but in practice his veto is almost obsolete. "The King can do no wrong" is a maxim of the Constitution, and consequently no action for civil wrong will lie against the Crown. A petition of right will, however, enable an injured subject to obtain redress, while, if in the administration of an Act of Parliament a Government department exceeds its rights, a declaration of right may be obtained in an action against the Attorney-General.

2. The Legislature.—Parliament consists of two Houses, the Lords and the Commons. From 1803 until 1888 reports of the proceedings of Parliament were issued under the title of Hansard's Parliamentary Debates. The proceedings are open to the Press, and are now officially reported, copies of the reports being obtainable from H.M. Stationery Office.

(a) The House of Lords consists of peers. A peer may hold his seat by (1) hereditary right, (2) creation by the King, (3) official position or election. English bishops (24), Irish peers (28) elected for life, and Scottish peers (26) elected for duration of Parliament, also sit in the House of Lords.

The powers of the House of Lords were much restricted by the Parliament Act, 1911. Thus, if a Money Bill is not passed unamended by the House of Lords within a month of its being sent up, it becomes law upon the Royal assent being signified. A Public Bill other than a Money Bill will become law without the consent of the Lords if it is passed by the Commons, and sent up to the Lords, in three successive sessions, provided two years elapse between the date of the second reading in the Commons in the first session and the date when it is passed by that body in the third session. Passing a Bill with amendments by the House of Lords is equivalent to rejection, unless the Commons approve the amendments. Any Bill by which the maximum duration of Parliament is increased is excepted from this Act. Members of the House of Lords are unpaid.

(b) The House of Commons.—This body consists of 625 elected members. The maximum duration of Parliament is five years. Members receive salaries of £400 and travelling facilities over the railways.

3. The Executive.—The Crown (the King in Council) "makes peace and war, issues charters, increases the peerage, is the fountain of honour, of office, and of justice." The Cabinet, under the presidency of the Prime Minister, consists of Ministers appointed by the Sovereign on the advice of the Prime Minister; Ministers receive salaries of varying amounts. The Cabinet has no corporate existence. Ministers are severally responsible to Parliament for their actions, and the Cabinet as a whole is responsible to Parliament for its joint and several administration. Ministers hold their office during the Sovereign's pleasure; they may be dismissed at any moment (see WHITAKER'S ALMANACK 1932, pp. 824-826—"Government by Party," 1888-1931).

4. The Judicature.—(a) England and Wales.—The laws in England and Wales are administered by judges appointed by the Crown, who hold office for life, and cannot be removed save on petition presented by both Houses of Parliament. Two Courts of Appeal hear appeals from the High Court, the ultimate Court of Appeal from all the courts in Great Britain being the House of Lords. Civil cases arising in London and Middlesex are tried at the High Court in London, but civil cases arising in the country are tried on circuit by judges of the King's Bench at the Assizes. The Chancery division has exclusive jurisdiction to try certain classes of actions. To the County Courts is relegated the duty of trying actions where the sum in dispute does not exceed a certain amount. The County Courts, too, have jurisdiction to try cases arising under certain special Acts of Parliament, e.g., the Workmen's Compensation Act. Bankruptcy cases arising in London are heard in the London Bankruptcy Court; those arising out of London are dealt with in the County Courts.

With regard to criminal law it is a general principle that, except for certain minor offences, every person charged is entitled to be tried by a jury. Courts of criminal jurisdiction in England are: (1) The judges of the High Court sitting at Assizes for the trial of cases out of London; and at the Central Criminal Court ("The Old Bailey"), for the trial of cases arising in and around London. (2) Courts of Quarter Sessions, holden for every county, and formed of justices of the peace, presided over by a chairman. The recorders of certain cities and boroughs have a jurisdiction similar to that of courts of Quarter Sessions. (3) Courts of Petty Sessions, consisting of at least two justices of the peace or a stipendiary magistrate. (4) The Court of Criminal Appeal has power to hear appeals against convictions and sentences.

(b) Scotland.—Scots civil law is administered by the Court of Session, which is a court of law and equity. The High Court of Justiciary is the supreme criminal court in Scotland. It consists of all the judges, and as a rule it is confined to the trial of serious cases. The Sheriff of the county exercises functions which correspond to those of the English County Court Judges and the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions. Burgh magistrates and justices of the peace have jurisdiction in petty cases.

(c) Northern Ireland.—The higher courts in Northern Ireland are very similar to the English courts, but the County Court Judges are also the Chairmen of Quarter Sessions.

RELIGIONS AND LANGUAGES.

Religions and Languages.—The inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland are almost entirely Christians, the exceptions being about 300,000 Jews and a small number of non-Christian immigrants. In England the Church of England (with an Episcopal form of Government), and in Scotland the Church of Scotland (with a Presbyterian form of Government), are the "Established Religions." The Church was disestablished in Ireland in 1869, and in Wales in 1920. There has been no religious census since 1851, but many of the religious bodies publish estimates of membership, and estimated figures for 1929 will be found on p. 384. The language of the people is English, with a large proportion of Welsh-speaking people in Wales, many of whom are bi-lingual. Attempts are being made to revive the Gaelic language in the Irish Free State. Gaelic is still spoken in the Highlands and Islands of Scotland, there being 7,069 persons speaking Gaelic only (Ross and Cromarty 3,435, Inverness 2,223, Argyll 335, other counties 1,765), and 137,149 speaking Gaelic and English at the Census of 1931.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT.

Local Government is carried out under the central control of the Ministry of Health (which superseded the various Local Government Boards in 1929). The subjects which local bodies administer are, inter alia, education; the poor law; public health; police; the control of the sale of intoxicating liquors; the provision of lunatic asylums. The ruling principle has been to entrust special interests to those specially interested. In England and Wales there are elective Councils for each Administrative County (under Chairmen), for each City and Borough (under Lord Mayors or Mayors), and for Urban and Rural Districts (under Chairmen), every parish being thus included. Scotland has elective County Councils under a Convener, Burgh Councils under a Lord Provost or Provost, or Parish Councils with Chairmen.

POLICE.

The strength of the Police force was 58,656 in England and Wales (1931), 6,656 in Scotland (1931), and 2,786 in Northern Ireland (1931). The Police of England and Wales are administered by the Home Office, those of Scotland by the Scottish Office. The LONDON POLICE consists of the City Police and of the Metropolitan Police. The City Police district comprises an area of 675 statute acres, and contains two courts of justice, those of the Guildhall and Mansion House, where the Lord Mayor and the Aldermen are the magistrates (see p. 337). Although the area is comparatively small, the rateable value is enormous. The night population is 20,896, but the day (or working) population is 436,721. The Force under the Commissioner comprises 1 Assistant Commissioner, 3 Superintendents, 7 Chief Inspectors, 25 Inspectors, 17 Sub-Inspectors, 123 Sergeants, and 983 Constables; also 28 Constables on private service duty. The City of London Police Hearns (Headquarters, Bunhill Row, E.C. 2) numbered 3,266 all ranks in Oct. 1931.

The Metropolitan Police district embraces an area of 447,626 statute acres, with a population of about 2,500,000. There are within this area fourteen Police Courts (see p. 338). The Force on Sept. 4, 1933, consisted of 33 Superintendents, 920 Inspectors, 2,777 Sergeants, and 16,624 Constables, making a total of 20,194, with 224 horses. The strength of the Metropolitan Special Constabulary Reserve and its Auxiliary Force on Sept. 4, 1933, was 12,076. The gross expenditure of the Metropolitan Police and Metropolitan Police Courts for the year 1932-33 was £8,595,764. On March 31, 1933, there were 14,500 Police pensioners, and 1,614 pensioned widows and 475 children.

596 CUSTOMS TARIFF OF GREAT BRITAIN AND NORTHERN IRELAND (1933-1934).

I.—IMPORT DUTIES ACT, 1932.

This Act provides that on and after 1st March, 1932, a duty equal to 10 per cent. of their value is imposed on all goods imported into the United Kingdom. The Act empowers the Import Duties Advisory Committee to recommend additional duties to the Treasury, who may by Order charge the same. Orders have been made covering additional duties on a considerable number of articles. The following goods are exempt:—

(a) Goods for the time being chargeable with a duty of customs by or under any enactment other than the Import Duties Act 1932, except composite goods of which some of the components are liable to such other customs duty. Such composite goods are chargeable under the Import Duties Act, 1932, only up to the amount, if any, by which the aggregate amount of the general ad valorem duty and the additional duty exceeds the other customs duty, unless it is otherwise expressly provided in the Schedules of additional duties.

(a) Goods which are consigned direct to a shipbuilding yard

LIFE INSURANCE.—Allowance of duty may be claimed on the amount of premiums paid for insurance of self or wife in approved Companies legally carrying on business in the United Kingdom, if not exceeding one-sixth of the net personal income; but the amount allowable in respect of any premium for securing a capital sum on death not to exceed 7 per cent. of the actual sum assured, nor in respect of any premium for securing any other benefits, more than £100 in all.

RESIDENTS ABROAD.—No exemption or other relief is given to persons not residing in the United Kingdom. Exceptions: British subjects, present or former servants of the Crown, widows whose late husbands were in the service of the Crown, missionaries, servants of native States under British protection, residents in the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man, and persons, previously resident in the United Kingdom, residing abroad for the sake of their health or the health of a member of their family.

DOMINION INCOME TAX.—Relief is granted under certain conditions in the case of a taxpayer who has paid, or is liable to pay, United Kingdom Income Tax on any part of his income, and who proves that he has paid Dominion Income Tax for the same year in respect of the same part of his income.

SCHOLARSHIPS.—Income from a scholarship held by a person receiving full-time instruction at a university, college, school, or other educational establishment is exempted from Income Tax (including Super-Tax).

STANDARD RATES OF INCOME TAX.—The Income Tax year is from April 6 to the following April 5. The following were the standard rates for the years mentioned:—

1931-32 and 1932-33	0	5	0

SUR TAX.—The Sur Tax replaced the Super Tax, which was levied up to and including the Super Tax Year 1928-9 (payable January 1, 1929), based on the statutory income of the year 1927-8. The Sur Tax is in effect a deferred instalment of Income Tax payable on January 1 after the end of the Income Tax year. Thus the first payment of Sur Tax was due January 1, 1930, and was the deferred instalment of Income Tax for the year 1928-9.

Sur Tax for the year 1932-33 (payable January 1, 1934), is at the following rates plus 10% of each rate on persons whose total incomes exceed £2,000:—

Notes on Income Tax.

Under the Finance Act of 1920 a radical alteration was made in the method of granting relief in the Income Tax in favour of earned income as compared with investment income, and in the method of graduating the burden of the tax according to the size of a taxpayer's income and his family responsibilities. The previously existing exemptions, abatements, and reliefs were replaced by the various reliefs set out below. In introducing the new system, the Act employed two terms not previously used in connection with the Income Tax, viz., "assessable income" and "taxable income."

"Assessable Income" means, in the case of "earned" income, the amount of such income as computed for Income Tax purposes, after deducting the amount of the "earned" income allowance mentioned below, and in the case of other income, the actual amount of such income as computed for Income Tax purposes.

"Taxable Income" means that part of the "assessable income" upon which Income Tax is actually charged, that is, the "assessable income" less the various deductions referred to below.

Deduction in arriving at Assessable Income. Earned Income Allowance.—The differentiation in favour of "earned" income is made by deducting one-fifth of the "earned" income in order to arrive at the assessable income. The deduction is given irrespective of the amount of the total income, but must not exceed £300 for any one individual. The "assessable income" of a taxpayer is, therefore, his total income, as computed for Income Tax purposes, after making the appropriate deduction in respect of any "earned" income.

An allowance is also made of one-fifth of the unearned income of persons of the age of 65 years and upwards whose total income does not exceed £500. This allowance is granted, in the case of a married couple, where either the husband or his wife, living with him, has attained the age of 65 years at the commencement of the year of assessment, but the joint total income must in such a case fall within the prescribed limits. Provision is also made for marginal relief, in order to avoid the hardship which would be involved when the total income falls just over the prescribed limit of £500.

Total Exemption.—Exemption from tax may be claimed where the total assessable income does not exceed £200, or, in the case of an individual whose wife is living with him, £350. Where the income is wholly earned, these limits are equivalent to £225 and £375 respectively. See above.

Deductions from Assessable Income in order to arrive at Taxable Income.—Where the taxpayer is not totally exempt, the following deductions may be claimed from the total assessable income in order to arrive at the "taxable income." The deductions may be claimed irrespective of the amount of the taxpayer's total income.

Personal allowance may be claimed of £200, or, in the case of an individual whose wife is living with him, £350.

Wife's Earned Income.—When a taxpayer's total income includes any earned income of his wife, the personal allowance of £350 is increased by a sum equal to four-fifths of the amount of such earned income, subject to a maximum additional allowance of £45.

Deduction for a Widower's (or Widow's) House-keeper taking Charge of Children.—A deduction of £50 may be claimed, under certain conditions, by a widower who has living with him a female relative for the purpose of having the charge and care of any child or adopted child of his in respect of whom the deduction for children (see p. 603) is given or in the capacity of a house-keeper or by a widow who has a female relative resident with her for the like purpose. If the widower or widow proves that he or she has no such female relative who is able or willing to take such charge, the same deduction may be claimed in respect of some other female person employed for that purpose.

Deduction in respect of Widowed Mother, &c., taking Charge of Children.—A deduction of £50 may be claimed, under certain conditions, by an unmarried Person who has living with him and maintains at his own expense either his mother (being a widow or living apart from her husband) or some other female relative, for the purpose of having the charge and care of any brother or sister of his in respect of whom the deduction for children or adopted children (see p. 603) is given.

Deduction for Children.—A deduction may be claimed in respect of each child, step-child, or adopted child under the age of 16 years, or who, if over that age, is receiving full-time instruction at any university, college, school, or other educational establishment. The deduction allowable is £50 in respect of one child, and £40 in respect of each additional child for whom the relief is due. No deduction is, however, allowed in respect of any child of adopted child who is entitled in his or her own right to an income which, after excluding any income to which the child is entitled as the holder of a scholarship, bursary, or other similar educational endowment, exceeds £50 a year.

Deduction in respect of Dependent Relatives.—A deduction of £25 may be claimed in respect of (a) any person whom the taxpayer maintains at his own expense, and who is a relative of his or of his wife, and incapacitated by old age or infirmity from maintaining himself or herself, or (b) his or his wife's widowed mother, whether incapacitated or not, or (c) a daughter who is resident with the taxpayer, and upon whose services he is compelled to depend, by reason of old age or infirmity. The deduction under (a) or (b) is conditional, however, upon the income of the dependent relative not exceeding £50 a year. The deduction applies in the case of a female taxpayer, with the substitution of "husband" for "wife" above.

Rates of Tax chargeable on the "Taxable Income."—The following provisions as to the rates of tax chargeable on the taxable income (i.e., that part of the income on which tax is actually charged) apply, whatever the total amount of the income. For the year ending Apr. 5, 1934, the first £175 of the taxable income is chargeable at 2s. 6d. in the £. The remainder of the taxable income is chargeable at the standard rate of tax, i.e., at 2s. in the £.

Relief in respect of Life Assurance Premiums.—Where allowance is due in respect of premiums paid for Life Assurance or for contracts for Deferred Annuities, the allowance is deducted from the amount of tax arrived at under the preceding paragraph, and calculated at following rates:—one-half the standard rate in the £ on the amount of the premium paid on policies taken out since June 28, 1926, irrespective of the claimant's total income; and on policies taken out before June 28, 1926, a deduction of tax at one-half the standard rate in the £ is allowed on the premiums paid by a claimant whose income does not exceed £1,000, of three-fourths of the standard rate in the £ where his income exceeds £1,000 and does not exceed £2,000, and at the standard rate in the £ where his income exceeds £2,000.

* Section 15 of the Revenue Act, 1911, provides that in cases where the consideration or any part of the consideration consists of any money, stock, or security (other than rent), the amount or value of which does not exceed £500, and the instrument contains a certificate that the transaction does not form part of a larger transaction or of a series of transactions in respect of which the consideration other than rent exceeds £500, duty shall be charged at half the rates set out under the heading "Conveyance or Transfer on sale of any property," &c.

The Section, however, does not apply in any case where part of the consideration for any lease or tack consists of rent, and that rent exceeds £20 a year.

LEGACY AND SUCCESSION DUTIES:—Also see "Estate Duty."

If the deceased died on or after the 1st June, 1881, every pecuniary Legacy or Residue, or share of Residue, although not of the amount or value of £50, is chargeable.—Except in the cases of small estates, see note to Estate Duty.

No succession duty is payable where the principal value of all the successions on the same death does not amount to £100.

To Husband or Wife or Children of the Deceased, or their Descendants, or to the Father or Mother or other Lineal Ancestor of the Deceased (see above)

£1 per cent

Exceptions.—Estates not exceeding £15,000.—Legacies and successions of less than £1,000 (£2,000 in the case of widow or child under the age of 21 of deceased), whatever may be value of whole estate.

To Brothers and Sisters of the Deceased, or their Descendants	£5 per cent.
To Brothers and Sisters of the Father or Mother of the Deceased, or their Descendants	£5 per cent.
To Brothers and Sisters of the Grandfather or Grandmother of the Deceased, or their Descendants	£5 per cent.
To any Person in any other degree of collateral Consanguinity, or to a Stranger in Blood to the Deceased	£5 per cent.

Where deceased died on or after 1 July, 1888, and Probate or Estate Duty is not payable, Succession Duties for the relationships above are at rates of 1½, 4½, 6½, 7½, and 11½ respectively. The Husband or Wife is chargeable with Estate Duty and Legacy and Succession Duty; and the Husband or Wife of a relation is chargeable at the rate at which the relation would be charged.

Penalties.—Persons paying or receiving without taking or signing a proper Receipt, or not giving notice of a succession, or not delivering an account, are subject to certain Penalties.

GAME AND GUN LICENCES.

GAME AND GUN LICENCES.—A licence is required by every person who hunts, shoots, or takes game, except persons (in Great Britain) taking woodcock and snipe with nets or springes; proprietors, or tenants, on enclosed land, killing rabbits; persons hunting deer, or hares, with hounds; owners or occupiers, or their servants, killing deer on their own enclosed land; beaters and others, not holding guns, attending holders of game licences. Occupiers of enclosed land, or owners, having the right to kill game, may themselves kill hares, or authorise others to do so, without a licence, but such authority must be limited to one person at a time in any one parish, and must be registered with the clerk of the Justices of the Petty Sessional Division in which the land is situate. Even when the quarry is not what is legally known as "game," a "gun" licence is necessary. A game licence, however, covers a gun licence. Sailors, soldiers, airmen, territorial soldiers, or constables, on duty or at practice, need not take out a gun licence, nor need occupiers of land scaring birds or killing vermin on such land, or persons so acting under the orders of occupiers holding a licence. Unless, however, the occupier is himself licensed, he cannot authorise any unlicensed person to carry a gun. "Scaring" birds is not to be regarded as including killing of any birds, and "vermin" does not include rabbits. The rates of duty are as follows :—

31st July and before 1st Nov., to expire on 31st July following	3 0 0
After 31st July, to expire following 31st October	2 0 0
After 31st Oct., to expire 31st July	2 0 0

Game-Dealer's Licence, to expire 1st July, annually	2 0 0
DEPUTATION or Appointment of a Gamekeeper	0 10 0
GUN LICENCES (gun, air gun or pistol) ...	0 10 0
A Firearm Certificate (5/- for the first, 2/6 subsequently—renewable every 3 years) is also necessary (with certain exceptions) for any person in possession of a firearm.

A person under 14 may not purchase or have in his possession any firearm other than a smooth-bore shot gun or air gun or air rifle.

DISTANCE OF THE HORIZON.

THE limit of distance to which one can see varies with the height of the spectator. The greatest distance at which an object on the surface of the sea, or of a level plain, can be seen by a person whose eyes are at a height of 5 feet from the same level is nearly 3 miles. At a height of 30 feet the range is increased to nearly 6 miles, and an approximate rule for finding the range of vision for small heights is to increase the square root of the number of feet that the eye is above the level surface by a third of itself, the result being the distance of the horizon in miles, but is slightly in excess of that in the table below, which is computed by a more precise formula. The table may be used conversely to show the distance of an object of given height that is just visible from a point in the surface of the earth or sea. Refraction is taken into account both in the approximate rule and in the Table.

STATE EXPENDITURE, 1932-33, 1933-34

The expenditure of the various departments of the State is met from two main sources, (1) supply grants, (2) receipts appropriated in aid. Together these form the gross expenditure for the year, the net expenditure being the amount raised by taxation for the particular purpose. The Estimated Expenditure given below accounts only for the net expenditure, after taking credit for receipts appropriated in aid of expenditure.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT DEBTS.

In addition to the National Debt there are considerable amounts outstanding as Loans of Local Authorities. These amounts were raised for the provision of baths, cemeteries, electricity supply, gasworks, harbours, piers, docks, canals and quays, light railways, markets, tramways, waterways and other purposes. On March 31, 1930, there were outstanding loans in England and Wales to the amount of £1,224,703,269; against the total the sum of £66,824,182 stood at the credit of various Sinking Funds. The total amount of outstanding loans and capitalized annuities in Scotland (on March 31, 1928) was £129,975,721, and in Northern Ireland (on March 31, 1932) £18,719,757.

Under the agreement of June 4, 1939 (Cmd. 4200) this instalment is repayable with interest at 4 per cent. by means of ten equal annuities of $19,445,500, commencing on December 15, 1933.

OTHER CAPITAL LIABILITIES.

These sums are not included in the capital on which interest is arranged for in the permanent charge. They consist of various loans contracted for Telegraph and Telephone extension, for the purchase of land for Government offices, &c. On March 31, 1933, these liabilities stood at £25,922,186, an increase of £1,925,040 upon the total for the previous year.

There are also sundry Contingent or Nominal Liabilities which the State is not likely to be called upon to any material extent to discharge. These liabilities consist of Unclaimed Dividends and unclaimed amounts due to suitors or to creditors of bankrupt estates.

Loans Guaranteed by British Government.—The Nominal Net Liability of the State in respect of loans guaranteed by the British Government was stated on March 31, 1933, to be as follows:—Turkish Loan, £1,428,125; Egyptian Loan, £3,517,200; Greek Loan, £8,279,100; Mauritius Loan, £600,000; Transvaal Loan, £15,627,347; Sudan Loan, £11,249,000; Welsh Church Loan, £1,906,333; Local Loans, £429,196,622; Irish Land Purchase Stock, £151,289,254; Ulster Savings Certificates, £1,279,145; 2½ per cent. of the Austrian Guaranteed Loan, secured on the gross receipts of Austrian Customs and Tobacco monopoly; Palestine Loan, £4,340,371; Tanganyika Loan, £5,520,704; and Nyassaland, £2,000,000.

Unrepaid Advances.—Against these Guaranteed Loans may be set the amounts remaining unpaid on March 31, 1933, on account of Advances made by Great Britain to various Governments, viz:—Crete, £40,000; Kenya and Uganda, £5,500,592; Nyassaland, £1,114,441; Persia, £245,000; Nauru and Ocean Islands, £1,698,450; Tanganyika, £1,976,666; Somaliland, £220,000; Transjordan, £13,147; Swaziland, £136,500; St. Lucia, £4,127; Dominica, £97,095; Nigeria, £865,568; British Guiana, £618,406; Antigua, £21,500; St. Kitts-Nevis, £10,000; British Honduras, £20,000.

The Sinking Fund.

Reductions in the Debt by means of a sinking fund were first made in 1875 by Sir Stafford Northcote, who set up the New Sinking Fund, consisting of the balance of the Annual Charge after providing for interest and cost of management. That term was afterwards applied to the fund set up by Mr. Baldwin in 1923; but has again been transferred to the 1928 Fund. The Old Sinking Fund, was the application of the surplus revenue of any year for the redemption of debt when so determined by Parliament. Debt reduction is also made by means of Terminable Annuities, the capital value of which is deducted from the Debt upon the expiration of the term for which the annuities are payable, and by means of the following Funds:—

1. Victory Bonds Sinking Fund, by means of which Victory Bonds drawn for repayment on Sept. 1 of each year are discharged, £4,389,122.
2. Funding Loan Sinking Fund, £5,452,648 applied in cancellation of Debt in 1932-33.
3. 3½ per cent. Conversion Loan Sinking Fund, £7,523,127 applied in purchase and cancellation of £8,083,560 in 1932-33.
4. 4 per cent. Consols Sinking Fund, under which £2,326,363 was applied in cancellation of £2,426,465 in 1932-33.

5. Other Sinking Funds. Issues from the Consolidated Fund, £15,710 applied in Debt reduction in 1932-33.

6. Depreciation Fund, under the Finance Act of 1917, by which sums were issued by the Exchequer and were applicable to the purchase for cancellation of 5 per cent. War Loan 1920-29 at a price below 100, and of 4 per cent. War Loan 1929-32 at a price below par. (£12,000,741 of 5½ Stock and £21,936,500 of 4½ Stock was so purchased).

7. Payments for Death Duties, under Section 3 of the War Loan Act, 1919, amounting at March 31, 1933, to £3,066,447 cash and £125,124,561 securities.

National Debt Redemption Fund.

This National Fund (of which Messrs. Baring Brothers and Company, Ltd., 8, Bishopsgate, E.C.4, are the Trustees) has no connexion with the Government—it is a purely voluntary movement to lighten the debt burden of posterity, but not that of the present generation unless there is an undreamed-of accession of funds. It was the expressed hope of the original donor that his contribution should serve as the nucleus of a very large fund. The Fund was constituted on November 10, 1927, with a gift of £499,876 4s. 11d., and forty-seven persons added £12,705 8s. 11d. in the following year. There is also a further sum of £5,000 that will pass to the Fund at the conclusion of certain life interests. The audited balance sheet, as at March 31, 1933, shows the following net additions during the year:—Donations £124 10s. 1d., profit on investments realised £379 6s. 4d., and income £36,700 5s. 10d. The amount of the Fund on the 31st March, 1933, was £683,613 12s. 1d. Under the provisions of Clause 30 of the Finance Act, 1928, the Fund is exempt from Income Tax.

Estimated Assets.

Against the External Debt of £1,060,435,000 owing on March 31, 1933, may be set the amounts owing to Great Britain by certain of the British Dominions, and by various Countries in Europe. The amount owed to Great Britain far exceeds the amount owed by Great Britain.

The amounts remaining unpaid, and the estimated value of Investments made by the British Government in various Loans and Undertakings, are shown below (as on March 31, 1933):—

§ Dominions and Colonies.

Australia	£79,724,000
New Zealand	26,121,000
South Africa	7,500,000
(a) Trinidad	419,000
Newfoundland	400,000
	£114,234,000

In addition, there is a liability, not yet determined, on the part of the East African Colonies and Protectorates, in connexion with the cost of military operations in East Africa.

(a) This sum was repaid in full on April 1, 1933.
 1 Payments in respect of these inter-Governmental loans due from July 1, 1932, to June 30, 1932 (the "Hoover" year) were suspended. The amounts suspended in respect of War Debts, together with interest, are payable by means of annuities in the period July 1, 1933, to June 30, 1934. From July 1, 1934, payments in respect of War Debts have been suspended in accordance with the arrangements made at the Louvain Conference.

622 Great Britain—Widows' and Orphans' and Old Age Pensions.

WIDOWS' AND ORPHANS' AND OLD AGE (Contributory) PENSIONS.*

Insurance on a contributory basis of Old Age Pensions at 6s to the insured and wife, and of Widows' Pensions, was incorporated with the system of National Health Insurance in 1925. Pensions were fixed at 10s. a week, and the Widows' Pension was supplemented by allowances of 5s. weekly for the first child and 3s. for each additional child. Orphans were allowed 7s. 6d. each a week. The contribution was incorporated with the contribution for National Health Insurance (q.v.). The Act of 1929, which came into operation early in 1930, extended the right to pensions by conferring benefit on widows of 55 years of age and over whose husbands had died or reached age 70 before the 1925 Act came into operation. A heavy increase in the number of beneficiaries and expenditure resulted. Particulars for the years 1930 and 1931 are shown in the following summary:—

GREAT WAR PENSIONS.

FRESH applications for compensation in respect of disablement claimed to be due to service in the Great War can no longer be entertained, since the period of seven years from the date on which the claimant's active service terminated, or the date fixed (August 31, 1921) as the end of the Great War, whichever is the earlier, has now expired in all cases.

While this is the statutory position, it has been made known by announcement in the House of Commons and elsewhere that exceptional cases, in which clear evidence is produced that an ex-service officer or man is suffering substantial incapacity caused by his war service in respect of which for good reason no claim was made within time, will be investigated with a view to the grant of appropriate compensation.

DISABLEMENT PENSION.

The disablement pension is at the outset generally a temporary award based on a Medical Board's assessment of disablement arising out of injury or disease attributable to or aggravated by war service. Such temporary award usually runs for a period of 12 months, and is from time to time reviewed until the case is ripe for consideration for a final award under the War Pensions Act, 1922 and the Regulations made thereunder. Under that authority a system of final awards was brought into operation, the effect of which was to stabilise pensions, gradually to eliminate recurring medical examinations, and to bring about finality as to the amount of pension to be awarded. A man, on receiving notification that a final award has been made to him, has a right of appeal, subject to certain conditions, to an independent Assessment Appeal Tribunal, whose decision is final and binding on both the Ministry of Pensions and the appellant.

At March 31, 1933, out of some 471,500 pensions in payment to disabled officers and men, about 418,000 were final awards.

Disablement, for the purpose of pension, is assessed on a percentage scale. Total disablement is reckoned at 100 per cent., and the lowest degree entitling to pension is 20 per cent. Where the disablement is assessed at less than 100 per cent. the disablement pension and any allowances attached thereto are proportionately reduced. For instance, a private 50 per cent. disabled would receive 50 per cent. of the full rate of pension and 50 per cent. of the full rate of allowances for wife and children (if eligible).

Disablement assessed at less than 20 per cent. is compensated by a gratuity or a final weekly allowance paid over a definite number of weeks.

The Great War Pensions expenditure during the year ended March 31, 1933, amounted to about £47,265,300, and for the current year ending March 31, 1934, is estimated to amount to about £45,218,500. This will bring the aggregate expenditure of the Ministry of Pensions since 1917, and of the Service Departments from 1914 to 1917, together, to £1,108,000,000.

RATES OF PENSION.

The following are some of the principal rates of weekly pension for a private soldier 100 per cent. disabled, and of pensions or allowances for dependants of a private soldier:—

Private—40s.; wife's allowance 10s.; children's allowances—7s. 6d. for first child and 6s.

for each other child; (if there is no wife, 10s. for the first, 7s. 6d. for the second, and 6s. for each other child).

Widow—over 40 or with children 26s. 8d.; under 40 and without children 20s.; allowances for children 10s., 7s. 6d., 6s.

Parents—need-pensions not exceeding 20s. Provision is also made for other dependants.

A totally disabled man who is certified to require constant attendance may receive an additional allowance not exceeding 20s. a week.

Treatment.

Where a special course of treatment is necessary for a condition of disablement certified to be due to war service the Ministry of Pensions have power to provide it, and if in consequence of and during a course of treatment a man is unable to provide for his own support and that of his family, treatment allowances may be granted in lieu of pension and allowances.

By March 31, 1934, the Ministry of Pensions will have spent on medical treatment and its accessories about £66,500,000, and another £36,680,000 in special allowances to the patients and their families, during the treatment, in addition to their ordinary pensions.

Allowances for Children of Mens' Widows, &c.	28,030

NATIONAL HEALTH INSURANCE.

All persons between the ages of 16 and 65 who are employed within the meaning of the National Health Insurance Acts and do not hold certificates of exemption from health insurance are required to be insured for both health insurance and contributory pensions. Certain classes of persons are entitled to be insured as voluntary contributors.

The third valuation of approved societies showed that changes were necessary to preserve the financial stability of the scheme, which had been seriously affected by heavy expenditure on sickness and disablement benefits of women, particularly married women, and by loss of contributions due to unemployment. To remedy the position an amending Act was passed in 1932, reducing substantially the benefits of married women, and to a less extent the benefits of other women, and providing for partial (in place of the hitherto complete) exoneration of arrears of contributions due to unemployment.

The present rates of contributions and benefits under the Acts of 1924-1932 are as follows:—

Contributions.—Men 2s. 6d., women 1s. 2d. a week (Northern Ireland, 2s. 4d. and 12d.) payable by employer, who may recover by deduction from wages—men 9d., women 6d. (Northern Ireland, 8d. and 5d.).

Benefits.—Medical benefit (except to voluntary contributors, whose weekly contribution is reduced by 3d.). Sickness benefit, men 15s., women—unmarried and widows 12s., married 10s., weekly. Disablement benefit, men 7s. 6d., women—unmarried and widows 6s., married 5s., weekly. Maternity benefit 40s. Ordinarily insurance is effected through an approved society, which may use a valuation surplus to provide additional benefits such as dental or ophthalmic treatment.

A useful summary of the provisions of the National Health Insurance Acts, 1924 to 1932, is obtainable from H.M. Stationery Office for 12d.

National Health Insurance Funds (England, Wales and Scotland) at the end of 1932.

Invested with the National Debt Commissioners	£69,834,000
Invested by or on behalf of Approved Societies	55,722,700
Cash at Bank	232,500
Cash in hands of Approved Societies and Insurance Committees	1,785,600
Total	£127,574,800

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE.

With certain exceptions all persons between the ages of 16 and 65 who are employed under contract of service must contribute to the Unemployment Insurance Fund. Among the chief exceptions are persons earning more than £50 a year, who are not manual workers, agricultural labourers, domestic servants, established civil servants, teachers in contributory employment, members of the police, and permanent employees of local authorities, railways, and public utility companies.

As a result of the National Economy Act, 1932, various modifications of the Unemployment Insurance Acts have been made. From November, 1932, limitations have been imposed on the right to insurance benefit proper, transitional "benefit" has been abolished, and transitional "payments" substituted (subject to a test of need) for persons thus deprived of insurance or transitional benefit.

Contributions.—Increased since October, 1931, to 2s. 6d. and 1s. 6d. respectively weekly for men and women between the ages of 21 and 65—lower rates for youths and girls. The contribution is payable by the employer in the form of a stamp which he must affix to the contributor's unemployment book, but one half the contribution represents the employee's share and may be deducted from wages, while an additional half is added by the State, making the total weekly contribution 2s. 6d. In respect of men and 2s. 3d. women.

Benefits.—The present maximum weekly rates of benefit (as reduced in October, 1932) are 15s. 2d. for men and 13s. 6d. for women, with an additional 8s. for an adult dependant and 2s. for a dependent child—lower rates for youths and girls.

A useful summary of the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Acts, 1920-32, is issued (price 3d.).

The maximum borrowing permitted by the No. 2 Act of 1932 was fixed at £125,000,000, and at March 31, 1932, the Adverse Balance of the Unemployment Fund stood at this figure.

The receipts and payments of the Fund (including the Insurance Account proper and the Transitional Payments Account) for the two years ended March 31, 1932 and 1932, were as follows:—

SAVINGS BANKS.

Post Office Savings Banks.—On Dec. 31, 1932, there were approximately 10,000,000 active deposit accounts in the Post Office Savings Banks, with the sum of £305,712,118 due to depositors. On Dec. 31, 1932, Government Stock to the amount of £194,531,512 stood to the credit of holders in the books of the Post Office Savings Banks. Any sum from one shilling to £500 may be deposited, and interest is allowed at $\frac{1}{2}$ per centum per annum. A depositor may have more than one account. There is no limit to the amount which may stand to his credit, but he may not deposit more than £500 in the aggregate in any one calendar year.

Trustee Savings Banks.—On Nov. 20, 1932, there were 2,472,511 active accounts in the Trustee Savings Banks. The total assets of the Banks amounted to £200,326,073, which included £154,564,211 due to depositors in the Ordinary and Special Investment Departments, £40,814,737 Stocks and Bonds held for depositors and £6,947,125 representing the accumulated surplus of the individual Trustee Savings Banks throughout the country. Information about these Banks and their offices, numbering 522 (principal and subordinate) in November, 1932, can be obtained from the Trustee Savings Banks Association, 5 Verulam Buildings, Gray's Inn, W.C.1. (Chairman, Sir Spencer J. Portal. Secretary, Oliver H. Horne, M.A.)

Industrial and Provident Societies.

* It is not generally known that associations for carrying on any industry, business or trade may be registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts, and when so registered enjoy, among other advantages, the privileges of limited liability. In his report the Registrar of Friendly Societies who administers these Acts says:—

"A society, established to carry on any industry, business or trade may be registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Acts, and obtain the privileges of incorporation with limited liability, provided that it restricts the holding which any member may have or claim in its shares to £500, and if it carries on the business of banking, that its share capital is not withdrawable."

At the end of 1931, 5,793 societies were registered; they had a total membership of 7,703,000; and their balance sheets showed total assets (omitting inter-society investments) valued at £244,841,000. The societies registered at the end of 1931 were classified by the Registrar as follows:—

Class of Society	Number Societies	Share Capital.	Balance of Undistributed Surplus and Reserves
Distributive Trading (Retail)	1,266	117,575,669	18,279,004

Co-operation.

Following are some additional particulars relating to 1,371 societies on a co-operative basis engaged in distributive and productive trading for 1931:—Membership 6,610,000; retail sales £207,457,000; surplus for distribution £26,432,000, of which £5,057,000 was disbursed as share interest and £19,600,000 as dividends on sales; sales of wholesale societies were £99,840,000; productive societies £7,132,000 (sales in these instances almost wholly to retail societies). The net value of goods produced by co-operative societies, deducting materials, was £24,926,000.

Income Tax Exemption.

The exemption from Income Tax under Schedules C and D hitherto enjoyed by most I. & P. societies was withdrawn by the Finance Act 1933, and they are now assessed on the same basis as other concerns. Dividends on sales are to be deducted in computing profits for tax purposes.

* A considerable part of the capital of Co-operative Societies is in the form of Deposits and Loans.

NOTE.—When the yield of wheat per acre differed from the average for the 30 years 1892-1921 by less than one-tenth of a bushel, the year has been noted as "Average." When the difference was between 0.1 and 0.5 bushel, the year has been noted as "Slightly above (or below) Average" when between 0.5 and 1.5 bushels, as "Decidedly above Average" or "Deficient"; when between 1.5 and 2.5 bushels, as "Good" or "Bad"; when between 2.5 and 3.5 bushels, as "Very good" or "Very bad"; and when above 3.5 bushels, as "Extremely good" or "Extremely bad." * From April 1, 1923, the figures of Imports include Imports (if any) into Great Britain and Northern Ireland from the Irish Free State, but exclude the direct foreign trade of the Irish Free State.

Fisheries.

The quantities and values of sea fish of British taking landed in Great Britain and Ireland in 1932 (exclusive of salmon) are shown in the following table. The total catch was 18,000 tons less than in 1931, and 220,000 tons less than the record catch of 1913. Representing the 1913 catch by 100, the catches during 1927-32 were respectively 86, 85, 89, 92, 83 and 82. The total value in 1932 was £870,000 less than in the previous year

Strikes.—In 1921 there was a stoppage of production for 88 days, ending in a settlement on June 28, 1921. In 1926 there was a stoppage of production for 213 days, from May 1 until Nov. 30.

Home Consumption of Coal.

In a normal year about 200,000,000 tons of coal are available for home consumption. Railway locomotives require about 13,000,000 tons; gas works 17,000,000 tons; coke production 17,000,000 tons, of which about half (with 1,500,000 tons of coal) is consumed by blast furnaces; colliery engines require about 13,000,000 tons, and coal miners receive about 6,000,000 tons; electrical generating stations require about 10,000,000 tons, and coasting ships require over 1,300,000 tons; in addition, about 40,000,000 tons are used for domestic heating and cooking, and over 70,000,000 tons for manufactures. In the six months (Jan.-June), 1931, steamers and motor vessels used 7,055,000 tons of coal and 100,752,000 gallons of oil fuel.

Iron Ore.

The production and importation of iron ore are as shown below. Values are not shown, as that of iron ore produced in Great Britain is taken at the place of production, while the value of imported ore is enhanced by transport and handling to the port of entry. The value of the iron ore produced in Great Britain in 1931 is stated at £2,000,000; that of the imported ore at £2,600,000.

Bankruptcy Statistics.

England and Wales (1931).

The number of debtors adjudicated bankrupts was 4,403, with liabilities £10,787,306, and assets £2,154,314; of compositions 27, with liabilities £20,535, and assets £22,480; of administration orders for deceased debtors' estates 59, with liabilities £237,650, and assets £73,588. In addition, there were 2,415 assignments, compositions, &c., under deeds of arrangement, with liabilities £5,411,931, and assets £2,685,091.

Scotland (1931).

The number of sequestrations in Scotland was 203, with liabilities £1,212,637, and assets £128,268.

Northern Ireland (1931).

The bankruptcies numbered 39, with liabilities £90,923, and assets £12,480; deeds of arrangement 55, with liabilities £208,886, and assets £111,789; arrangements under the control of the Court 35, with liabilities £52,527, and assets £12,982.

EXTERNAL TRADE (GREAT BRITAIN AND NORTHERN IRELAND).

IN statistics of Trade, the term GENERAL TRADE refers to the whole volume of Imports (including such as are temporarily detained and afterwards exported), and to the whole volume of Exports. The term SPECIAL TRADE includes only Imports for consumption in the country receiving them, and Exports of home produce or manufacture. Imports are taken at their C.I.F. value (which includes the Cost of the merchandise and the charges for Insurance and Freight), whereas Exports are taken at their F.O.B. (free on board) value, which includes only the Cost of the merchandise delivered to the exporting ship. Exports have an added value by the time they reach their destination, having become loaded en route with Insurance and Freight. They leave the country of origin with an F.O.B. value and arrive with an acquired C.I.F. value.

The British self-governing Dominions have in the past been, with few exceptions, better customers in proportion to the number of their inhabitants than any foreign country, and while this remains generally true for 1932, it will be seen that Denmark and Norway now compare very favourably with South Africa and Canada in this respect. Denmark has now regained the position she held in 1924 of being, in this sense, our best customer in Europe, followed by Norway, the Netherlands, Sweden and Belgium. Our best customers out of Europe, apart from the Dominions, were British Malaya and Argentina, this applying not only to 1932, but to 1924 and 1931.

Postal Traffic.

Average Daily Receipts, 1929-1933.

The following table (Board of Trade Journal) gives the average receipts of the Post Office in Great Britain from postal traffic, per working day, for each month in 1929 and 1931-1933. Telegraph and Telephone receipts, Savings Bank, and Money and Postal Order business are excluded. The value of postage stamps used for receipt stamp and other revenue duties is included. The figures are an approximately correct index of the movement from month to month of the amount of postal traffic handled, expressed in terms of postage, and may be regarded as a reflection of the state of the country's trade.

ROADS AND ROAD VEHICLES.

The total mileage of public roads in Great Britain is approximately 177,500 miles, of which 155,000 are in England and Wales and 22,500 in Scotland. The cost of maintenance, improvement (widening, etc.), and new construction in 1924-25 was £18,800,000, and in 1925-26 £25,469,691. The roads of Great Britain have been classified by the Ministry of Transport, and out of the total mileage of 177,500, 26,600 (approximately) have been included in Class I, and 16,600 miles (approximately) in Class II.

The maintenance and improvement &c. of public roads is within the jurisdiction of the "highway authorities." Under the Local Government Act, 1929, county councils in England and Wales as from the appointed day (April 1, 1930), became the highway authorities for all roads in rural districts and all classified roads (i.e. Class I and Class II Roads) outside the county and metropolitan boroughs, together with the main roads, for which the county councils were already the highway authorities prior to the appointed day. These roads are known as "county roads" and are now a county charge, although district councils in many cases continue to carry out the actual work of maintenance and improvement. The borough and urban councils are the highway authorities for roads other than county roads which lie within their areas. In Scotland under the Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1929, the county councils are the highway authorities in respect of all roads outside the burghs, and in respect of all classified roads in burghs with a population of less than 20,000 except the burgh of Aberroath. All burghs remain highway authorities in respect of their unclassified roads. The Act provides that the functions of the County Council in regard to highways may be partially exercised by Committees or by the Town Councils of small burghs in accordance with an administrative scheme submitted by the County Council to and approved by the Secretary of State for Scotland. The motor licence duties (referred to below) are paid into a Road Fund which is administered by the Minister of Transport. Grants are made from the Road Fund to highway authorities towards the cost of maintenance, improvement and construction of roads and bridges. During the year 1923-24 the grants from the Road Fund amounted to £13,694,820. The bulk of this money was directed to assisting highway authorities in the maintenance and improvement of classified roads and bridges, and the construction of new roads and bridges of classification value. Under the Local Government Act, 1929, the grants hitherto made out of the Road Fund towards the maintenance of classified roads in London and the county boroughs and of unclassified roads in counties have been discontinued as from April 1, 1930, and a sum corresponding to these amounts, together with an additional contribution, is paid out of the Road Fund towards the block grants to local authorities for which the Act provides.

The total gross receipts from the taxation of road vehicles between December 1, 1921, and November 30, 1922, amounted to £27,667,142. The approximate number of motor vehicles licensed during this period was 2,292,300, while licences in respect of private and hackney horse-drawn carriages numbered 33,422. The average receipt in respect of a whole year licence was £13 14s. 6d. for cars taxed on horse-power; £2 13s. 6d. for motor bicycles; £25 8s. 6d. for internal combustion and steam-driven goods vehicles; £19 14s. 6d. for electric goods vehicles; and £50 0s. 6d. for motor hackneys.

In 1922 there were 1,283 deaths from street accidents in London, a decrease of 59 on the total for 1921. In 1920 there were 303 deaths from street accidents in Paris.

BRITISH RAILWAYS.

The length of road (first track) of the railways owned, leased or worked by the Companies formed under Part I. of the Railways Act, 1921, at Dec. 31, 1932, was as under :—

Southern	miles 2,194
Great Western	„ 3,801
London, Midland & Scottish	„ 6,947
London & North Eastern	„ 6,401
Total	19,343

Railways in 1932.

Capital authorised	£1,311,617,653
„ created	1,235,355,474
„ issued	1,209,053,431

The amount appropriated for the payment of interest and dividend on capital in 1932 was £31,900,000, representing 2·7 per cent. upon the total capital. On Ordinary Stock issued the average return was 1·21 per cent.

The number of traffic locomotives were steam 21,300; rail motor cars steam 129, electric 1,650. Passenger carriages numbered 44,500, passenger brake vans, parcel and mail vans, horse and carriage trucks, &c., 18,600; freight wagons (railway owned) 651,000. The gross receipts from railway working amounted to £156,287,207, compared with £170,128,536 in 1931, a decrease of £13,841,329. On the other hand expenditure on railway working declined from £136,858,604 in 1931 to £129,300,000 in 1932. Ordinary and workmen's journeys in 1932 numbered 1,125,000,000, a decrease of over 4½ millions compared with 1931, while passenger receipts, including season tickets, workmen, excursions, &c., amounted to £52,200,000. For the four group companies the gross receipts from all sources in 1932 were £164,966,187.—Expenditure £142,077,542; net receipts £23,888,645, every item showing a decrease except third-class season tickets on the Southern Railway. On all railways the tonnage of goods and minerals in 1932 was 241,000,000 tons, compared with 258,380,148 tons in 1931, the receipts being £79,000,000, a decrease of £9,856,230. The value of passenger traffic conveyed by the group railways in 1932 was:—First-class (Ordinary) £1,134,591, (Seasons) £1,746,331; second-class (Ordinary) £344,251, (Seasons) £424,717; third-class (Ordinary) £325,339,331, (Seasons) £5,467,996, (Workmen) £2,826,272—Total £49,183,489.

TRAMWAYS, Etc.

The total mileage of tramways and light railways open in Great Britain on March 31, 1932, was 1,976. The total receipts in 1931-32 were £23,519,020, the working expenses £19,321,752, and the net receipts £4,197,268, the total paid-up capital being £110,367,565. 4,107,673,072 passengers were carried.

The mileage of trackless trolley routes open for traffic was 296, the number of passengers carried being 184,373,190.

Under the London Passenger Transport Act, 1933, various tramway and trackless trolley undertakings operating in a specified area in and around London were transferred to the London Passenger Transport Board.

LONDONERS' MODE OF TRAVEL.

Recorded figures show that in 1932 each Londoner, statistically speaking, made 496 journeys. These were apportioned as follows:—

	No. of journeys.
Omni-buses	136
Trams	130
Underground	78
Suburban trains	50
Coaches	2
Total	496

Londoners prefer 'buses to all other means of transport. There are ten 'buses in London to every one that New York possesses. The following figures for 1932 show that the New York Subway and the Paris Metro are patronised by a far larger proportion of the population than is London's Underground:—

	All Passengers.	Underground Passengers.
London	4,066,112,000	641,917,002
New York	3,553,934,000	2,103,000,000
Paris	1,958,218,000	929,000,000

INLAND WATERWAYS.

No recent return has been published of the total mileage of canals and canalized rivers in Great Britain. In 1905 there were 3,225 miles (England and Wales, 3,641 miles; Scotland, 184 miles), no additions to the mileage having been made for several years. In 1932 the inland waterways carried tonnage (so far as returns are available) as under:—

	Mileage of Canals.	Tonnage carried.
Railway owned	1,000	1,324,095
Other	1,485	10,058,827
Total	2,485	11,382,922

The longest canal in Great Britain is the Grand Union Canal (280 miles), which links London and the Midlands and has outlets into the Thames through docks at Limehouse and at Brentford. The system embraces, by amalgamation, the canals generally known as the Regent's Canal, the Grand Junction Canal, the Warwick and Birmingham Canal, the Warwick and Napton Canal, the Birmingham and Warwick Junction Canal, the Leicestershire and Loughborough Navigations and the Erewash Canal. The three last-named waterways were acquired by the Grand Union Canal Company on January 1, 1932. Goods can be conveyed direct from the Midlands to the Regent's Canal Dock and there loaded into sea-going vessels, or vice versa. Through tolls are available. A scheme of reconstruction and development, which will cost £1,000,000, is being carried out over the whole of the Grand Union waterways. The channels are being widened and deepened to permit the passage of motor barges capable of carrying eighty tons a pair. With the improvement of this form of transport has come a demand for factory and warehouse sites on the canal banks—an industrial development of the utmost significance. The Manchester Ship Canal, opened in 1904, has a total length of 36 miles, and connects Manchester with the Mersey port of Liverpool. In 1932 the tonnage of toll-paying traffic was 5,328,925 tons, and the tolls, dues, &c., £1,203,657.

The Shortest Railway in the World is that built by the Pope in Vatican City. It is one-third of a mile and cost £250,000.

The British Empire's Highest Railway—On the Kenya Uganda Railway, at a point near Timbora, the line goes over a summit level of 9,130 feet, and Timbora Station at 9,000 feet is the highest railway station in the Empire.

The Steepest Railway is in Switzerland in the Canton Ticino. From Piotta to Lake Ritorn level has an average gradient of 72 per cent. and a maximum of 81 per cent.

NOTES.—(s) Diesel Electric; (a) Steam; (3) Start to pass average—This train passes Jeumont, the last station before crossing the Franco-Belgian frontier, 147 7/8 miles from Paris in 134 minutes at an average of 66 1/2 miles per hour—the highest scheduled speed in Europe over so great a distance; (4) In both directions; (5) Arkwright; (6) P.M. Bath.

The highest authentic speed ever recorded was on a journey from Plymouth to Paddington on May 9, 1904—see 3 miles per hour.

The World's Shortest Train, from Port Augusta, Australia to Kalgoorlie (1,023 miles), takes seven days in June, also, the first trip by a new engine with one axle attached, made by Messrs. Laird, Kilson & Co., on the North Midland Railway ran between Belper and Clay Cross Tunnel, a distance of 10 miles, in eight minutes, being at the rate of 75 miles per hour.

SHIPBUILDING, 1932-33.

THE severe depression through which the shipbuilding industry has for some time been passing is emphasised by the following figures issued by Lloyd's Register of Shipping.

The total of new tonnage to which classes have been assigned by Lloyd's Register during the twelve months ended June 30, 1933, amounts to 111 vessels, of 446,751 tons gross, while the corresponding figures for the year ended June 30, 1932, were 263 vessels, of 920,902 tons gross. Plans for 142 vessels, of 323,600 tons, were passed by the Society in the course of the year. These figures show a slight increase over the very low total for the previous twelve months (139 vessels, of 258,110 tons). Of this projected tonnage, only 43 per cent. (138,390 tons) was intended to be built in Great Britain and Ireland, and 57 per cent. (185,210 tons) in other countries.

The countries in which the greater part of the new tonnage classed by Lloyd's Register during the year has been constructed are shown in the following statement.—

Country.	No of Vessels.	Tons Gross.
Great Britain and Ireland	65	153,420
Italy	8	145,196
Germany	4	49,723

LIGHTHOUSES.

In 1931-32 the receipts of the General Light-house Fund were £875,943, made up of £862,359 Light Dues collected; £4,989 Rents of disused Lighthouses and Sundry Revenue;
 £3,565 Barges and Minicoy Light Dues; £5,030
 Interest on Investments. The total expenditure of the three General Lighthouse Authorities—Trinity House, Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses and Commissioners of Irish Lights—was £765,962, and for Lighthouses Abroad £34,466, the total Ordinary Expenditure being £800,428, leaving a balance of £75,515 to be carried to the Net Revenue Account.

Mercantile Shipping.

On June 30, 1933, the Mercantile Marine of Great Britain and Ireland (excluding vessels of less than 100 tons) had a total tonnage of 18,700,739 gross tons, of which 18,592,804 tons were steamers and motor ships, and 108,535 tons sailing vessels and non-propelling craft.

Census of Seamen (June 15, 1932).—Total number of seamen employed, 150,730, as under:

Non trading Vessels.	British.	Foreign.	Landers.
Steam	86,181	7,061	39,049
Motor	12,257	1,099	4,354
Sailing	704	5	nil

The British Fishing Fleet.—On Dec. 31, 1932, the fishing boats belonging to the United Kingdom, Isle of Man and Channel Islands numbered 13,850 (298,031 net tons) of which 5,286 were sailing vessels (20,521 net tons) and 8,564 steam and motor vessels (257,510 net tons).

The estimated number of men and boys employed in sea fishing in 1932 was 58,298, of whom 52,222 were regular fishermen and 6,076 persons occasionally employed in sea fishing.

Wrecks (World).—The total losses of the World's Mercantile Marine in 1932 are stated to be 322 vessels with a gross tonnage of 425,413 as against 499 vessels (604,703 gross tons) in 1929; these losses (1932) include 246 steamers (339,405 gross tons), 14 motor vessels (38,199 gross tons), 37 auxiliary vessels (7,886 gross tons) and 95 sailing vessels (39,923 gross tons).

(British).—In 1932, 31 sailing vessels (1,938 gross tons) and 94 steam and motor vessels (41,842 gross tons), a total of 125 vessels (43,842 gross tons), were totally lost at sea. In 1931 lives were lost through wrecks at sea—from sailing vessels, crew 5, passenger nil; from steam and motor vessels, crew 72, passenger nil—a total of 77. The years with the heaviest losses of life at sea were 1912 and 1914. In 1912 the total of 2,335 included 673 of the crew and 825 passengers on S.S. Titanic; in 1914 the total of 1,778 included 171 of the crew and 840 passengers on S.S. Empress of Ireland.

Aerodromes.—On Dec. 31, 1932, there were 397 aerodromes licensed, of which 35 were "Public-use" and 362 "Private-use," 329 of the latter being privately owned for "joy-riding."

National Flying Services, Ltd. (Hanworth Park, Middlesex), operated in 1931 a fleet of 42 aircraft. During 1931 the total amount of "paid" flying was 8,522 hours (3,107 instructional, 3,874 private hire, 765 taxi work and 755 short duration passenger flights). The total membership of the clubs averaged 1,584 in 1931, and 539 members held an "A" pilot's licence. The largest clubs are Leicestershire, with 938 members, and Hanworth (222).

Other Companies.—During 1932 over 40 companies or individuals carried out commercial flying, 22 being engaged in air taxi work.

* Financially Assisted Clubs with a total membership (Dec. 31, 1932) of 6,040, a decrease of 632 since Dec. 31, 1931. Of the total number, 2,772 held civil pilots' licences.

IMPERIAL AIRWAYS.

Imperial Airways is the British national air transport Company, and operates regular daily services from London to Paris, Brussels and Cologne; in the summer to Basle and to Zurich; and a week-end service to Le Touquet.

The Company also maintains a service twice a week from England to Cairo, with weekly extensions right across India and Burma to Singapore and also through Africa to Cape Town.

Imperial Airways thus serves 3 continents and 22 countries; the length of its routes exceeds 13,000 miles, its fleet is flying 2,000,000 miles a year and carrying nearly 250,000 letters a week.

SERVICES PROPOSED.

The Australian Government has decided to invite tenders for a weekly air mail service between Singapore and Australia to link with the existing mail between England and the Federated Malay States and also for services within Australia.

It is hoped, during 1934, to establish in conjunction with Pan-American Airways a service between Bermuda and the United States.

FLEET OF IMPERIAL AIRWAYS

The fleet of Imperial Airways (Dec. 31, 1933) numbers in all 40 aeroplanes. The new Ata- lantas are specially designed for service in the tropics, and are used on the Africa and India and Eastern routes; they have a maximum speed of 150 m.p.h. and a cruising speed of 120 m.p.h. The Heracles air liners used between London and Paris are the largest in the world used on regular service. Conversation is possible without raising the voice, and the liners carry stewards who serve table d'hôte or à la carte meals. There is ample luggage accommodation on board and there are two lavatories. The Hannibal class has the same amenities as the Heracles class, except that it provides accommodation for 24 passengers. The aeroplanes of this class operate between Cairo and Karachi on the Indian and Eastern services, and between Cairo and Kenya Colony on the Africa service. The Scylla class, which consists of two aeroplanes, the Scylla and the Syrinx, is under construction, and when commissioned will provide accommodation for 30 passengers and a crew of four.

LONDON AIR PORT.

The Air Port of London (Croydon Aerodrome, Waddon—Tel. Croydon, 2046), extended under the Air Ministry's improvement scheme, was opened on May 2, 1928. The cost of the station was about £250,000, and the buildings include hangars, offices, and an hotel with 50 bedrooms.

The figures below show the growth in mails, passenger traffic, and miles flown by Imperial Airways from the date of inauguration up to the year 1933:—

CIVIL AVIATION VOTES, 1932-1933.

The total sum provided for expenditure in connexion with civil aviation, viz. £502,364, was slightly higher than that for the previous year. The increase was due mainly to provision for expenditure in connexion with the diversion of the air route to India from the Persian to the Arabian coast of the Persian Gulf. This increase was offset, however, by reduced provision for experimental services and technical equipment. The amounts provided under the various sub-heads are tabulated below:—

Staffing and Maintenance of Government Civil Aerodromes	£33,000
Air routes, surveys and experimental	22,000
Technical equipment	13,000

AIR MAILS.

FULL information regarding all Air Mail services is given in the current Air Mail Leaflet, obtainable free of charge at any Post Office. Particulars may also be obtained by telephone from the G.P.O. Enquiry Office (National 7152 between 9.0 a.m. and 6.0 p.m.—1.30 p.m. on Saturday) and from the Foreign Section of the London Postal Service (National 3367) at all other times.

Information as to local times of posting may be obtained from the Head Office of the District concerned or from the Branch Post Office nearest the place of posting.

The principal Air Mail facilities are as follows:—

LETTER AIR MAILS.

Air Mail correspondence may be posted in any letter box, but in the central part of London transit to G.P.O. is quickest if it be posted in the special blue boxes there provided.

Any kind of letter packet may be sent by Air Mail, but printed papers, commercial papers and samples must (in most cases) be prepaid at letter rates. Limit of size and maximum weight as for ordinary post. Air Mail letters can be accepted for registration, but insurance is limited to letters and boxes for The Netherlands and Switzerland. The ordinary arrangements for express delivery and the use of the green label system (for articles liable to Customs duty) apply.

A special blue Air Mail label (obtainable free) should be affixed to the top left-hand corner of every Air Mail packet. Letters with manuscript indication are accepted, but are liable to delay.

Stamps to the full value of the postage must be affixed.

EUROPEAN COUNTRIES.—Letter services are available on weekdays to most European countries. The inclusive rates of postage for European countries are: letters, first ounce qd., each additional ounce gd.; postcards, 2½d.

COUNTRIES OUTSIDE EUROPE.—Rates of postage to these are for half-ounce units. (A letter containing more than the ordinary double sheet of notepaper is likely to exceed the half-ounce) The principal direct letter services from London are:—

(a) On Wednesdays to Palestine, Egypt, Sudan, Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Zanzibar, Mauritius, Nyasaland, Rhodesia, Union of South Africa, Portuguese East Africa, Belgian Congo, Siam, Straits Settlements, Malay States, Dutch East Indies, North Borneo, Brunei, French Indo-China and South China.

(b) On Saturdays to Palestine, Persia, Syria, Egypt, Iraq, India and Ceylon, West Africa, Brazil, Argentine Republic, Uruguay, Bolivia and Chile.

Collections for these mails are made the same day from the blue Air Mail boxes; posting in ordinary boxes must generally be made the previous evening.

The inclusive rates to the principal countries served by the direct England—India and England—South Africa services are:—

PARCEL AIR MAILS.

The general regulations as to weight, size, etc., apply, but only parcels for The Netherlands and Switzerland can be insured.

A special blue Air Mail label must be affixed close to the address label (or to each, if more than one), and to the Despatch note and to the Trade Charge Card (C.O.D. parcels). The words "Air Mail" should also be on the cover, and postage must be prepaid.

EUROPEAN COUNTRIES.—Parcel services are available each weekday to Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France (Paris and its suburbs only), Germany, Hungary, The Netherlands, Norway, Sweden and Switzerland.

COUNTRIES OUTSIDE EUROPE.—On Wednesdays to Sudan, Kenya, Uganda, Tanganyika, Rhodesia, Zanzibar and Union of South Africa. On Saturdays to India.

Parcels for these destinations must generally be posted the previous day.

The rates of postage vary according to weight and country of destination. On the England—India and —S. Africa direct services they are from 2s. 3d. to 3s. 6d. per half-pound.

Institutes.—Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes, known to the Services as "Naafi," conducts the Canteen and Institute service for His Majesty's Forces. Registered under the Companies Acts as an Association not trading for profit, the Corporation exists for the exclusive benefit of the serving element of H.M. Forces, with whom it is alone entitled to deal. Chairman of the Board of Management, Lt.-Col. Sir Murrrough Wilson, K.B.E.; General Manager, F. Benson, C.B.E.; Secretary, S. Baker; Headquarter Offices, Imperial Court, Upper Kennington Lane, S.E. 11. Telephone: Reliance 1200. Telegraphic Address: "Naafi," Lamb, London. In the year ended Oct. 30, 1932, there was a surplus of £434,48s. Rebates and discounts amounting to £77,04s were paid to the Royal Navy and £333,697 to Army and Royal Air Force.

PARCELS.

The parcel should be marked "Parcel Post." and handed across the counter or given to a rural postman; and the postage must be prepaid by stamps, affixed by the sender (if underpaid, deficiency plus 1d. fine is collected from addressee). Parcels are neither accepted nor delivered on Sundays. The name and address of sender should be inside or (not too prominent) on the outside of every parcel.

A rural postman must accept any inland packets he can conveniently carry, but if on foot or cycle not more, without notice, than 11 lb. from one person.

Parcels to or from Irish Free State, Channel Is. or I. of Man are liable to customs duty: except in last case, the sender must declare contents when posting, and addressee must pay clearance fees if any duty be payable. Addressee in I.F.S. pay 2d. anyhow, on dutiable parcels 3s. or more, unless sender arranges (see 6d.) to pay duty.

Imperial and Foreign:—

Various (see pp. 660-661).

NOTE.—The rates here shown are mainly those for direct sea and land services, and are, generally, the lowest in force.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

DELIVERY NUMBERS.—The London Postal Area covers about 325 square miles, and is divided into 10 Head and 128 Sub Districts, each having its own sorting office and delivery number. It is important that the delivery number (E.C. 1, N. 5, S.W. 10, &c.) should be added in addresses. Nine other important towns also have numbered postal districts, and use of the number avoids delay.

HOURS OF BUSINESS.—On ordinary Week Days the Larger Post Offices are open for all classes of business from 8 a.m. to 7.30 or 8 p.m.; at many, including all Head Offices, telegram and Express Delivery Service (p. 654) business is continued to 9 p.m. Smaller offices open usually 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., but often close for a period in middle of the day; some close early one day every week, usually the local half-holiday.

Special Sunday and holiday arrangements are shown on the local window notices. Their general character is indicated in the paragraphs on pp. 656, 657.

PROHIBITED ARTICLES (LETTER POST). Among prohibitions are offensive or dangerous things, certain kinds of advertisement, eggs, fish, game, meat, fruit, vegetables, and (to I.F.S., I. of Man, Channel Is., and abroad) dutiable articles. The latter must be sent as Parcels, Insured Boxes, Small Packets, or, to some countries, as Letters (Green Label system).

CERTIFICATE OF POSTING unregistered parcels, free; other unregistered postal packets, $\frac{1}{2}$ d.

UNPAID PACKETS, except business reply-cards or envelopes, or re-directed parcels, are charged double postage on delivery; UNDERPAID PACKETS, double the deficiency.

UNDELIVERED POSTAL PACKETS.—Inland packets chargeable with a postage of $\frac{1}{2}$ d. or more, undelivered, are returned to sender without charge, if his address is found either outside or inside. Packets without sender's address or any enclosure of importance are destroyed, except parcels which, if not applied for, are generally disposed of after 3 months, or if perishable are dealt with as requisite. Packets chargeable with postage not exceeding 1d. are redelivered to sender only on payment of a second postage, and if name, address and request for return appear on outside; those without such request are disposed of. British packets undelivered abroad are returned to sender here on payment of charges due; printed papers only if return is requested. Magazine Post packets are charged with return postage. Parcels further incur other charges unless (i) abandonment or (ii) delivery to another person in the same country, is requested at the time of posting.

REPLY COUPONS, for the purpose of prepaying replies to letters, are exchangeable abroad for stamps representing a minimum Imperial or Foreign letter-postage. Price (valid within the Postal Union), 6d.; (valid within British Empire only), 3d. Sold at chief offices.

POSTE RESTANTE IN THE BRITISH ISLES (solely for the accommodation of strangers and travellers and for three months only).—Any postal packet may be addressed as a rule to any Post Office except Town Sub-Offices. It should have the words "Poste Restante" or "to be called for" in the address. If addressed to initials, fictitious names, or Christian name only, it is treated as undelivered. Applicants must furnish sufficient particulars to ensure delivery to the proper owner. Redirection from a Poste Restante is not undertaken for more than 14 days unless longer (up to 3 months) is applied for. Letters, parcels, &c., from abroad, or letters at a seaport for an expected ship, are kept 3 months; others, 2 weeks; after which they are treated as undelivered (see above), unless bearing a request for return at end of the interval, or some specified shorter period.

REDIRECTION.—(x) By agent of addressee: Letters, post cards, printed papers, and newspapers may be reposted free not later than the day after delivery (not counting Sundays and public holidays), and must not have been opened or tampered with. Parcels may be re-directed free of charge, within the same time limits, if the original and the corrected addresses are both within the same Town Delivery Area (or within the London Postal District); otherwise they are charged at the ordinary pre-paid rate. Registered packets, which must be taken to a Post Office, are re-registered free only up to day after delivery. (a) By the Post Office (not undertaken during temporary absence, unless house be left empty, nor from clubs, hotels, &c.). Requests for re-direction of letters, &c., must be on printed forms, obtainable from the postmaster or postman, and signed by the persons to whom the letters are to be addressed. Re-direction is free for 24 months; thereafter costs 1s. for each surname for second, 1s. third, and 6s. each subsequent year. Separate forms must be filled in for parcels, and for the forwarding of telegrams by post (free) or by telephone.

REGISTRATION, INLAND.—All kinds of postal packets intended for registration must be marked "Registered" in bottom left-hand corner, and must be handed to an officer of the Post Office, and a receipt taken. Parcels (or the string with which they are tied) and letters must be fastened with wax or other adhesive. Fee 3d. exclusive of postage. Advice of delivery, a further 3d. The latest time for registering is usually half an hour before the latest time for posting ordinary packets; at Head Offices, if open, this may be done later for 6d. late fee. Unregistered packets containing coin or jewellery, or found open (or undeliverable) and containing stamps, uncrossed bearer cheques, uncrossed postal orders without payee's name, &c., 10s. or more in value, or any marked "registered" and found in a letter-box, undergo compulsory registration (3d.), carrying no compensation.

COMPENSATION, INLAND, for loss or damage is granted, though not as a legal right even if fee is paid and packing adequate.—The fees for compensation inclusive of registration are:—Fee 3d., compensation up to £5; 4d., £20; and 1d. for each additional £20 up to the maximum 1s. 11d. for £400. Compensation up to £2 is given on (a) unregistered parcels (for loss, only of certificate of posting is obtained at the time of posting), (b) unregistered packets conveyed by Express Delivery Service No. (1). Compensation in respect of money of any kind (coin, notes, orders, cheques, stamps, &c.) is only given if particulars (for identification) are kept and the money is sent by Registered Letter Post in one of the special envelopes sold officially (see next page); the maximum compensation for coin is £5. Compensation for jewellery, watches, &c., is only given on registered packets; for eggs, fish, game and rabbits, meat, fruit, and vegetables only when sent as parcels. Compensation is not given for damage to (x) eggs, soft fruit, liquids and semi-liquids or exceptionally fragile articles, in any case; (a) fragile articles by registered letter post, unless conspicuously marked "Fragile, with care."

REGISTRATION, IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN (except for parcels and magazine post), is in force to almost all countries: valuable articles may not be sent in unregistered letters. Fee, 3d. Compensation on registered packets up to £2 is paid for entire avoidable loss while in the custody of a country in the Postal Union if claimed within a year.

INSURANCE, IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN (including, except for parcels, REGISTRATION), may be effected on packets to many countries at the following rates:—5d. for £12; and 2d. for every additional £12 up to 6s. 11d. for £400. COMPENSATION up to 20s. (32s. if over 11 lb.) may be given on uninsured parcels to or from Newfoundland, India and the smaller colonies, Egypt, with many larger foreign countries, except U.S.A., if certificate of posting is produced. Packets containing no articles but valuable papers (banknotes, &c.) or valuable documents (plans, &c.) can be insured as letters; other valuable articles should be sent as insured parcels, or as "insured boxes."

INSURED BOX POST.—Jewellery and similar articles (not letters or valuable paper) may be sent in strong boxes by letter mails to some British Dominions (e.g., India and New Zealand), Europe (except Norway, Spain and Near East), Argentine, Brazil, China, Egypt (not Sudan), many French colonies, and a few other countries. Postage $3d.$ per 2 oz. (minimum $10d.$); maximum weight $2lb.$, size $12 \times 6 \times 4$ in. Customs declarations must be filled in.

CASH ON DELIVERY SERVICE, INLAND (not to or from I.F.S.)—A sum (Trade Charge) up to $£40$ can, under certain conditions, be collected from addressee and remitted to sender of a parcel or registered letter posted at a Money Order Office, or a parcel consigned by railway. Fees (extra to usual postal or rail charges): For Trade Charge up to $10s.$, $4d.$; up to $£1$, $6d.$; $£2$, $8d.$; $£5$, $10d.$; and for each further $£5$ or less, $2d.$; by rail, $3d.$ more.

CASH ON DELIVERY, IMPERIAL AND FOREIGN.—A reciprocal service exists between Great Britain and various parts of the Empire and certain Foreign Countries. Fees for collection: $4\frac{1}{2}d.$ for Trade Charge (amount to be collected) not exceeding $£1$, with $2\frac{1}{2}d.$ extra for each additional $£1$ of Trade Charge up to the maximum, which is usually $£40$ (fee $8s.$ $6d.$), but in some countries less (e.g., $£1,000$ francs). Addressee has generally also to pay on delivery, besides Customs, if any, a further fee ($6d.$ in U.K.) not prepayable. If Trade Charge cannot be collected, the rules for undeliverable parcels apply.

EXPRESS DELIVERY (INLAND) BY SPECIAL MESSENGER.—There are five services of which (a) and (g) alone are available on Sundays:—(1) All the way, from most offices which deliver telegrams. Inclusive charge, which must be prepaid, in stamps, $6d.$ per mile, or part of a mile, with $1d.$ on each separate packet after the first. Packets must be handed over the counter with "Express" clearly marked in left-hand top corner. Live animals, liquids, and money may be delivered by this service, and persons may be conducted. The messenger may take back an inland telegram gratis. (2) After transmission by post, at sender's request: (a) from the ordinary delivery office, if open for telegraph business (maximum charge in London $6d.$); or if so marked, (b) "Express Delivery from Head Office" in large provincial towns, and (c) in London "from Head District Office" or "from G.P.O." Packets must be marked "Express," and letters bear a broad vertical line back and front. Charges as for (1) in addition to postage. (3) Before ordinary deliveries, on addressee's application ($6d.$ per mile for one packet, and $1d.$ for every ten or less additional packets). (4) See p. 657. (5) Of a message telephoned to an express delivery office ($3d.$ for 30 words besides express and telephone charges).—Waiting fees: 10 minutes free; each additional 10 minutes or part thereof, $2d.$ —For Sundays and Holidays, see pp. 656, 7, and next paragraph.

RAILWAY LETTERS.—An unregistered letter up to 2 oz., taken to a Parcel or Booking Office of most railways while station is open weekdays or Sundays, is sent off by next train or steamer to a station or port on any of these railways. Fee (besides postage) within Gt. Britain, or thence to Jersey, Guernsey, Douglas (I.M.), or chief Irish ports, $3d.$; to other Irish places $4d.$. Unless marked "to be called for," it is posted in the nearest letter-box at station of address, but (except on Sundays and in I.F.S.) can be delivered Express (from usual office or first Express office it reaches) under Service as, or (by wiring for messenger to meet it at Station) under Service 1.

INTERNATIONAL EXPRESS SERVICE.—Delivery by special messenger of correspondence (locally including parcels up to $11lb.$) to or from certain countries or certain towns in the same. $6d.$ is paid by the sender, the rest, if any, by addressee, according to the local regulations.

POST CARDS.—The left-hand half of the address side may be used for correspondence, inland or abroad. Plain cards (minimum size $4 \times 2\frac{1}{4}$ in.), not thinner than official cards, may also be used both inland and abroad (maximum size $5\frac{1}{2} \times 4\frac{1}{4}$ in.).

Reply Post Cards must have the heading Carte Postale avec réponse payée on first half, and on the second half (valid only to country of origin) Carte Postale—Réponse.

BUSINESS REPLY CARDS AND ENVELOPES of special design, for licensed senders only. These pay a deposit, and also full normal postage, plus $\frac{1}{4}d.$ on each packet returned by their clients: the latter pay no postage.

PRINTED PAPER POST.—For printed or written matter not in the nature of a letter (p. 654).

By this post may be sent books and other works of a literary character, with or without written dedications, and any other written or printed matter not being in the nature of a letter or, e.g., personal news, drawings, paintings, photographic prints, engravings, maps, &c., together with their binding provided that the materials are those ordinarily used for the purpose and are not brittle or very fragile, and with anything necessary for safe transmission (commercial printed forms, legal documents, printers' copy and proofs, examination papers, answers and corrections, the writing on which refers solely to the subject matter of the document, Christmas and picture cards with date, names and addresses of sender and addressee, and with conventional formulae not exceeding 5 words or initials, are also admitted). (For full conditions see the official Guide.) Printed papers being subject to examination in the post, the cover, if any, must be capable of easy removal and replacement for purposes of examination, i.e., without breaking, tearing, ungramming, or cutting.

Literature for the Blind (in other respects treated as Printed Papers).—Pamphlets and books, if printed in special type and subject to certain conditions of posting marked outside "Blind Literature," with name and address of sender. Rates.—Inland: $2lb.$, $1d.$; $5lb.$, $1d.$; $6lb.$ (maximum), $1\frac{1}{2}d.$. Abroad: $\frac{1}{2}d.$ for every $2lb.$ up to $5lb.$ and $2\frac{1}{2}d.$ for $11lb.$ (maximum).

SAMPLE POST (not to Irish Free State).—Restricted inland to bona-fide Trade Samples, without saleable value; but one key, printers' blocks, fresh-cut flowers, and some scientific specimens, can be sent abroad. Rate.—Inland: Up to $4oz.$, $1d.$; $6oz.$, $1\frac{1}{2}d.$; $8oz.$, $2d.$. Abroad: $\frac{1}{2}d.$ per $2oz.$, minimum $1d.$. Limits.—Inland: Size, $12 \times 6 \times 4$ ins., weight $8oz.$; Abroad: Imperial and Egypt: size, $24 \times 12 \times 12$ ins., weight $5lb.$; Elsewhere: $18 \times 6 \times 4$ in., $1lb.$.

NEWSPAPER POST (INLAND).—For newspapers "registered at the G.P.O." (p. 652).

The cover, if any must be open at both ends and easily removable, and copies should be folded so that title is readily inspected. No writing or additional printing is permitted, other than the words "with compliments," name and address of sender, request for return if undelivered, and a reference to a page. Newspapers not "registered at G.P.O." or supplements apart from their ordinary publication, may be charged at printed paper, letter, or (with $1d.$ fine) parcel rate.

Mails (A) No late fee: at all (34) offices open in evening, up to 5 minutes before they close. (B) Fee 1s. 6d.: at sorting carriages at proper terminus up to same times as ordinary letters (except mail abroad vid Hook). OUTSIDE LONDON all Head Offices and most country telegraphic Sub-offices open from 9-10.30 a.m. (Scotland 9-10 a.m.) for stamps, telegrams, registration: but all town Sub-offices, and most non-telegraphic offices, are closed. Many stations send railway letters (p. 654), and telegrams at train times. There is a collection and night despatch in most towns.

EXPRESS DELIVERY (Service 4), a limited inter-city service, for London and the cities marked x on p. 655, is available only:—(a) Sundays: reciprocally between the cities (except to York and Dublin, from some of them); (a) Good Friday: to London only from the others. The heading-in offices in London are:—(G.P.O., Leicester Square, W. and S.W. District Offices, and (Branch Offices) Camberwell Green, Clapham Common, Hammersmith Broadway, Holloway, Stratford, and Swiss Cottage. Letters, &c. (not parcels) must be handed in in time to catch preceding night mails—those for Belfast earlier, in S. & E. England. Fee 1s., besides postage and usual express fees (calculated from the Head Offices of the cities; in London from G.P.O., viz., 6d. to 5s. 6d.)

EXPRESS DELIVERY by messenger of a telephoned message (Service 5, p. 654) is on Sundays restricted to the London Postal District; but a letter reaching "Central Telegraph Office, London, E.C.1." early on Sunday morning will be telephoned to a telephone subscriber in the London Telephone Area if the envelope be marked conspicuously "For Sunday telephone delivery," with a broad perpendicular line back and front, usual postage being prepaid on the envelope, and 3d. per 30 words or less by stamps affixed to the enclosed message.

CHRISTMAS DAY AND GOOD FRIDAY.—In London: One morning delivery of letters, parcels, &c., on Christmas Day; none on Good Friday (except Express Service 4, above). Offices usually open as on Sundays, in some cases for shorter hours. Outside London: In Scotland business is as on week-days. In England and N. Ireland there is one delivery of letters and parcels; no acceptance of parcels. Offices open as Sundays.

BANK HOLIDAYS.—London: One morning delivery of letters and parcels, except; on Boxing Day. Some 34 offices open as on Sundays, and 12 others, for all classes of business, but parcels are not despatched till next day. Posting for night-mails, and general collection, as on Sundays. Outside London: In Scotland, business is generally as usual. Elsewhere, only one letter and parcel delivery, except, as a rule, on Boxing Day, and generally one despatch (early in rural districts). Smaller offices are closed; the more important open 9 a.m. to noon for most classes of business. Telegraph offices, except sub-offices in towns, nearly all open 9 to 10.30 a.m., and head offices 5 to 7 p.m. for telegraphic business (but not usually on Boxing Day).

PUBLIC HOLIDAYS in Scotland: Telegraph mostly as usual, other business as English Bank Holidays. One delivery only on Local Holidays. On New Year's Day one delivery of letters and parcels, no parcel, M.O., P.O., &c., business; hours as on Sundays.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY.

Post Office as Licensing Authority.—By the Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1904-05, it was made illegal to install or work wireless telegraphy in the United Kingdom or on board British ships in territorial waters except with the Postmaster General's licence. By the Wireless Telegraphy Order 1905, the provisions of the Wireless Telegraphy Act 1904 apply to British ships whilst on the high seas. The Merchant Shipping (Wireless Telegraphy) Act, 1925, made it compulsory for all British sea-going ships over 1,500 tons to carry wireless apparatus. The Post Office conducts the inspection of such apparatus under the Act, and also the examination of Wireless Operators for the Postmaster General's Certificate.

Ship and Shore Service.—The ship and shore stations of the Marconi Company and Lloyds, 20 in number, were bought by the Postmaster General in 1906. The service has since been reorganised and now comprises 13 stations, viz.:—Cullercoats, Fishguard, Humber, Land's End, Malin Head, Niton, North Foreland, Portishead, Portpatrick, Rugby, Seaford, Valencia and Wick. Portishead Radio affords (a) world-wide communication with ships equipped with short-wave sending and receiving apparatus, and (b) communication up to a range of about 2,000 miles with ships equipped with long continuous wave-sending and receiving apparatus. Rugby Radio can transmit radiotelegrams to ships equipped with long-wave receiving apparatus. The range is world-wide, but ships are not in a position to reply to this station. A public telephone service between certain Transatlantic Liners and telephone subscribers in Great Britain and certain Continental countries is also afforded through Rugby Radio.

Anglo-Continental Wireless Services.—Post Office wireless services have been instituted side by side with the cable services to the following Continental countries:—Italy, Poland, Estonia, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, the Free State of Danzig, Rumania, Latvia, Finland and Russia. The services with Italy, Rumania, Estonia, and Danzig are carried on via the Leafeld Station (near Oxford). The latter station is also used for the transmission of news and commercial intelligence intended for simultaneous reception in several European countries. A medium-power transmitter at the Rugby Station is also used for the services to Czechoslovakia, Poland and Hungary.

Super-power Transmitter at the Rugby Station.—This transmitter uses power of 2,000 kilowatts and is capable of communication with any part of the globe. It is used for the broadcasting of British Official news messages, Meteorological Office reports and Greenwich Time Signals, and for transmitting radio telegrams and news messages to ships at sea.

Beam and Omni-Directional Wireless Stations.—The privately-owned wireless stations in this country at present carrying on commercial services with other countries are owned and operated by Imperial and International Communications Limited. They consist of the Marconi Short Wave Wireless Beam stations at Bodmin, Bridgwater, Grimsby, Skegness, Dorchester and Somerton, the high-powered omni-directional station at Carnarvon, and the medium-power omni-directional stations at Grimby and Brentwood in Essex; the last two stations also employ Marconi short-wave Beam apparatus. The Bodmin and Bridgwater and the Grimsby and Skegness Beam stations consist of two groups of two units each, one unit of each group being a transmitting station and the other unit a receiving station. The Bodmin transmitting station and Bridgwater receiving station carry out direct high-speed wireless communication with Canada and South Africa. The Grimsby transmitting station and Skegness receiving station carry out similar communication with Australia and India. The Dorchester Beam transmitting station consists of eight Marconi short-wave Beam transmitters, and is the largest beam wireless station in the world. The Somerton station is the receiving station of this short-wave Beam group, and has fourteen receivers employed on the same services.

All these wireless stations are operated and controlled directly from Electra House, London, the central radio office of Imperial and International Communications Limited.

* RADIOTELEGRAMS.

The Address of a radiotelegram must contain name of addressee, of ship, and of coast-station to be used. Private messages for H.M. Navy must have in the address "Warship" followed by the name of the vessel, or "Submarine" (which with identifying letters and figures counts in address as one word). Next must come (a) if ship, be in home waters, "Cablethorpe Radio" (3d. per word inclusive); (b) if ship be abroad, the name of the coast station (if this is not known, sender should enquire of the Secretary, Admiralty, London by reply-paid telegram or letter, stating when it is proposed to send the message). Messages to ships on the following stations must go through the coast stations named—Australia and Melbourne; (China) Sektai (Straits Settlements) or Singapore (Hong Kong); F. India, Madras (Ceylon) or Aden, Mediterranean, Kinella (Malta), New Zealand, Auckland; Off South African coast—Jacoia (Durban), Shanghai (Cape Town) or Walvis Bay; Off East coast of North America (between 30° N. and 30° N. Kingston, Jamaica) or S. Lucia (West Indies); (b) North of 30° N., Louisiana (Nova Scotia). In the case of the Mercantile Marine, if name of nearest coast station is uncertain the message may yet be got through by "open address" (see Note), while if the name of the ship is not known, sufficient particulars of the voyage (names of ports, &c.) may be substituted, at sender's risk, under services A1, B1, and B2 only. Preparation of Replies is admissible. Counting of words, etc., and the reduced rate for Code (category B, are subject to the rules for ordinary Imperial and Foreign Telegrams; the name of ship with call-sign counts as one word, also (if written in standard form) name of coast station.

The Cost of Transmission (per word) from any telegraph office is the sum of three rates: rate for cable or other message to the coast or land station denoted by (c); coast-station charge (c); and ship "station" charge (a). The normal ship charges (a) are as follows:—(i) H.M. Navy, nil; (ii) ships of most nationalities, including British, 3d.; (iii) Spanish and Swedish ships, 3d.; (iv) Finnish ships and Latvian ships, 1½d. These are reduced in certain cases (see C below). The other charges and services may be classified as follows:—

A. SHORT-RANGE (500-300 miles), to all ships with wireless telegraph.—1. Through Post-Office coast stations: $t+c=7d$. 2. Through coast-stations abroad: (i) rate for full-rate telegram to the coast station; (c) varies from 0 to 3d.; see list in P.O. Guide; (a) see above.

B. LONG-RANGE COMMUNICATION with ships suitably equipped (now only listed in P.O. Guide), when beyond reach of short-range stations: 1. Via "Portkade-radio" $t+c=7d$. (a) Long-wave both-way service (range

4,000 miles), with about 270 ships (including most large liners in N. Atlantic or Mediterranean); (b) Short-wave both-way service (range world-wide) with about 450 ships. 2. Via "Rugbyradio" (range world-wide) (if $t+c=1s. 2d.$ to many ships (3,000 in P.O. Guide) carrying long wave receiving apparatus; ships cannot reply direct to this station. Messages are sent twice daily (once on Sundays). 3. Via long distance stations abroad, which are numerous (see P.O. Guide), the exact station depending upon the position of the ship which can generally be ascertained from the shipowner.

C. REDUCED RATES FOR CROSS-CHANNEL AND SHORT VOYAGE SHIPS: 1. Through the appropriate P.O. coast station (see Note), the inclusive ($t+c+a$) rate per word is: Group A (300 ships) 3½d.; Group A (270) 3d. 2. Via Rugbyradio (if available), inclusive: Group A, 1s. 3d.; Group B, 1s. 3½d. 3. Through foreign coast-stations to the same two groups: (a) rate as calculated as for A2, but a is reduced to 3d. (Exceptions are (i) To the Dover-Detford Packets, through Antwerp or Ostend, $c+a=3d.$; (ii) To regular cross-channel boats, through Boulogne, Cherbourg or Havre, $c+a=3½d.$ (iii) rate calculated as for A2, but a is reduced to 1½d.)

Note.—"Open address" (not available for H.M. Ship).—1. P.O. stations. The word "Wireless" may be substituted for the name of a particular station in services A1 and B1, but not B2. If so substituted for the proper coast station in service C1, the inclusive charge per word becomes: Group A boats, 3d.; Group B, 3½d. 2. Coast-stations abroad: Messages intended to pass through coast stations in New Foundland or on east coast of Canada may have "Montreal" in place of the name of any particular station; similarly those for coast stations on west coast of Canada or either coast of U.S.A. may bear "New York". In both cases $t+c+a=1s. 3d.$ Again, messages intended to pass through stations on coasts of the Union of S. Africa may have "Blancopradro" instead of the name of any particular coast station: $t+c+a=2s. 1d.$

TELEPHONES.

CONDITIONS OF SUPPLY.

Telephone instruments are supplied and connected with the appropriate exchange by the Postmaster General at various rentals, with an extra rental of 5s. per quarter per furlong for premises more than a mile from the exchange. Extensions are also provided as required. The rate for calls varies with the distance, and can be ascertained from the introductory pages of the Telephone Directory.

TELEPHONES ABROAD.

The caller should ask for "Trunks," and give the name of country and town required. Calls may be booked in advance. The minimum charge always covers a period of 3 minutes, each further minute or part thereof costing one-third of this minimum. In periods of pressure calls may be limited to 12 minutes. Most countries are divided into zones, and charges are based on the distance between fixed points in the zones connected. Zone boundaries are fixed in various ways and are often very irregular.

A. CONTINENTAL TELEPHONES.—The British zones are:—First Zone: London and S.E. England, including the counties Somerset, Gloucestershire, Warwick, Leics., Notts., Lincs. Second Zone (about 2s. more):—England N. or W. of those counties, and Wales. Third Zone (about 3s. 6d. more):—Isle of Man, Scotland, Northern Ireland. "Day" charges are reduced roughly 40% at "night" (i.e. 7 p.m. to 8 a.m.). The tables on pp. 660, 661, give the minimum charge for Day calls from the First British Zone. Single booked "night" calls of at least one hour are charged at half the "day" rates. "Personal calls" are admitted; if the person asked for is available, a "personal charge" (one-third of the normal minimum) is added to the call cost; if he is not, only the personal charge is made.

† Private (Admiralty) coast stations, not for use of merchant or troop-ships. $c=2d$.
‡ (Spurs) interrupted "W.L."—Cullercoats, Fishguard, Humber, Land's End, Malin Head, Nicon, North Foreland, Portpatrick, Seaford, Valencia, Wick.
t, c, s.—See above. "Cost of Transmission."

B. RADIOTELEPHONE OVERSEAS.—Calls should be booked in advance, as the hours of service are usually very limited. A "person-to-person" call can be booked; if it fails (or if any call is cancelled) a "report charge" is made (usually 18/-), but not if call matures. Calls from Isle of Man or N. Ireland 6/- more (minimum) than rate shown on pp. 660-1, report charges 2/- more.

C. SHIPS in the NORTH ATLANTIC.—(11 liners).—(a) Direct: 38/- (72/- if ship is over 500 miles from Land's End); (b) via New York at caller's option, if direct route is delayed, 144/- Only week-days, and from noon to 8 p.m. (G.M.T.)

WORK OF THE POST OFFICE.

The carriage and custody of the mails has been maintained by the State "from time immemorial." The telegraphs were transferred to the State on Jan. 28, 1870; the telephone service became exclusively owned and operated by the Government (with one or two minor exceptions) on the transfer of the National Telephone Company's undertaking to the Post Office on Jan. 1, 1921. The submarine telegraph cables connecting the British Isles with the various Dominions and most Foreign Countries except the Continent of Europe are maintained and operated by private companies. The submarine telephone cables from the British Isles to the Continent are either owned entirely by the State or jointly with the Foreign Administration in whose territory the other end of the cable terminates.

The following details of the work done by the Post Office have been supplied to the Editor:—

THE KINGDOM OF ENGLAND.

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of England occupies the southern portion of the island of Great Britain and lies between $55^{\circ} 46'$ and $49^{\circ} 57' 30''$ N. latitude (from the mouth of the Tweed to the Lizard), and between $1^{\circ} 46'$ E. and $5^{\circ} 43'$ W. (from Lowestoft to Land's End). England is bounded on the north by the summit of the Cheviot Hills, which form a natural boundary with the Kingdom of Scotland; on the south by the English Channel; on the east by the Straits of Dover (Pas de Calais) and the North Sea; and on the west by the Atlantic Ocean, Wales and the Irish Sea. Area, 50,851 square miles. Population (1931) 37,354,977.

Relief.—There is a natural orographic division into the hilly districts of the north, west and south-west, and the undulating downs and low-lying plains of the east and south-east. In the extreme north the Cheviot Hills run from east to west, culminating in the Cheviot, 2,676 feet above mean sea level. Divided from the Cheviots by the Tyne Gap is the Pennine Chain, running N. by W. to S. by E., with their highest point in Cross Fell, 2,930 feet above mean sea level. West of the Pennines are the Cumbrian Mountains, which contain in Scafell Pike (3,280 feet) the highest land in England, and east of the Pennines are the Yorkshire Moors, their highest point being Urra Moor (1,480 feet). South of the Pennines are the Peak of Derbyshire (2,088 feet) and Dartmoor (High Willhays, 2,039 feet). In the western county of Shropshire are the isolated Wrekin (1,235 feet), Long Mynd (1,674 feet), and Brown (1,100 feet); in Herefordshire the Black Mountain (2,320 feet), in Worcestershire the Malvern Hills (1,395 feet), in Monmouthshire the Sugar Loaf (1,945 feet) and Coty (1,903 feet), and the Cotswold Hills of Gloucestershire contain Cleeve Cloud (1,134 feet).

Hydrography.—The Thames is the longest and most important river of England, with a total length of 220 miles from its source in the Cotswold Hills to its outflow into the North Sea, and is navigable by ocean-going steamers to London Bridge. The Thames is tidal to Teddington (60 miles from its mouth) and forms county boundaries almost throughout its course; on its banks are situated the capital of the British Empire; Windsor Castle, the home of the Sovereign; Eton College, the first of the public schools; and Oxford, the oldest university in the kingdom. The *Severn is the longest river in Great Britain, rising in the north-eastern slopes of Plinlimmon (Wales) and entering England in Shropshire, with a total length of 220 miles from its source to its outflow into the Bristol Channel, where it receives on the left the Bristol Avon, and on the right the Wye, its other tributaries being the Yrwy, Tern, Stour, Tems and Upper (or Warwickshire) Avon. The Severn is tidal below Gloucester, and a high bore or tidal wave sometimes reverses the flow as high as Tewkesbury (13½ miles above Gloucester). The scenery of the greater part of the river is very picturesque and beautiful, and the Severn is a noted salmon river, some of its tributaries being famous for trout. Navigation is assisted by the Gloucester and Berkeley Ship Canal (26½ miles), which admits vessels of 350 tons to Gloucester. The Severn Tunnel, 14 miles below the Sharpness Bridge, begun in 1873 and completed in 1886 (at a cost of £2,000,000) after many difficulties from flooding, is 4 miles 644 yards in length (of which 2½ miles are under the river). Of the remaining English rivers those flowing into the North Sea are the Tyne, Wear, Tees, Ouse and Trent from the Pennine Range, the Great Ouse (160 miles) from the Central Plain, and the Orwell and Stour from the hills of East Anglia. Flowing into the English Channel are the Sussex Ouse from the Weald, the Itchen from the Wiltshire and Hampshire Hills, and the Axe, Teign, Dart, Tamar and Exe from the Devonian Hills; and flowing into the Irish Sea are the Morsey, Ribble and Eden from the western slopes of the Pennines and the Derwent from the Cumbrian Mountains. The English Lakes are noteworthy rather from their picturesque scenery and poetic associations than from their size. These lie mainly in Cumberland, but partly in Westmorland and Lancashire, the largest being Windermere (20 miles long), Ullswater and Derwentwater.

Islands.—The Scilly Islands (Cornwall), 25 miles from Land's End, consist of about 40 islands, with a total area of about 4,000 acres, only St. Mary's, Treasc, St. Martin's, St. Agnes and Bryher being inhabited, population (1931), 1,732. The capital is Hugh Town, in St. Mary's. The climate is unusually mild, and vegetation luxuriant, semi-tropical plants flourishing in the open. The Isle of Wight is separated from Hampshire by the Solent. The total area is 149 sq. miles, population (1931), 88,400. The climate is mild and healthy, and many watering places have grown up during the last century. Capital, Newport, at the head of the estuary of the Medina, Cowes (at the mouth) being the chief port; other centres are Ryde, Sandown, Shanklin, Ventnor, Freshwater, Yarmouth, Totland Bay, Seaview and Bembridge. Lundy Island, 12 miles N.W. of Hartland Point, Devon, is about 2½ miles long, and 1 mile broad, with a total area of about 1,050 acres (mainly picturesque), and a population of about 50; it contains the seat of the proprietor of the island and two lighthouses.

Climate.—The south-westerly winds from the Atlantic Ocean penetrate to the heart of the country, affecting the temperature of the greater part of the kingdom, and only the coastal regions of the east have a modified continental climate. The mean annual temperature is about 52° Fahrenheit, varying from 52° in the Scilly Islands to 48° at the mouth of the Tweed, and generally the west of England is mild and wet in winter and cool and less wet in summer, while the east is cool and dry in winter and spring and hot and less dry in summer and autumn, the wettest region being the Lake district of Cumberland and the driest in the Thames estuary and the Lincolnshire Wash. The climate of England is influenced by the much-indented coastline of the west and by the flow of warm water in the Gulf Stream Drift, which strikes the S.W. projection and proceeds N. and E. along the west and south coasts.

* A Report of the Severn Barrage Committee of the Economic Advisory Council, issued in March 1933, recommends a barrage of the river Severn at the point known as "The English Stones": the estimated cost of the scheme as fifty million pounds, spread over some years, and the estimated output is 2,207,000,000 units (about one-thirtieth of the requirements of the whole country for the year 1931).

EARLY INHABITANTS.

Prehistoric Man.—A skeleton found at Galley Hill, near Northfleet, Kent (in 1895), has been ascribed to a man of Central Asian race of the Early Stone Age, and stone implements of the remote Eolithic, Paleolithic and Neolithic periods are abundantly found throughout England. The Neolithic period is held to have merged into the Bronze Age about 2000 to 1500 B.C., and a date between these years has been given to Stonehenge (presented by Sir C. H. E. Chubb to the Nation in 1908, and now preserved as a national monument). Stonehenge (10 miles N. of Salisbury, Wiltshire) consists of two circles of menhirs (the largest monolith being 22½ feet in height), only 16 remaining in position in the outer circle, while two of the five triple sets are still in position in the inner circle. The use for which the temple or monument was erected is the subject of many conjectures.

The Celtic Invasion.—In the latter part of the Bronze Age the Goidels, a people of Celtic race, and in the Iron Age another Celtic race of Brythons, invaded the country and brought with them Celtic civilization and dialects, place names in England bearing witness to the spread of the invasion over the whole kingdom.

The Roman Conquest.—Julius Cæsar raided Britain in 55 B.C. and 54 B.C., and in 43 A.D. the conquest of the country was undertaken by the Roman Emperor Claudius, who sent Aulus Plautius with a well-equipped army of 40,000 men, and himself visited Colchester (Cannulodunum) and Londinium. The British leader from 48-51 A.D. was Caratacus (strictly Caratacus), who was finally captured and sent to Rome. By 70 A.D. the conquest of South Britain was completed, a great revolt under Boudicca (strictly Boudica), Queen of the Iceni (Norfolk), being crushed in 62 A.D. In 122 A.D. the Emperor Hadrian visited Britain and built a continuous rampart, known as Hadrian's Wall, from Wallsend to Bowness (Tyne to Solway), remains of which are still traceable. The Romans administered Britain as a Province under a Governor, with a well defined system of local government, each Roman municipality ruling itself and the surrounding territory. Colchester, Lincoln, York, Gloucester and St. Albans stand on the sites of five Roman municipalities, while London was the centre of the road system and the seat of the financial officials of the Province of Britain. A well preserved Roman town of about 100 acres was first uncovered in the 18th century at Silchester (Calleva Atrebatum), 10 miles south of Reading, and since 1860 the whole site has been investigated. Four main groups of roads radiated from London, and a fifth (the Fosse) ran obliquely from Ermine Street (at Lincoln), through Leicester, Cirencester and Bath to Exeter. Of the four groups radiating from London one ran S.E. to Canterbury and the coast of Kent, a second to Silchester and thence to parts of Western Britain and South Wales, a third (now known as Watling Street) ran through Verulamium (St. Albans) to Chester, with various branches, and the fourth reached Colchester, Lincoln, York and the eastern counties. Christianity reached the Roman Province of Britain from Gaul in the 3rd century (or possibly earlier), Alban, "the Protomartyr of Britain" being put to death as a Christian during the persecution of Diocletian (June 22, 303), at his native town Verulamium (St. Albans). The Bishops of Londinium, Eborac cum (York), and Lindum (Lincoln) attended the Council of Arles in 314. The Roman garrison of Britain was much harassed in the 4th century by Saxon pirates, who invaded the eastern counties from the Wash to Spithhead, while about 350 A.D. incursions in the north of Irish (Scotti) and Picts became most formidable, and towards the end of the century many troops were removed from Britain for service in other parts of the Roman Empire. Early in the 5th century Gaul was taken from the Romans by Teutonic invaders, and Britain was cut off from Rome; officials were no longer sent to the island, the garrison was left to defend itself, and appears to have been driven inland by the Northern and Saxon invaders, and to have been conquered and absorbed by the Celtic inhabitants, whose language and customs re-emerged. According to legend, the British King Vortigern called in the Saxons to defend him against the Picts, the Saxon chieftains being Hengist and Horsa, who landed at Ebbsfleet, Kent, and established themselves in the Isle of Thanet. In 455 Horsa was slain in battle against Vortigern, and Hengist reigned with his son in Kent. Bode describes the Kentish settlers as Jutes, and there are traces of differences in Kentish customs from those of other Anglo-Saxon kingdoms.

Anglo-Saxons and Normans.—The English (Angles, Saxons and Jutes) drove the Britons into the mountain fastnesses of the West (Strathclyde, Wales and Cornwall), the name of Welsh (old English Waelisc = Foreign) being given to the Islanders by the invaders. The area thus conquered was divided into several kingdoms, of which the chief were Northumbria (Bernicia and Deira), Mercia (Middle Angles), and Wessex. The heathen Angli (whose gods Ti, Woden, Thunor and Frigg are commemorated in "Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday") were converted to Christianity by a mission under Augustine (dispatched by Pope Gregory in 597), which established Archbishoprics at Canterbury and York, and the country appears to have been again converted by the end of the 7th century. In the 8th century Offa, King of Mercia, is stated to have built a wall and rampart, afterwards known as Offa's Dike, from the mouth of the Dee to that of the Wye, as a protection against the Welsh. The greatest of the English kingdoms was Wessex, with its capital at Winchester, and the greatest of the Wessex kings was Alfred the Great (871-901), who resisted the incursions of the Northmen (Danes) and fixed a limit to their advance by the Treaty of Wedmore (878). In the 10th century the Kings of Wessex recovered the whole of England from the Danes, but subsequent rulers were unable to resist the invaders, and England paid tribute (Danegelt) for many years, and was ruled by Danish Kings from 1016 to 1042, when Edward the Confessor was recalled from exile. In 1066 Harold (brother-in-law of Edward and son of Earl Godwin of Wessex) was chosen King of England, but after defeating a Northumbrian revolt under his brother Tostig (aided by an invading army of Harold Godson of Norway) at Stamford Bridge in Yorkshire (Sept. 25), he was himself defeated at the Battle of Hastings (or Sautlache) on Oct. 14, 1066, and the Norman Conquest secured the throne of England for Duke William of Normandy. Since the Norman Conquest all attempts to invade England have been defeated.

AVERAGE HEIGHTS AND WEIGHTS.

The average heights and weights of men in the United Kingdom have been tabulated as follows. The weights include clothing, which is generally calculated at one-twenty-fourth of the whole.

	Average Height.	Average Weight.
Scotsmen	5 ft. 8½ in.	11 st. 11 lb.
Irishmen	5 ft. 8 in.	10 st. 23 lb.
Englishmen	5 ft. 7½ in.	11 st. 1 lb.
Welshmen	5 ft. 6½ in.	11 st. 4 lb.

LONDON, the capital of England and of the British Empire, and the greatest city in the world, is situated on both banks of the River Thames, 30 miles from its outflow into the North Sea.

The City of London represents London within its ancient boundaries. The City is the financial and business centre of London, and includes the head offices of the principal banks, insurance companies, and mercantile houses, in addition to buildings ranging from the historic interest of the Roman Wall, the Norman Tower and the 13th century Guildhall, to the massive splendour of St. Paul's, and the architectural beauty of Wren's spires (Bow Church, St. Bride's, St. Dunstan's in the East, &c.).

The City of Westminster, which is bounded by the City of London on the east, by Chelsea and Kensington on the west, by Paddington, St. Marylebone and Holborn on the north, and by the Thames and Chelsea on the south, was formed into a borough by the London Government Act of 1860, and was created a city by Royal Charter of Oct. 19, 1900, the Council consisting of a Mayor, 10 Aldermen and 60 Councillors. Extending from the eastern end of the Strand to Kensington Gardens, and from Oxford-street to the Thames, it includes within its boundaries a large number of the finest buildings in London. The Abbey and the Roman Catholic Cathedral, the Houses of Parliament and the Law Courts, Buckingham Palace and St. James's, and the principal Government offices, Clubs and Theatres are situated in Westminster, which also includes the fashionable residential districts of Mayfair and Belgravia. Westminster is the richest of the London areas.

Metropolitan Boroughs.—Under the London Government Act of 1899 the administrative functions of the various vestries in the Metropolitan districts surrounding the City of London were transferred to 28 Metropolitan Boroughs, of which one became afterwards the City of Westminster. The area covered by these boroughs extends northwards to include Stoke Newington, southwards to Wandsworth and Lewisham, eastwards to Woolwich, and westwards to Hammersmith.

London County Council.—For County purposes the affairs of London are administered by the London County Council, which was created by the Local Government Act of 1888.

Miscellaneous Authorities.—For Police purposes the administration is invested in the City Corporation as to the City Police and in the Home Office as to the Metropolitan Police. The authority for the supply of water is the Metropolitan Water Board; while the River Thames is administered as to its tidal portion by the Port of London Authority and above Teddington by the Thames Conservancy, the lighthouse and pilotage authority being Trinity House. The bridges are maintained in the City of London by the Bridge House Estates Committee of the Corporation of the City, and in the remaining area by the London County Council. The London and Home Counties Joint Electricity Authority (5 Millbank, Westminster, S.W. 1) provides (or secures the provision of) electricity throughout an area of 1,797 sq. miles.

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF LONDON.

LONDON was famed for its vast conflux of traders and its abundant commerce even in the first century of the Christian era. From the Romans, it is said, it received municipal institutions which have endured in their main features to the present day. In Saxon times it was, in reality, a small independent State, and its burgesses maintained their independence even after the Battle of Hasting. William the Norman only gained possession of their city by means of a treaty with them, and about eight years after he granted a charter, which is still preserved. It is addressed to William the Bishop, Godfrey the Portreeve, and all the Burgesses, and promises that they shall be "law worthy" (i.e., possessed of privileges) as they were in the days of Edward the Confessor. The Portreeve, however, received the Norman title of Bailiff, which, in 1191, was changed to Mayor; the first holder under the new name being Henry Fitzalwyn, who filled the office for 24 years. On his death a new charter was granted by King John in 1214, which directed the Mayor to be chosen annually, which has ever since been done; though in early times the same individual often held the office more than once. A familiar instance is that of "Whittington, thrice Lord Mayor of London" (in reality four times A.D. 1397, 1398, 1406, 1419); and many modern cases have occurred. The title of Lord Mayor was not in general use in the outer world until about 1546. The Lord Mayor is elected at Michaelmas; he is sworn into office on November 8, and on the following day presented to the Lord Chief Justice at the Royal Courts of Justice, to take the final declaration of office—the pageant being popularly known as the Lord Mayor's Show.

Aldermen were first appointed by a charter of Henry III. in 1242, and were elected annually between 1377 and 1394, when a charter of Richard II. directed them to be chosen for life. The Common Council, elected annually on St. Thomas's Day (Dec. 21), was, at an early date, substituted for a popular assembly called the Folkmoote. At first only two representatives were sent from each ward, but the number has since been greatly increased, some wards having as many as 16 members, and none less than four. Sheriffs (as well as aldermen) were Saxon officers who usually had charge of a large district. The time of their appointment for London is uncertain, but they appear in ancient records as early as A.D. 1130. At first they were only the officers of the Crown, and were named by the Barons of the Exchequer; but King John gave them, in the first year of his reign, permission to choose their own Sheriffs. The citizens, however, lost this privilege, as far as the election of Sheriff of Middlesex is concerned, by the Local Government Act, 1888; but they continue, as heretofore, to choose the Sheriffs of the City of London. They are appointed on Midsummer Day, and enter on office at Michaelmas.

Officers.—The Recorder was first appointed in 1298. The Chamberlain is an ancient officer. There were at one time two Chamberlains—the King's Chamberlain and the Chamberlain of the Guildhall. The former appears to have fallen into abeyance circa 1319. The first contemporary record of the office of City Chamberlain is 1276. The Town Clerk and Common Serjeant are mentioned as officers in the charter of Edward II., A.D. 1329; but the offices can be traced to a much earlier date than this.

The Right Honourable the Lord Mayor 1933-1934.

Sir Charles Henry Collett, Kt., born 1864; Common Councillman, 1912; Alderman of Bridge Ward, 1927; Sheriff, 1932; Lord Mayor, 1933; The Mansion House, E.C. 4. £10,000

* The above is abstracted from the 300th "City's Cash Account" of the series extant—viz. 1633 to 1932-33. (The Accounts earlier than A.D. 1633 were believed to have been destroyed in the Fire of London, but two years' Accounts, temp. Queen Elizabeth, have been discovered among the Corporation Archives, as exceptions to that belief.) The Volumes are in full detail, signed by the Auditors, and in perfect preservation. The above extract is from the 142th Annual Printed Account of the Corporation, A.D. 1776 to 1932-33. The Accounts are prepared and stated as directed by Resolutions of the Court of Common Council of the 6th June, 1903, the 14th December, 1905, and 26th January, 1927, upon Reports of the Coal and Corn and Finance Committees, and they are printed in conformity with the 26th Standing Order of the Court of Common Council. The Accounts are made up to the end of March and are issued in the form prescribed by those Orders, and show the Income and Expenditure applicable to the year on the various Funds.

THE CITY GUILDS (LIVERY COMPANIES).

In the majority of cases the designation of the Company gives a clue to the trade which gave rise to the guild, the Broderers (Embroiderers), Cordwainers (cobblers), Fletchers (arrow makers), Loriners (bridle, bit, and spur makers), Poulterers (poulterers), Scriveners (legal writers), Upholders (upholsterers), and Vintners (wine sellers) retaining the ancient name of the trade. The order of precedence is given in parentheses after the name of each Company.

9,716 Liverymen of the Guilds are entitled to vote at elections in Common Hall (see p. 668). The actual net number is, however, smaller, as many belong to more than one Guild; and only those who have residential or other qualification in the City have the Parliamentary vote there.

There are 78 Guilds in existence. The Liveryes of the Loriners (413), Stationers (361), and Merchant Taylors (326), are the most numerous, the Up-holders (18), the smallest.

THE LONDON FIRE BRIGADE. Headquarters: 94 Southwark Bridge Road, S.E. 1.

PREVIOUS to the formation of the Metropolitan Fire Brigade in 1866 the churchwardens and overseers of every parish had been compelled, under an Act passed in 1774, to maintain an engine for putting out all fires occurring within their own boundaries; and from about 1830 the leading fire insurance companies had jointly organised and worked a fire-engine establishment of their own. On January 1, 1866, under the Metropolitan Fire Brigade Act, 1865, the Metropolitan Board of Works took over these responsibilities. On January 1, 1867, the Board also took over from the Royal Society for the Protection of Life from Fire (founded 1844) the service of the saving of Life from fire. By the passing of the Local Government Act, 1888, the London County Council assumed control of the Fire Brigade. In 1904 the title of the Brigade was altered from "Metropolitan Fire Brigade" to "London Fire Brigade."

On Dec. 31, 1923, the complement of the Brigade consisted of:—1 chief officer; 2 divisional officers; 3 assistant divisional officers; and 1,943 officers, firemen, and pilots; a technical and clerical staff of 193. There were 65 land fire-stations, 3 river stations and 1 river repairing depot. The appliances included 8 motor fire engines, 74 motor escape vans, 6 petrol-electric motor ladders, 6 petrol motor ladders (in addition to tenders, &c.), 3 hose carts and 102 fire escapes, 1 long fire ladder, 57 miles of hose, 1 steam and 3 motor fire floats, 64 smoke helmets, 308 hook ladders and 293 hook belts. There were 1,694 street fire-alarm posts, 97 telephone lines from station to station and 355 telephone lines to public and other buildings. The number of calls to which the Brigade responded during the year ended Dec. 31, 1923, totalled 7,682, and the fires numbered 4,258, of which 28 were classed as "serious."

THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL.

Offices, The County Hall, Westminster Bridge, S.E. 1, and Old County Hall, Spring Gardens, S.W. 1.
Hours 9.30 to 5 (Monday to Thursday), 9.30 to 5.30 (Friday), 9.30 to 12.30 (Saturday).

Meets on Tuesday at 2.30 p.m.

THE London County Council was constituted under the Local Government Act of 1888. London is an administrative county, covering an area of 127 square miles.

The City of London is an electoral division of the county. The County of the City of London is a county for non-administrative purposes, such as quarter sessions, justices, &c.; and the Metropolis outside the City is a county for non-administrative purposes, by name the County of London, in which the justices continue their judicial duties.

The Council comprises a chairman, 20 aldermen, and 124 councillors, together 145, or, if the chairman be also an elected member or alderman, 144. The term of office for aldermen is 6 years, and ten retire every 3 years. The councillors are elected for 3 years. The councillors are elected directly by the ratepayers, and the councillors elect the aldermen. The positions of aldermen and councillors are the same, except as to the term of office.

The method by which the Council discharges the multitudinous duties entrusted to it is a generous delegation of powers to committees under well defined rules, subject to the reservation to the Council itself of all questions of principle, and to periodical reports of action taken. In addition to members of the Council co-opted members are included on the following committees: Central Public Health, Education, Housing, Mental Hospitals, Midwives Acts and Public Assistance.

Under the Local Government Act, 1929, the Council, as from April 1, 1930, became responsible for the administration of all forms of poor relief in London, including the services previously maintained by the late Metropolitan Asylums Board. As required by the Act the Council prepared an administrative scheme for discharging the functions transferred, and the transferred services were merged as far as possible in the Council's existing organisation and allocated to the committees of the Council to which they were appropriate.

The Finance Committee have important statutory powers. No costs, debt or liability exceeding £50 may be incurred by the Council except upon a resolution passed on an estimate submitted by the Finance Committee. The Council is the principal money-raising body for all the local authorities in the county, and has a net debt, according to the latest returns, of £82,738,000 (of which £46,543,000 represents debt incurred for revenue-producing undertakings), and an annual expenditure of about thirty-six millions.

The Central Public Health Committee, among other duties affecting public health, are responsible for the treatment of tuberculosis, the diagnosis and treatment of venereal disease, the maintenance of 74 hospitals, with accommodation for over 41,000 patients, and the Council's ambulance service.

The Education Committee comprise thirty-eight members of the Council and twelve co-opted members, of whom not less than five are required to be women. The Education service involves an annual expenditure of nearly £13,000,000. The Council maintains 1,148 elementary schools with over 600,000 pupils, and 247 secondary and technical schools, evening institutes and training colleges, with nearly 200,000 students. In addition it gives grants-in-aid to the University of London and to 81 secondary and technical schools and training colleges.

The Housing Committee perform the duties cast upon the Council by the various Housing Acts, including the clearance of insanitary areas and the building of working-class dwellings. The total capital expenditure incurred up to March 31, 1933, in respect of all schemes was £41,057,000. In addition to very large works which are still in progress the Council has approved a policy of slum clearance and improvement in London extending over a period of 20 years from April 1, 1934, involving the displacement of, and the provision of rehousing accommodation for, about 250,000 persons, at a total capital cost of approximately £35,000,000.

The Improvements Committee deal with questions relating to the carrying out of street improvements and construction of bridges, tunnels and ferries. The Council has decided to undertake the reconditioning of Waterloo Bridge and the widening thereof by a process of corbelling-out to take four lines of vehicular traffic, and steps are being taken to commence the work early in 1934.

The Mental Hospitals Committee administer the duties falling on the Council under the Lunacy Acts and the Mental Deficiency Act, 1913, and also the mental hospitals transferred from the Metropolitan Asylums Board. The Council has mental hospitals and other institutions for the care of mental defectives, with accommodation for over 32,000 patients.

The Metropolitan Main Drainage system covers about 120 square miles, including certain districts outside the county, and comprises about 400 miles of main, storm-relief, intercepting and outfall sewers, twelve pumping stations, two sewage precipitation stations, and five sludge vessels. The total capital outlay on main drainage is over £16,000,000, and further expenditure is in progress for a scheme to relieve certain districts from flooding after heavy falls of rain, and for the installation of plant at the northern outfall for the treatment of sewage by the activated sludge process.

The Public Assistance Committee administer the duties in connection with poor relief, other than hospital treatment, including the maintenance of institutions, receiving homes and training centres, for over 10,000 inmates.

Under the provisions of the London Passenger Transport Act, 1933, the Council's Tramways Undertaking, in common with other passenger transport undertakings in and around London, passed to the London Passenger Transport Board on July 1, 1933. So far as the Council's system was concerned the transfer involved 167 miles of route (123 underground conduit and 44 overhead trolley), with through-running facilities over 92 miles of line of other authorities, a power station with a capacity of 27,000 kw., a central repair depot for the overhaul and renovation of rolling stock, numerous auxiliary services, including a modern printing shop, and a staff numbering over 13,000. The results of working for the year 1932-33 were: gross receipts £4,116,154, surplus on working £669,314, deficiency for year, after payment of interest on capital outlay and providing for repayment of debt £2,363,265, which was charged on the special county rate.

Amongst the Other Powers and Duties of the Council may be mentioned the following:—Sanctioning of loans required by the councils of the metropolitan boroughs; maintenance of fire brigade; acquisition and maintenance of parks and open spaces; the sanctioning of local sewers; town planning; controlling the building line, and the naming of streets and numbering of houses; supervising buildings and district surveyors; dangerous structures; cattle diseases; controlling storage of explosive substances and petroleum; infant life protection; gas, gas-meter and electricity-meter testing; testing weights and measures; licensing of slaughter-houses and of cow-houses; supervision of common lodging-houses; the granting of licences for music, dancing and boxing; historic buildings and monuments; inspection of factories and certain other buildings to secure means of escape from fire; administration of the Shops Act, the Children Act, and the Midwives Acts; licensing and inspection of employment agencies; registration of massage establishments; licensing of premises under the Cinematograph Act; registration of motor cars; collection of duties on motor cars, dog and establishment and certain other local taxation licences; registration of War charities; and welfare of blind persons.

The Expenditure of the Council, including loans to other local authorities, is met by two chief sources of supply—capital money raised by the issue of Stock, Bonds or bills, or by the use of the Sinking Fund of the Council's debt, and current income raised in a county rate or by the revenue of undertakings. Certain contributions, including education grants, are also received from the Imperial Exchequer. All borrowings by the Council are subject to the provision of a sinking fund, under Treasury approval, sufficient to repay all expenditure generally within a period of 60 years (in a few cases the limit is 80 years). The total Stock outstanding at September 30, 1933, was £98,135,599. These figures are exclusive of the issues of Bonds, the amount outstanding at September 30, 1933, being £6,067,760 Local Bonds for Housing.

The Rating for the year 1933-34, as shown by the statement below (which relates to rate accounts only), amounted to 6s. in the pound over the whole county, including the City and a further rate over the county outside the City of 3½d. in the pound, together 6s. 3½d. The total rate for 1932-33 was 6s. 6½d. The Rateable Value of the County of London on April 6, 1933, was £60,406,158—a 1d. rate over the whole county producing £521,688.

THE PRINCIPAL ENGLISH CITIES.

BIRMINGHAM.

BIRMINGHAM (Warwickshire), the second City in England, situated in the heart of industrial England, is the chief centre of the hardware trade of the world. It is practically equidistant from the other important trade centres in the country, being 111 miles from London, 85 miles from Manchester and 91 miles from Bristol. The municipal area is 51,147 acres (about 71 square miles), with a population at the census of 1931 of 1,017,500.

It is estimated that over 1,200 distinct trades are carried on in the city, the chief industries being the manufacture of ammunition and small arms, bakelite goods, chocolate, chemicals, cycles and their component parts, magnetos, railway rolling-stock, glass, motor-cars and motor-cycles, motor tyres, tyre valves, tools, toys, electrical apparatus, wireless sets and components, jewellery and brass working.

Gas, water and electricity are supplied by the Corporation, who also own the transport undertaking, markets and Municipal Bank. An Information Bureau has been opened at the Council House to deal with all enquiries relating to the Municipal and Industrial facilities of Birmingham.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, built in 1832-1850 on the lines of the Temple of Jupiter Stator at Rome, with a large hall; the Council House and Corporation Art Gallery and Museum (1878); the University (Aston Webb, 1909); the Central Library; the 13th century Church of St. Martin (rebuilt 1873); the Cathedral (formerly St. Philip's Church, built by Archer, a pupil of Wren's), the Roman Catholic Cathedral of St. Chad (Pugin), and the Wesleyan Central Hall. A memorial bust of Abraham Lincoln was unveiled in 1921. Birmingham was incorporated as a borough in 1836, and was created a city in 1889; it is governed by a Lord Mayor and City Council of 30 Aldermen and 92 Councillors. The generally accepted derivation of "Birmingham" is the ham or dwelling-place of the ing of the family of Berm, presumed to have been a Saxon. Between the 11th and 16th centuries, the de Berminghams were Lords of the Manor.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1933-1934), H. E. Goodby.

Recorder, E. W. Cave, K.C. (1932).

Stipendiary Magistrate, The Rt. Hon. Lord Ilkerton (1910).

Town Clerk, F. H. C. Wiltshire (1918).

Clerk of the Peace, Joseph James (1905).

LIVERPOOL.

LIVERPOOL (Lancashire), on the right bank of the river Mersey, 3 miles from the Irish Sea and 194 miles N.W. of London, is one of the greatest trading centres of the world and the principal port in the United Kingdom for the Atlantic trade. The municipal area is 30,304 acres (which includes 1,883 acres in the bed of the river Mersey) (about 43 square miles, excluding the bed of the river), with a population at the census of 1931 of 856,072. The net tonnage of British and Foreign ships engaged in ocean trade arriving in the port during 1931 was 13,073,652, and of those departing 11,901,358; these figures exclude 2,450,801 tons for arrivals and 3,735,069 for departures in the coasting trade, while the value of the sea-borne trade of the port was stated at £44,030,565 for 1931. The docks, on both sides of the river, have a linear quayage of about 37 miles, and the Gladstone docks can accommodate the largest vessels afloat. The dock authority is the Mersey Docks and Harbour Board. The chief import is grain, those next in importance being sugar, fruit, oil, timber, cotton and provisions.

The principal buildings are the Cathedral, erected from the designs of Sir Gilbert Scott and consecrated in 1924; when completed this will be the largest ecclesiastical building in England; St. George's Hall, erected 1833-1854, from the designs of Harvey Lonsdale Elmes, at a cost of £300,000, and regarded as the finest modern example of classical architecture; the Town Hall, erected 1754 from the designs of Wood; the Walker Fine Art Gallery; the University; the Royal Infirmary; the Municipal Offices; and the Custom House. A Roman Catholic Cathedral, designed to be the largest in the world, will be built on Brownlow Hill.

Liverpool was incorporated as a borough early in the 13th century and was created a city in 1880. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor and a City Council which comprises 30 Aldermen and 118 Councillors. The name is believed to be derived from Norse words meaning the "Pool of the Slopes."

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1933-1934), G. A. Strong.

Recorder, Edward G. Hemmerde, K.C. (1909).

Stipendiary Magistrate, Stuart Deacon (1910).

President, Court of Passage, Sir Wm. F. Kyffin Taylor, K.B., K.C.

Town Clerk, Walter Moon, £3,300 (1928).

Clerk of the Peace, R. D. Cripps.

MANCHESTER.

MANCHESTER (Lancashire), the centre of the world's cotton trade, is 126 miles N.W. of London. The municipal area is 27,257 acres (about 34 square miles), the population at the census of 1931 being 766,333.

Manchester is the distributing centre of the cotton spinning and weaving of Lancashire for the whole world, and of butter and foodstuffs for the most densely populated part of England. It also contains large engineering and machinery works and factories of hats, clothing, india-rubber goods, chemicals, &c. The city is connected with the sea by the Manchester Ship Canal (opened in 1894), which has a total length of 35½ miles, a depth of 28 to 30 feet, and a bottom width (with certain exceptions) of 120 feet. The net tonnage of ships engaged in the Foreign Trade was 3,131,945 for arrivals and 2,703,877 for departures in 1931, the value of the sea-borne trade of the port being £55,090,274 in 1931. The net tonnage of arrivals in the Coasting Trade was 458,014, and of departures 789,508 net tons in 1931. In 1931 the weight of sea-borne merchandise which passed over the Waterway amounted to 5,688,195 tons.

The principal buildings are the Town Hall, erected in 1877 from the designs of Alfred Waterhouse, R.A.; the Royal Exchange, built in 1869, enlarged at cost of £200,000 and reopened by the King, 1921; the Free Trade Hall, erected from the designs of Walters, in 1856, on the site of the "Peterloo Massacres" (Aug. 16, 1819) in St. Peter's Fields; the Art Gallery; the Whitworth Institute; the 17th century Chetham Library; the Rylands Library (1899), which includes the Althorp collection; the University (Owens College); and the 12th century Cathedral (formerly the parish church). A new Central Library is nearing completion. Manchester is one of the principal centres of political, literary and scientific advancement, and the Hallé Concerts have placed the city in the forefront of musical development. The Manchester Guardian newspaper exercises a widespread influence throughout the English-speaking world.

The town received a charter of incorporation in 1283 and was created a city in 1853. The City Council consists of 36 Aldermen and 108 Councillors. The Latin name of the city was Mancunium.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1933-1934), Joseph Bluns.

Recorder, Sir Walter Greaves-Lord, K.C., M.P. (1925).

Stipendiary Magistrate, J. Wellesley Orr (1927).

Town Clerk, F. E. Warbreck Howell (1929).

Clerk of the Peace, E. M. Redhead.

SHEFFIELD.

SHEFFIELD (Yorkshire, West Riding), the chief centre of the heavy steel and cutlery trade, is situated in the extreme south of Yorkshire, 199 miles N.N.W. of London, at the junction of the Sheaf, Porter, Rivell and Loxley with the river Don. The city has an area of 34,163 acres (about 53 square miles), with a population at the census of 1931 of 551,757. The principal industries are the manufacture of heavy steel (armour plates, rails, tyres, axles, engine castings, &c.), cutlery, and instruments, in addition to engines and general machinery, tanning, confectionery, bicycles, iron and brass founding, silver refining, brush making, and many other industries. Sheffield plate (silver rolled on other metals) made during the years 1742-1840, when electroplating superseded the process, is greatly prized by collectors.

The principal buildings are the 14th century Parish Church (St. Peter's), the Town Hall (1877), the Cutlers' Hall (1832), Corn Exchange, Market Hall, Museum, Mappin Art Gallery, Ruskin Museum, the University and City Hall (1932).

The Saxon town of Eceafeld was created a county borough in 1888 and a city in 1893, the Chief Magistrate becoming a Lord Mayor in 1897. The Corporation includes 24 Aldermen and 72 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1933-1934), F. Marshall.

Recorder, Walter Hedley, K.C. (1931).

Master Cutler (1932-1933), Lt.-Col. A. N. Lee, D.S.O., O.B.E., T.D.

Town Clerk, E. B. Gibson (1932).

Clerk of the Peace, G. E. Smith.

LEEDS.

LEEDS (Yorkshire, West Riding) is favourably situated in the coal and iron districts of England, 185 miles N.N.W. of London, and is the centre of the woollen industry and the wholesale clothing trade. The city has also the largest share of the leather trade of the United Kingdom, in addition to large rope works, printing works, and factories of thread, glass and earthenware, with metal casting, machinery and machine tools, steam engines, railway wagons, and other engineering works. Leeds is connected with the Mersey in the west by the Leeds and Liverpool Canal, with the Humber in the east by the Aire and Calder Navigation, and is an important railway centre.

The municipal area is 38,106 acres (nearly 60 square miles), the population at the census of 1931 being 482,780.

The principal buildings are the Civic Hall (opened by King George V. in 1923), the Royal Exchange (1872), the Philosophical Hall, the Municipal Buildings and Art Gallery (1884), the University and the Leeds Institute of Science, Art and Literature (1895). The Parish Church (St. Peter's) was rebuilt in 1840; the 12th century St. John's Church has a fine interior with a famous Renaissance screen; the 17th century Mill Hill Chapel was rebuilt in 1849. Kirkstall Abbey (about 3 miles from the centre of the city), founded by Henry de Lacl in 1122, is one of the most complete examples of Cistercian houses now remaining. Temple Newsum, birth-place of Lord Darley, was acquired by the Corporation in 1922. The present mansion, a stately edifice in red brick, was built by Sir Arthur Ingram in 1620. Adel Church, about 3½ miles from the centre of the city, is a fine Norman structure.

Leeds was first incorporated by Charles I. in 1626, made a county borough in 1889, and was created a city in 1893. The Lord Mayor presides over a corporation of 26 Aldermen and 78 Councillors. The earliest forms of the name are Loidis or Ledes, the origin of which is obscure.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1933-1934), A. E. Wilkinson.

Recorder, J. W. Jardine, K.C. (1932).

Stipendiary Magistrate, Horace Marshall (1920).

Clerk of the Peace, Sir Arthur Copson Peake (1896).

Town Clerk, Thomas Thornton (1924).

BRISTOL.

BRISTOL is situated partly in Gloucestershire and partly in Somerset, is a City and County in itself, and is 119 miles W. of London. The present municipal area is 23,528 acres with a population, at the census of 1931, of 395,928. Bristol is noted for its maritime history. Within one mile of the centre of Bristol is the beautiful Clifton and Durdham Down (448 acres), a popular place of resort and recreation. Clifton is a favourite place of residence, standing on the steep bank of the Avon, 200 to 300 feet above mean sea level.

The principal industries are shipbuilding, rope making, chocolate, sugar and tobacco factories, motor and general engineering, clothing, printing, paper bag and cardboard making, glass and earthenware, soap, leather and chemical works, breweries, and copper, lead and iron works. The docks comprised within the Port are the City Docks, 6 miles from the entrance to the river Avon; the Royal Kilward and Avonmouth Docks, at the mouth of the river; and the Portishead Docks, to the westward of the river entrance. The net tonnage of ships (engaged in the Foreign Trade) entered in 1932 was 2,281,322 tons, and of those cleared 748,673 tons, the value of the seaborne trade being stated at £24,567,597 for 1931; the net tonnage of arrivals in the Coasting Trade was 786,136, and of the departures 2,225,566 net tons in 1932. The principal imports are grain, flour and meal, fruit, provisions, frozen meat, sugar, metals, ores, oilseeds, paper, petroleum and petroleum spirit, timber, tobacco and general merchandise, and the chief exports are galvanised iron, tin-plates, machinery, manufactured oils, chemicals, strontia, hardware, and unmanufactured clay.

The chief buildings, in addition to the 14th century Cathedral (rebuilt by Street 1868-1869), the 14th century Church of St. Mary, Redcliffe (described by Queen Elizabeth as "the fairest, goodliest and most famous parish church in England"), and the 15th century Temple Church, are Canynges' House, the Merchant Venturers' Almshouses, St. Peter's Hospital, the Council House, Guildhall, Exchange (erected from the designs of John Wood in 1743), Colston Hall, Museum and Art Gallery, Central Library, the University and Clifton College. The Clifton Suspension Bridge, with a span of 702 feet over the Avon, was projected by I. K. Brunel (the designer of the Great Eastern) in 1836, but was not completed until 1860. It is a remarkable engineering triumph, affords by far the best view of the wonderful Avon Gorge and new low level road from Bristol to the Royal Edward and Avonmouth Docks, known as Portway, and it is seldom that such a panoramic view is to be found in such close proximity to a great city. The Leigh Woods and Nightingale Valley on the opposite side of the river to Clifton Down add enormously to the beauty of the surroundings. Bristol offers to the visitor a wealth of beauty and charm of historic and romantic associations which can in no other part of the country be surpassed.

Bristol was a Royal Borough before the Norman Conquest, and in 1809 its Chief Magistrate (Sir Herbert Ashman) became a Lord Mayor. The Corporation includes 23 Aldermen and 69 Councillors. The earliest forms of the name are Brigstowe and Bristow.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1933-1934), Francis Crispin Luke.

High Steward and Lord Lieutenant, His Grace the Duke of Beaufort, G.C.V.O.

Recorder, Stuart James Bevan, K.C., M.P. (1932).

Town Clerk, Josiah Green.

KINGSTON UPON HULL.

HULL (officially "Kingston upon Hull") is situated in the East Riding of Yorkshire, at the junction of the Hull with the Humber, 22 miles from the North Sea and 181 miles N. of London. The municipal area is 13,392 acres, with a population of 258,200 (1932).

Hull is the third port in the United Kingdom and the chief port of North-Eastern England. Ten docks cover a water area of 210 acres and are equipped with every modern appliance for the rapid handling of cargoes. Hull has the reputation of being the cheapest port in the U.K. Net registered tonnage of ships using the docks in 1932, 6,133,444. Value of imports (grain, oilseed, provisions, wood, fruit, wool, &c.) £50,785,250 in 1932; exports (cotton, woollen goods, coal, machinery, cattle food, &c.) £20,468,196. Hull is the largest centre of the seed-crushing and oil-extracting industry in the world, the premier fishing port of the U.K. and an important centre of the flour-milling industry; other manufactures are acetates, canisters, cement, colours and chemicals, electric lamps, mill machinery, oil cakes and meals, paint, paper, polishes, power alcohol, radiators, rope, shipbuilding, soap, starch, surgical dressings, tanning, tar products, varnish, vegetable oils, wood milling, &c.

The chief buildings, in addition to the Docks, are the Parish Church (Holy Trinity), 272 feet in length (the longest parish church in England), the Guildhall (1915), Exchange (1866), Chamber of Commerce, Corn Exchange, Market Hall, City Hall, Custom House, Dock Offices, Royal Institution (1854), Wilberforce House, Trinity House (1753), and the Ferens Art Gallery. A Municipal Art Gallery has been established under the gift of the late Mr. T. R. Ferens. A municipal aerodrome was opened in 1929; connexion is made with Imperial Airways Service from London, and there are hourly air services across the Humber Estuary to Grimsby.

The name of Wike-upon-Hull was changed to Kingston upon Hull by Edward I. in the 13th century. The town was incorporated in 1240 and made a county borough in 1882. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 22 Aldermen and 63 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1933-1934), Arthur Shepherd.

Recorder, Charles Paley Scott, K.C. (1933).

Town Clerk, J. R. Howard Roberts (1929).

BRADFORD.

BRADFORD (Yorkshire, West Riding), 192 miles N.N.W. of London and 8 miles W. of Leeds, in the coal and iron district, is the centre of the woollen and worsted trade. The city is connected with the Mersey in the west and with the Humber in the east by canals, and is an important railway centre. The municipal area is 24,321 acres (about 38 square miles), with a population at the 1931 census of 298,041.

The principal textile industries are worsteds, woollens, silks and cottons, and there are also important engineering and iron works, and quarries of freestone.

The chief public buildings, in addition to the 15th century Cathedral (formerly the Parish Church), are the Town Hall (1872), Exchange (1867), Cartwright Memorial Hall (1904), commemorating the inventor of the power loom, the Windsor (Baths and Public Halls, 1903), Grammar School, Technical College (1882), and the Mechanics' Institute (1832).

The Saxon township was created a parliamentary borough in 1832, a county borough in 1882, and a city in 1907. The Corporation consists of a Lord Mayor, 22 Aldermen and 66 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1933-1934), A. W. Brown.

Recorder, Frank Beverley (1926).

Stipendiary Magistrate, Beaumont Morice (1914).

Town Clerk, N. L. Fleming (1920).

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE.

NEWCASTLE UPON TYNE (Northumberland), on the north bank of the Tyne estuary, 8 miles from the North Sea and 272 miles N. of London, has an area of 8,458 acres (13 square miles) and a population of 283,125 at the Census of 1931.

The city is conveniently placed on the estuary in the neighbourhood of the Northumberland and Durham coalfields. The exports of the Port of Newcastle upon Tyne (River Tyne) include coal, chemicals, oil fuel (as cargo and bunkers), pig iron, iron and steel manufactures and machinery; the chief imports being wheat and grain, fruits, iron, iron ore and steel, sulphur ore, petroleum, timber and wood and potatoes. The net tonnage of ships engaged in the Foreign Trade was 5,571,966 for arrivals and 6,984,277 for departures in 1932, the value of ocean-borne trade being £28,822,164 in 1931; the net tonnage of arrivals in the Coasting Trade was 3,264,758 and of departures 2,283,347 net tons in 1932. The chief industries are shipbuilding, metal works and machinery, chemicals, glass, brick, tile and earthenware, and rope making.

The principal buildings include the (17th century) "New" Castle, of which the walls, keep and chapel are well preserved, the Cathedral (St. Nicholas), St. Andrew's Church (17th century), St. John's (18th century), St. George Jesmond, the Roman Catholic Cathedral of Hexham and Newcastle, Holy Trinity War Memorial, Guildhall (1668), Moot Hall (1810), Exchange (1860), Central Public Library and Laing Art Gallery and Museum, Wood Memorial Hall (1870) and the Custom House. The beauty of Jesmond Dene (gift of 1st Lord Armstrong) is much appreciated by visitors as well as the Town Moor, a tract of over 900 acres of open grassland. The city is connected with the south bank of the Tyne by six bridges, viz.:—High Level (Stephenson) for road and rail, Swing Bridge (road), Redheugh (road), Scottowood suspension (road), King Edward VII. (rail), Tyne (road).

The pre-Norman borough of Monkchester was re-named Newcastle in the 11th century when the castle was erected as a defence against the Scots. In 1400 it was made a county borough, and in 1890 was incorporated. The City Corporation now includes a Lord Mayor (1906), 19 Aldermen and 57 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1923-1924), J. Leadbitter.
Recorder, R. Story Dennis, LL.B. (1923).
Town Clerk and Clerk of the Peace, Arthur Maule Oliver, O.B.E., M.A. (1907).

NOTTINGHAM.

NOTTINGHAM (Nottinghamshire), the principal manufacturing centre of hosiery and lace, stands on the left bank of the Trent, where the tributary stream Leen enters the river, 22½ miles N.N.W. of London. The municipal area is 16,166 acres (25¼ square miles), and includes the historic old market-place of 5¼ acres in the centre of the city, recently laid out as an ornamental square and garden. Population, Census of 1922, 268,801.

The city is connected with the North Sea and the Atlantic by the river Trent and canals and is an important railway centre. The principal industries are cotton, silk and merino hosiery, lace, bleaching, dyeing and spinning, tanning, engineering and cycle works, brewing, the manufacture of tobacco, chemicals, furniture, typewriters, and colour printing.

The chief buildings are the 12th century Nottingham Castle (restored in 1878, and now the City Museum and Gallery of Art), Wollaton Hall (1580-88) recently purchased by the Corporation and now a Natural History Museum, St. Mary's, St. Peter's, and St. Nicholas's Churches, the Roman Catholic Cathedral (Pugin, 1844-4), the Council House, opened by the Prince of Wales in 1920, the Guildhall and Court House (1827), Shire Hall, Albert Hall, Exchange, University College, The General and other Hospitals, Eye Infirmary, and New University College.

Snotengaham or Notingham, "the home of the sons of Snod" (the Wise), is the Anglo-Saxon name for the Celtic Tuigogobauc, "Cave Homes." The city possesses a Charter of Henry II., and was created a city in 1897. The Corporation comprises a Lord Mayor, 16 Aldermen and 48 Councillors.

Principal City Officers.

The Lord Mayor (1923-1924), J. Farr.
Recorder, Henry Holmes Joy, K.C. (1908).
Town Clerk (1923) and Clerk of the Peace (1922), William John Board, O.B.E.

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON.

STRATFORD-UPON-AVON (a municipal borough in Warwickshire, on the west bank of the River Avon), had a population (Census 1921) of 22,616. As the birthplace of Shakespeare the borough is visited annually by travellers from all parts of the globe. Principal buildings, &c.:—

Shakespeare's Birthplace (April 23, 1564), bought for £2,000 in 1847 and restored in 1857. Managed by 25 Trustees (as ex-officio, 4 representative). Holds library of rare editions, pictures, and relics. In the garden are many trees and plants named by the poet.

Clopton Bridge, built of stone, on 19 arches, about 1490 by Sir Hugh Clopton, Stratford native, and Lord Mayor of London.

Guild Chapel and Guildhall.—Founded A.D. 1269. In the old hall young Shakespeare could witness strolling companies performing (mentioned in Records). In chapel were discovered beneath whitewash, 1804 and 1909, mural allegorical paintings, done by mediæval artists.

Hall's Craft.—Unaltered old-timbered residence of Susanna, poet's daughter, wife of Dr. John Hall, churchwarden and poet's executor.

Harvard House.—Built 1596 by Alderman Thomas Rogers, whose descendant (John Harvard) founded Harvard University, U.S.A.

Anne Hathaway's Cottage.—At Shottery, one mile from Stratford, is the little thatched farmstead, the undisturbed birthplace of Anne Shakespeare, poet's wife, who bore him three children, Susanna, Hamnet, and Judith. Contains curious Tudor and Jacobean furniture. National property, controlled by Birthplace Trustees.

King Edward VI. School.—Here Shakespeare acquired his "small Latin and less Greek," and matchless English.

The Shakespeare Memorial.—Mainly due to munificence of C. E. Flower (1830-92) and his wife. Group comprises Library, with 20,000 volumes of Shakespeare editions and dramatic literature, including Irving and other collections. Gallery of pictures (including unique "Droeshout" portrait). Tower, affording extensive views of river and district. Gardens, and Statuary (Lord Ronald Gower's gift). Theatre, burnt down in 1906, has been rebuilt. Probable dates of Festival 1924, April 16, Sept. 15.

New Place.—Site of the poet's retirement. Shakespeare bought this estate in 1597; retired to it about 1610; died there April 23, 1616. House was rebuilt about 1705, and demolished by Rev. Francis Gastrell, 1799.

The Cage.—For 36 years the home of Judith, poet's younger daughter, who married Thomas Quiney, vintner.

Town Hall.—Erected 1633; rebuilt 1768. Contains details of the unbroken sequence of Bailiffs and Mayors since A.D. 1553 (including the poet's father, John Shakespeare). Exhibits: Gainsborough portrait of Garrick; four Corporation Maces, gift silver of 15-16th Century.

Trinity Church.—Dates from 13th Century. Shelters remains of poet and family.

Wilmote.—House of Shakespeare's mother, Mary Arden, purchased 1590; open to the public.

FREEDOMS AND ADDRESSES (CITY OF LONDON).

THE Honorary Freedom of the City of London is conferred as a mark of high distinction upon eminent subjects of the Crown for exceptional services to the Country and the Empire. The Freedom of the City of London is acquired after strict compliance with regulations from time to time issued pursuant to resolutions of the Court of Common Council. The names of applicants who have complied with the regulations are submitted for election to the Court of Common Council at its fortnightly meetings, those applying through the medium of a Livery Company being submitted in a similar manner to the Court of Aldermen. Orphans of Freemen are eligible for election as foundation scholars at the Freemen's School, Ashstead, Surrey, and Freemen of the City of London are themselves eligible for admission to Almshouses at Brixton, in accordance with regulations from time to time issued.

Addresses of Welcome are occasionally offered to Foreign Sovereigns and Presidents pursuant to resolutions of the Court of Common Council. These high distinctions are sometimes confused with the ceremony of admission to the Honorary Freedom of the City, but the Honorary Freedom is conferred only on persons in allegiance to H.M. the King.

THE PRINCIPALITY OF WALES.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY.

Position and Extent.—The Principality of Wales occupies the extreme west of the central southern portion of the island of Great Britain, with a total area of 7,467 sq. miles. It is bounded on the N. by the Irish Sea, on the S. by the Bristol Channel, on the E. by the English counties of Cheshire, Salop, Hereford and Monmouth, and on the W. by St. George's Channel. The greatest length from N. to S. (Point of Air to Barry Island) is 136 miles, and the greatest breadth from W. to E. (St. David's Head to the English border) is 95 miles. Separated from the mainland by the Menai Straits is the Welsh island-county of Anglesey or Môn (276 sq. miles), communication with which is facilitated by the Menai Suspension Bridge (3,000 ft. long), built by Telford in 1826, and by the tubular railway bridge (1,200 ft. long) of the L.M. & S. Railway, built by Stephenson in 1850. Holyhead harbour, on Holy Isle (N.W. of Anglesey), provides accommodation for a fast steam packet service to Kingstown and Dublin (70 miles).

Population.—The population at the Census of 1931 was 2,593,014 (inclusive of Monmouthshire).

Relief.—Wales is generally mountainous, the chief systems being those of North Wales (Snowdon 3,572 ft., Carnedd Llywelyn 3,484 ft., Carnedd Dafydd 3,426 ft.); Berwyn (Aran-fawdd 2,970 ft.); Powys (Plinlimmon 2,462 ft., Drygan Fawr 2,213 ft., Radnor 2,163 ft.); and the Black Mountain, Brecknock Beacon and Black Forest ranges (Carmarthen Van 2,632 ft., Brecon Beacon 2,962 ft., Pen-y-gawr fawr 2,660 ft.).

Hydrography.—The principal river of those rising in Wales is the Severn (see England), which flows from the slopes of Plinlimmon to the English border, dividing Montgomeryshire on its way. The Wye (130 miles) also rises in the slopes of Plinlimmon, and flows between Radnor and Brecon on its course to England. The Usk (56 miles) flows into the Bristol Channel, through Monmouthshire. The Dee (70 miles) rises in Bala lake and flows through the Vale of Llangollen, where an aqueduct (built by Telford in 1805) carries the Pontcysyllte branch of the Shropshire Union Canal across the valley. The estuary of the Dee is the navigable portion, 14 miles in length and about 5 miles in breadth, and the tide rushes in with dangerous speed over the "Sands of Dee." The Towy (68 miles), Teifi (50 miles), Taff (40 miles), Dovey (30 miles), Tŷ (25 miles), and Conwy (24 miles), the last named broad and navigable, are wholly Welsh rivers.

The largest natural lake in Wales is Bala (Llyn Tegid) in Merionethshire, 4 miles long and about 1 mile wide; Lake Vyrnwy is an artificial reservoir, about the size of Bala, and forms the water supply of Liverpool, while Birmingham is supplied from a chain of reservoirs in the Elan and Claerwen valleys.

EARLY HISTORY.

Celts and Romans.—The earliest inhabitants of whom there is any record appear to have been subdued or exterminated by the Goidels (a people of Celtic race) in the Bronze Age, and a further invasion of Celtic Brythons followed in the ensuing Iron Age. The Roman conquest of South Britain and Wales was at the time successfully opposed by Caradog (Caratacus), King of the Silures, a tribe inhabiting the present counties of Glamorgan, Brecon, Radnor and Monmouth. In A.D. 78 the conquest of Wales was completed under Julius Frontinus, and communications were opened up by the construction of military roads from Chester to Caerleon-on-Usk and Caerwent, and from Chester to Conway (and thence to Carmarthen and Neath). Christianity was introduced (during the Roman occupation) in the 4th century, and the faith thus established was preserved (after the withdrawal of the Roman garrison) by native effort, and was carried to the northernmost corners of the British Isles by missionaries to the Hebrides and to the Orkneys and Shetlands.

The Anglo-Saxon Attacks.—The Anglo-Saxon invaders of South Britain drove the Celtic Goidels and Brythons into the mountain fastnesses of Wales, and into Strathclyde (Cumberland and S.W. Scotland) and Cornwall, giving them the name of Waelisc, or Welsh (= Foreign). The West Saxons' victory of Deorham (577) isolated the Waelisc of Wales from those of Cornwall, while the battle of Chester (632) similarly cut off communication with the Waelisc of Strathclyde. In the 8th century the boundaries of the Welsh were further restricted by the annexations of Offa, King of Mercia, and counter-attacks were largely prevented by the construction of an artificial boundary from the Dee to the Wye (Offa's Dike). In the 9th century Rhodri Mawr united the country against further incursions of the Saxons by land and against the raids of Norse and Danish pirates by sea, but at his death his three provinces of Gwynedd (N.), Powys (Mid.) and Dehenbarth (S.) were divided among his three sons—Anarawd, Mervyn and Iadell—the son of the last-named being Howel Dda, who codified the laws of the country, while Llewelyn ap Seisyllt (husband of the heiress of Gwynedd) again united the provinces and reigned as Prince from 1055–1082.

The Norman Conquest.—After the Norman conquest of England William I. created Palatine counties along the Welsh frontier, and Robert FitzHamon, the Norman Earl of Gloucester, raided South Wales and erected fortresses from the Wye to Milford Haven. Henry I. introduced Flemish settlers into South Wales, but after his death the Welsh rose under the leadership of Griffith ap Rhys and routed the Norman-Flemish forces at the fords of the Telfi (Cardigan) in 1136. From the early years of the 13th century the house Gwynedd, in the north, gained an ascendancy over the whole of Wales, and Llewelyn ap Iorwerth was in constant strife with England for recognition as an independent sovereign; but Llewelyn, the son of Iorwerth, was killed in 1240 during hostilities between the Welsh and English, and his brother David was captured and executed by the English in 1283. On Feb. 7, 1301, Edward of Carnarvon, son of Edward I., was created Prince of Wales, a title thenceforward borne by the heir apparent to the throne of England.

The Welsh are a distinct nationality, with a language and literature of their own, and the national bardic festival (Eisteddfod), instituted by Prince Rhys ap Griffith in 1176, is annually maintained. These Eisteddfodau (sessions) form part of the Gorsedd (assembly), which is believed to date from the time of Prydian, a ruling prince in an age many centuries before the Christian era.

CARDIFF.

CARDIFF (Glamorgan), at the mouth of the River Taff (Caer Taff), Runmney and Ely, the port of the South Wales coal fields, has a municipal area of 13,628 acres, and a population (1931) of 223,589. The principal industries include ship-repairing, rope making, steel, copper, lead and zinc works, iron and steel foundries, patent fuel works, engine wagon works, flour mills, chemical factories, paper mills, breweries, jam, vinegar and ice factories, tin plate and paint works. The chief imports are grain, timber, pit-wood, ore, fruit, butter, cheese, frozen and chilled meat, live cattle, canned goods, sugar, potatoes. The exports include coal, coke, patent fuel, iron and steel manufactures, tin plates, &c.

The principal buildings are Cardiff Castle, built in the 12th century, the National Museum of Wales, Public Library, the University College of South Wales and Monmouthshire, the Registry of the University of Wales, Technical College, City Hall and Law Courts, and Glamorgan County Hall. The city returns 3 members to Parliament.

The Lord Mayor (1933-34), A. E. Gough.

Stipendiary Magistrate, W. Hugh Jones, K.C. Recorder, Roland E. L. Vaughan-Williams, K.C. Town Clerk & Clk. of Peace, David Kenyon Rees.

SWANSEA.

SWANSEA (Glamorgan), at the mouth of the River Tawe, is the chief centre of the copper, tinplate and spelter industry of the United Kingdom, and contains the largest tube works in the country. The trade of the port also includes coal (the largest anthracite port), patent fuel, ores, and the import and export of oil (National Oil Refineries). There is also a large ship-repairing industry. The trade is principally with France, Italy and Belgium. The municipal area is 24,193 acres, with a population at the census of 1931 of 164,825. Included in the borough is the health resort of Mumbles.

The principal buildings are the Norman castle (re-built in 1330), the Royal Institution of South Wales, founded in 1835 (containing Museum and Library), the University College at Singleton, and the 17th century Grammar School, founded by Hugh Gore. Swansea was chartered by King John, and incorporated as a borough by Henry III. The borough returns 2 members to Parliament.

Mayor (1933-34), E. Harris.

Recorder, E. W. Milner-Jones.

Town Clerk, H. L. Lang-Coath.

THE KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND.

Position and Extent.—The Kingdom of Scotland occupies the northern portion of the main island of Great Britain and includes the Inner and Outer Hebrides, and the Orkney, Shetland, and many other islands. The Kingdom lies between $60^{\circ} 51' 30''$ and $54^{\circ} 38' N.$ latitude and between $2^{\circ} 45' 32''$ and $6^{\circ} 14' W.$ longitude, its southern neighbour being the Kingdom of England, with the Atlantic Ocean on the N. and W., and the North Sea on the E. The greatest length* of the mainland (Cape Wrath to the Mull of Galloway) is 274 miles, and the greatest breadth (Buchan Ness to Applecross) is 154 miles. The total area of the Kingdom is 31,520 square miles (land and water). The population (at the census of 1931) was 4,842,554, a decrease of 39,943 since the census of 1921.

Relief.—There are three natural orographic divisions of Scotland. The Southern Uplands have their highest points in Merriek (2,764 feet), Rioms of Kells (2,668 feet), and Cairnsmuir of Carphairn (2,612 feet), in Kirkcudbright; Hartfell (2,651 feet) in Dumfries; and Whitecumb (2,605 feet), in Peebles. The Central Lowlands include the valleys of the Tay, Forth and Clyde, and the cities of Edinburgh, the capital of the Kingdom, and Glasgow, its principal seaport. The heather-clad Northern Highlands extend almost from the extreme north of the mainland to the central lowlands, and are divided into a northern and southern system by the Great Glen; they contain, in the central Grampian Hills, Ben Nevis (4,406 feet), the highest point in the British Isles, and Ben Mulch Dhuil (4,296 feet). The Cheviot Hills form a natural boundary between Scotland and England, their highest point being Cheviot Hill (3,676 feet).

Hydrography.—The principal river of Scotland is the Clyde (106 miles), one of the most important rivers in the world, with the greatest commercial estuary in Scotland. The Clyde is formed by the junction of Daer and Portrail water, and flows through the city and port of Glasgow to the Firth of Clyde. During its course it passes over the picturesque Falls of Clyde, the largest falls in the British Isles, Bannington Linn (30 feet), Corra Linn (84 feet), Dundaff Linn (10 feet), and Stonehyres Linn (80 feet), above and below Lanark. The Tweed (96 miles) has important woollen industries ("Tweeds") in its valley. The Tay, noted for its salmon, and the longest river in Scotland (127 miles), flows into the North Sea, with Dundee (the centre of the jute industry) on the estuary, which is spanned by the Tay Bridge (2 miles 73 yards), opened in 1887 to replace that destroyed by a gale (Dec. 28, 1877). The Dee (90 miles), a noted salmon river, flows through scenery of unequalled beauty to the North Sea at Aberdeen. The Spey (120 miles), the swiftest flowing river in the British Isles, and also noted for its salmon and its scenery, flows into the Moray Firth. The Forth (66 miles), navigable to Stirling, is spanned by the Forth Bridge, constructed 1882-9 at a cost of £3,000,000, with a length of 5,330 feet (with approaches 8,225 feet).

The Lochs are the principal hydrographic feature of the Kingdom, both on the mainland and in many of the Islands. The largest in the Kingdom and in Great Britain is Loch Lomond (24 miles long), with Lochs Awe, Tay, Rannoch and Erchie in the Grampian valleys; with Lochs Och and Lochy in the Great Glen; and Lochs Shin (20 miles) and Marce in the northern Highlands.

Orkney.—About 6 miles N. of the Caithness coast, separated from the mainland by the Pentland Firth, is the island county of Orkney, a group of 90 islands and islets ("holms" and "skerries"), of which one-third are inhabited. The total area of the group is 275½ square miles, with a population (1921) of 25,896. Kirkwall, in Pomona (or mainland), the largest island of the group, is the capital of the county. Many of the Orkney (and Shetland) Islands contain brochs (Pictish towers) and other Pictish and Scandinavian remains. Scapa Flow, between Pomona and Hoy, was the war station of the Grand Fleet from 1914-9 and the scene of the scuttling of the surrendered German High Seas Fleet (June 21, 1919).

Shetland.—About 90 miles N. of Orkney (with the detached Fair Isle at 25 miles N.) is the island county of Shetland, a group of about 100 islands and islets, of which 29 are inhabited. The total area of the group is 551 square miles, with a population (1921) of 27,921. Lerwick, in Mainland (the largest and principal island), is the capital of the county. Fair Isle, the southernmost of the group, is famous for hand-knitted hosiery, and Unst for the finest of the Shetland woolen work, for which the county is famous. Muckle Flugga, about 1 mile N. of Unst, is the most northerly of the group and of the British Isles ($60^{\circ} 51' 30'' N.$ lat.).

Western Islands.—Off the W. coast, at varying distances, and extending from Sutherland to Argyll, are over 500 islands and islets, of which 202 are inhabited. The total area of these Western Islands is 2,822 square miles, with a population of close on 80,000, but owing to the mountainous surface of the land only about 300 square miles are under cultivation. The Inner Hebrides include the island of Skye (643 square miles—capital, Portree, famous as the refuge of Prince Charlie after his defeat at Culloden, Invernesshire, in 1746), which contains the Cuillin (Sgurr-na-Banachdich, 3,243 feet), Red Hills (Ben Caillich, 2,403 feet), and many other picturesque mountains; Mull (367 square miles), containing Ben More (3,185 feet), Ben Bay (2,354 feet), and Ben Creuch (2,289 feet); Jura

* Land's End to John o' Groat.—The customary measurement of the island of Great Britain is from the site of John o' Groat's house, near Duncairn Head, Caithness (at the N.E. extremity of the island) to Land's End, Cornwall (at the S.W. extremity), a total distance of 603 miles in a straight line and (approximately) 600 by road. But the site of the house of John de Groot (with its 8 doors and octagonal table, to solve the question of precedence between John and his 7 brothers) is about 2 miles S.W. of Duncairn Head, while Dunnet Head (also in Caithness) extends farther N. than Duncairn. John de Groot is believed to have obtained permission to settle in Caithness (from the Netherlands) in the reign of James IV. (1408-1433).

* The Hebrides.—Until the closing years of the 13th century "The Hebrides" included other Scottish islands in the Firth of Clyde, the peninsula of Kintyre (Argyllshire), the Isle of Man, and the (Irish) Isle of Rathlin. The origin of the name is stated to be the Greek Hebudes, latinised as Hebrides by Ptolemy, and corrupted to its present form. The Norwegian name Sudreygar (Southern Islands) was latinised as Sodoranes, a name that survives in the Anglican bishopric of "Sodor and Man."

(260 square miles), with a chain of hills culminating in the Paps of Jura, Beinn-an-Oir (2,572 feet), and Beinn Chualais (2,407 feet); Islay (235 square miles), and many smaller islands. The Outer Hebrides, separated from the mainland by the Minch, include Lewis-with-Harris (770 square miles), celebrated for its homespun "Tweeds," North Uist, South Uist, Barra and other islands. Thirteen miles W. of Stornoway (the largest town of Lewis and of the Hebrides) are the "Druidical" remains of Callernish, a well-preserved series of monolithic circles, cruciform in general arrangement, but generally regarded as a heathen monument of the remote Stone Age.

Climate.—The climate of Scotland is influenced by the much indented coast line and (like that of South Britain) by the Gulf Stream Drift, which emerges from the Gulf of Mexico as a strong current about 30 miles in width, with a speed of about 4 miles per hour; the stream gradually loses its velocity and becomes shallower and cooler, until at about 35° N. lat. (off Cape Hatteras) it ceases to be a distinct stream and its surface waters are carried across the Atlantic by the prevailing westerly winds. The climate is more bracing and less treacherous than that of England, the average duration of sunshine on the east coast being greater than on the east coast of England, while the south-western section is no wetter or more relaxing than the corresponding section of England. The mean winter temperature is in the neighbourhood of 35°, and that of summer about 58° Fahrenheit.

The offices of the Scottish Travel Association are at 37, George Street, Edinburgh.

EARLY HISTORY.

Prehistoric Man.—North Britain appears to have been invaded in Palaeolithic times by a succession of races, who died out or were exterminated by other immigrants. The earliest race of which there is any record is that since known as the Picts, believed to be of non-Aryan origin, and stated to have been named Picti by the Romans on account of the tribal habit of painting the body. The Picts seem to have inhabited the whole of North Britain and to have spread over the north of Ireland. Picts' Houses are most frequent in the northern counties of Caithness and Sutherland and in the Orkney Islands, and it is generally believed that the Picts were driven northwards by later Celtic immigrants. Celtic Goidels and Brythons arrived from Belgic Gaul during the latter part of the Bronze Age, and in the early Iron Age, and except in the extreme north of the mainland and in the islands the civilization and speech of the people were definitely Celtic at the time of the Roman Invasion of Britain.

The Roman Invasion.—In A.D. 54 Julius Agricola extended the Roman conquests in Britain by advancing into Caledonia as far as the "Grampian" Hills, but after a victory at Mons Graupius (since corrupted to "Grampius") he was recalled, and no further advance was made for about 60 years, when the Roman frontier was carried to the isthmus between the Forth and Clyde and marked by the Wall of Pius, towards which ran military roads from the Cheviots. The Roman occupation of Southern Caledonia was not so effective as that of South Britain, and before the close of the second century the northern limit of Roman Britain had receded to Hadrian's Wall, from the Tyne to Solway Firth, where it was maintained until about A.D. 450.

The Scots.—During the later years of the Roman occupation the garrison was continually harassed by Pictish tribes north of the Wall, aided by Scots (the Gaelic tribe then dominant in Ireland), and when the garrison was withdrawn these Picts and Scots were the principal enemies of the Celtic Brythons, who are believed to have called in the Saxons to protect them from the invasions of their neighbours. A relic of the struggle between Pict and Brython is still to be seen in the Catraig, or Picts' Work Dyke, of Roxburgh (from Torwoodlee, near Galashiels, to Peel Fell in the Cheviots). Christianity was introduced into Southern Caledonia about 380 by missionaries from Romanized Britain, who penetrated to the northern districts and islands. After the withdrawal (or absorption) of the Roman garrison of Britain there were many years of tribal warfare between the Picts and Scots, the Brythonic Waelisc (Welsh) of Strathclyde (South-west Scotland and Cumberland), and the Anglo-Saxons of the Lothians. The Waelisc were isolated from their kinsmen in Wales by the victory of the West Saxons at Chester (633), and towards the close of the 9th century the Scots under Kenneth Maculpin became the dominant power in Caledonia. In the reign of Malcolm I. (843-854) the Brythons or Waelisc (Welsh) of Strathclyde were brought into subjection, the lowland kingdom of the English (Lothian) being conquered by Malcolm II. (1005-1034). From the close of the 11th century until the middle of the 16th there were constant wars between Scotland and England, the outstanding figures in the struggle being William Wallace, who defeated the English at Stirling Bridge (1297), and Robert Bruce, who won the victory of Bannockburn (1314). James IV. and many of his nobles fell at the disastrous battle of Flodden (1513), and in 1563 James VI., the Stuart King of Scotland and the heir to the Tudor line of England (his mother, Mary "Queen of Scots," was the great-granddaughter of Henry VII.), succeeded Queen Elizabeth on the throne, his successors reigning as Sovereigns of Great Britain. After the abdication (by flight) of James VII. and II., the crown devolved upon William III. (grandson of Charles I.), and Mary (daughter of James VII. and II.), and their issue failing, upon Anne (second daughter of James VII. and II.). Anne's children died young, and the throne devolved upon George I. (great-grandson of James VI. and I.). In 1689 Graham of Claverhouse "roused the Highlands" on behalf of James VII. and II., but died after a military success at Killisnock. In 1715, armed risings led to the indecisive battle of Sheriffmuir, but the movement died down until 1745, when the "Young Pretender" defeated the Royalist troops under Sir John Cope at Preston Pass and advanced to Derby in England (1746). From Derby, the adherents of "James VII. and III." (the title claimed for his father by the Young Pretender), fell back on the defensive, and the Jacobite movement was finally crushed by the Royalist troops under the Duke of Cumberland at Culloden (April 16, 1746).

The Hebrides did not become part of the Kingdom of Scotland until 1266, when they were ceded to Alexander III. by Magnus of Norway. Orkney and Shetland fell to the Scottish Crown as a pledge for the unpaid dowry of Margaret of Denmark, wife of James III., in 1469, the Danish suzerainty being formally relinquished in 1590.

EDINBURGH.

EDINBURGH, the Capital of the Kingdom, has a municipal area of 32,402 acres, and a population (Census of 1931) of 438,998 (over the enlarged area). The boundaries were extended in 1920 so as to include the Burgh of Leith and part of the suburban district of the County of Midlothian. The city is built on a group of hills and contains in Princes Street the most beautiful thoroughfare in the world. The principal buildings are St. Giles's Church (restored 1879-83), and St. Mary's (Scottish Episcopal) Cathedral (Sir Gilbert Scott), the Castle (which contains, in St. Margaret's Chapel, the oldest building in Scotland), Parliament House (the present seat of the judicature, containing the Advocates and Signet Libraries), the University, the General Register House (Robert Adam), Royal Scottish Academy, National Portrait Gallery, and Holyrood Palace (containing parts of the royal palace of James IV. and V.). The city is governed by a town council of 71 members, and sends 6 members to Parliament (including the member for Leith).

Rt. Hon. Lord Provost (1932-35), William J. Thomson, LL.D.

Town Clerk, Sir Andrew Grierson, LL.D., S.S.C., J.P.

City Chamberlain, John D. Imrie, M.A., B.COM.

GLASGOW.

GLASGOW, a Royal Burgh, City and County of a City, and the principal commercial centre in Scotland, has a municipal area of 30,046 acres, and a population (1931 Census) of 1,088,461 (increased to 1,130,675 by subsequent extension of area). The city occupies the north and south banks of the Clyde, one of the chief commercial estuaries of the world, and its trade was valued at £69,500,000 in 1930, the total net tonnage of the ships entering (1932-33) being 6,067,444 tons; of those cleared 5,993,781 tons. The principal industries are iron and steel works, shipbuilding, chemicals, leather, woollens, muslin-weaving, distilling, tobacco, cotton-mills and furniture. The chief buildings are the Early English Cathedral, built early in the 13th century, and incorporating part of an earlier structure, the University (Sir Gilbert Scott), the City Chambers, the Royal Infirmary and the Western and Victoria Infirmaries, the Art Galleries and the Mitchell Library. The City is governed by a town council of 116 members, and sends 15 members to Parliament.

Rt. Hon. Lord Provost (1932-35), Alexander Brown Swan.

Town Clerk, David Stenhouse, J.P.

City Chamberlain, A. C. McMillan, C.A., J.P.

* The Cities of Edinburgh, Glasgow, Dundee, and Aberdeen are each a County of a City, and the Lord Provost of each is entitled, by virtue of his office, to be appointed Lord Lieutenant.

DUNDEE.

DUNDEE, a City, Parliamentary, Municipal and Royal Burgh, on the left bank of the River Tay, 4½ miles N. of Edinburgh, has a municipal area of 7,327 acres, and a population (Census 1931) of 175,583 (an increase of 7,268 since 1921). The principal buildings are University College (St. Andrews University), the Technical Institute, High School, Albert Institute and the Caird Hall Buildings. One of the finest Public Baths is in Dundee. The harbour affords dock accommodation of nearly 38 acres. The principal industries are jute manufacture in all its branches, and various forms of linen weaving, the making of preserves, shipbuilding, engineering, dyeing, and brewing. The City is governed by a town council of 34 members and sends a member to Parliament.

The Lord Provost (1932-25), William Huntley Bulst.

Town Clerk, W. H. Blyth Martin.

ABERDEEN.

ABERDEEN, a City and a Royal, Municipal and Parliamentary Burgh, 130 miles N.E. of Edinburgh, received its charter as a Royal Burgh from William the Lion in 1179. The municipal area is 6,748 acres, with a population (Census 1931) of 167,258 (an increase of 8,289 since 1921). The tonnage of the ships entered in 1931 was 931,966 tons (and fishing vessels 2,349,845 tons). The chief industries are granite quarrying and working, white fish, salmon and herring fisheries, engineering, chemicals, brewing, distilling, shipbuilding, paper-making, and woollen, jute and linen manufacture. The principal buildings are the East and West Churches of St. Nicholas, Municipal Offices, Marischal College, King's College, Roman Catholic pro-Cathedral, Public Library, H.M. Theatre, Art Gallery and Museum, and the Cathedral of St. Machar (14th century). The City is governed by a Town Council of 37 Members, and sends a Member to Parliament.

The Lord Provost (1932-35), Henry Alexander. Town Clerk, George S. Fraser, M.A., B.L.

* Town with privileges of a Royal Burgh.

Position and Extent.—Ireland lies in the Atlantic Ocean, to the West of Great Britain, and is separated from Scotland by the North Channel and from Wales by the Irish Sea and St. George's Channel. The land area of the island is 32,531 sq. miles and its geographical position between 51° 46' and 55° 21' N. latitude and from 5° 25' to 10° 30' W. longitude. The greatest length of the island, from N.E. to S.W. (Torr Head to Mizen Head), is 302 miles, and the greatest breadth, from E. to W. (Dun drum Bay to Armagh Head), is 174 miles. On the N. coast of Achill Island (Co. Mayo) are the highest cliffs in the British Islands, 2,000 feet sheer above the sea. Ireland is occupied for the greater part of its area by the Central Plain, with an elevation of 50 to 350 ft. above mean sea level, with isolated mountain ranges near the coast line. The principal mountains, with their highest points, are the Sperrin Mountains (Sawel 2,240 ft.) of County Tyrone in the North; the Mountains of Mourne (Slieve Donard 2,756 ft.) of County Down, and the Wicklow Mountains (Lugnaquilla 3,039 ft.) in the North-East; the Derryneagh Mountains (Errigal 2,466 ft.) of County Donegal in the North-West; the Connemara Mountains (Twelve Pins 2,695 ft.) of County Galway in the West; Macgillivuddy's Reeks (Carrantuohill 3,414 ft., the highest point in Ireland) in the South-West; and the Malinbeg Mountains (2,470 ft.) of County Waterford, in the South. The principal river of Ireland (and the longest in the British Isles) is the Shannon (240 miles), rising in County Cavan and draining the central plain. The Shannon flows through a chain of loughs to the city of Limerick, and thence to an estuary on the western Atlantic seaboard. The Slaney flows into Wexford Harbour, the Liffey to Dublin Bay, the Boyne to Drogheda, the Lee to Cork Harbour, the Blackwater to Youghal Bay, and the Suir, Nore, and Barron to Waterford Harbour. As in Scotland, the principal hydrographic feature is the Loughs, of which Lough Neagh (250 sq. miles) in the north-east is the largest in Ireland and the British Isles, others being the Shannon Chain of Allen, Boderly, Forbes, Reer and Derg, and the Erne (Chain of Gowna, Oughter, Lower Erne, and Erne, in the central plain; Melusa, Gill, Gara and Conn in the north; and Corrib and Mask (joined by a hidden channel) in the south. In County Kerry, to the east of Macgillivuddy's Reeks, are the famous Lakes of Killarney. The climate of Ireland is more equable than that of Great Britain, and the rainfall is more evenly distributed. The variation in mean temperature is only about 3° Fahrenheit, the summer extremes being 59° in the N. and 62° in the S.

Primitive Man.—Although little is known concerning the earliest inhabitants of Ireland, there are many traces of neolithic man throughout the island, while the use of bronze implements appears to have become known about the middle of the 17th century B.C. In the later Bronze Age a Celtic race of Goidels appear to have invaded the island, and in the early Iron Age Brythons from South Britain are believed to have effected settlements in the south-east, while Picts from North Britain established similar settlements in the north. Towards the close of the Roman occupation of Britain, the dominant tribe in the island was that of the Scoti, who afterwards established themselves in Scotland.

Legendary History.—According to Irish legends, the island was settled by a Milesian race, who came from Scythia by way of Spain, and established the Kingdom of Tara, about 500 B.C. The supremacy of the Ardrí (high king) of Tara was acknowledged by eight lesser kingdoms (Munster, Connaught, Ailech, Oriel, Ulidia, Meath, Leinster and Ossory) ruled by descendants of the eight sons of Miled. The basalt columns on the coast of Antrim, eight miles from Portrush, known as the Giant's Causeway, are connected with the legendary history of Ireland as the remnants of a bridge built in the time of Finn McCool (Fingal) to connect Antrim with Scotland (Staffa).

Christianity.—Christianity did not become general until the advent of St. Patrick. St. Patrick was born in Britain about 350, and was taken to Ireland as a slave about sixteen years later, escaping to Gaul at the age of 22. In 432 he was consecrated Bishop at Auxerre and landed in Wicklow to establish and organise the Christian religion throughout the island.

Later History.—The Roman conquest of Britain was not extended to Ireland, and little is known of the history of the country until the invasions of Northmen (Norwegians and Danes) towards the close of the 8th century A.D. The Norwegians were distinguished as Fingall (White Strangers) and the Danes as Dubgall (Black Strangers), names which survive in "Fingall,"

"MacDougall" and "MacDowall," while the name of the island itself is held to be derived from the Scandinavian Ira-land (land of the Irish), the names of the Provinces being survivals of Norse dialect forms (Ulaid-tír, Laigintír, Munus-tír and Kinnak-tír). The outstanding events in the encounters with the Northmen are the Battle of Tara (980), at which the Hy Neill king Maelsechlainn II. defeated the Scandinavians of Dublin and the Hebrides under their king Amalaib Cuarán; and the Battle of Clontarf (1014) by which the Scandinavian power was completely broken. After Clontarf the supreme power was disputed by the O'Brians of Munster, the O'Neills of Ulster, and the O'Connors of Connaught, with varying fortunes. In 1172 Dermot MacMurrough (Dermot Mac-Murchada), the deposed king of Leinster, sought assistance in his struggle with Ruaidrí O'Connor (the high king of Ireland), and visited Henry II., the Norman king of England. Henry authorized him to obtain armed support in England for the recovery of his kingdom, and Dermot enlisted the services of Richard de Clare, the Norman Earl of Pembroke, afterwards known as Strongbow, who landed at Waterford (Aug. 23, 1170) with 200 knights and 1,000 other troops for the reconquest of Leinster, where he eventually settled, after marriage with Dermot's daughter. In 1172 (Oct. 18) Henry II. himself landed in Ireland, with a force larger than Strongbow's, and obtained homage from the Irish kings, but Anglo-Norman rule underwent many fluctuations in the succeeding centuries, being confined in the early 15th century within the English "Pale" of 600 square miles. In the reign of Henry VII. English rule was greatly extended, and the administration of Irish affairs was anglicised by Robert Poyning, Lord Deputy of Ireland, who summoned the Parliament of Drogheda (Dec. 1494), at which were enacted the Statutes of Drogheda, afterwards known as Poyning's Law, making the legislature of Ireland subordinate to and dependent on that of England. A later parliament conferred on Henry VIII. the title of King of Ireland.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT.

UNDER the Government of Ireland Act, 1920, as amended by the Irish Free State (Consequential Provisions) Act, 1922, a separate Parliament and Executive Government were established for Northern Ireland, which comprises the six parliamentary counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, Fermanagh, Londonderry and Tyrone, and the Boroughs of Belfast and Londonderry. Under the Constitution of Northern Ireland certain legislative and fiscal powers are reserved to the Parliament of the United Kingdom.

The Northern Irish Parliament consists of a House of Commons of 52 elected members (who receive an allowance of £200 per annum) and a Senate of 2 ex-officio Senators and 24 Senators elected by the members of the House of Commons on the proportional representation system. Northern Ireland continues under the Act of 1920 to return 12 members to the House of Commons at Westminster.

The Executive power is vested in the Governor on behalf of His Majesty the King; he holds office for 6 years, and is advised by 7 Ministers responsible to Parliament. [The Cabinet Salaries and the allowances of the Members of Parliament have been voluntarily abated by 15 per cent.]

Saorstát Éireann—The Irish Free State.

THE GOVERNOR GENERAL.

Donnchall un Buschalla (Donald Buckley) £10,000

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT.

The Constitution.—The Constitution of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) was enacted by Dail Éireann, sitting as a Constituent Assembly, on October 25, 1922, and came into operation on December 6, 1922, by Royal Proclamation of that date. Article 50 of the Constitution provided that amendments thereto might be made by ordinary legislation within a period of eight years from the date of the coming into operation of that instrument, but that any amendment after the expiration of such period could be effected only by a Referendum of the people as therein provided. The period of eight years was extended to 16 years by a Constitutional Amendment, and the period wherein amendments to the Constitution may be effected by ordinary legislation accordingly expires on December 5, 1938.

The Constitution declares the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) to be a co-equal member of the Community of Nations forming the British Commonwealth of Nations and that "all powers of Government and all authority, legislative, executive and judicial in Ireland are derived from the people of Ireland." Irish domicile for seven years or Irish parentage on either side, confers Irish nationality, and men and women have equal rights as citizens. Irish is the national language, but English is recognised equally as an official language. No titles or honours may be conferred on any citizen except with the approval or upon the advice of the Executive Council. Liberty of the person and the dwelling of the citizen are inviolable. Freedom of conscience and profession and practice of religion are guaranteed, and no law establishing or prohibiting any religion may be passed. Free speech and the right of lawful assembly are guaranteed. Elementary education is free and the natural resources of the State are inalienable.

The Legislature.—The Legislature, known as the Oireachtas, consists of the King and two Houses, the Chamber of Deputies (Dail Éireann) and the Senate (Seanad Éireann). The members of Dail Éireann are elected by secret ballot, by direct vote of all citizens above the age of 21 years who comply with the existing electoral laws. The Dail consists of not less than one member for each 30,000 of the population and not more than one member for each 20,000 of the population, together with three members from each of the two Universities. The number of deputies is at present 123. Every citizen of 21 years and over, not otherwise disqualified, is eligible for election to Dail Éireann. A number of amendments were made in 1928 in the Articles of the Constitution relating to election to and membership of the Senate. The Senate consists of 60 members, one-third retire every three years and their places are filled by an election at which the electors are the members of the Dail and the Senate voting together on principles of proportional representation. Senators are chosen from a Panel nominated by the Dail and Senate. To be eligible a citizen must be at least 30 years of age, and should have done honour to the Nation by reason of useful public service, or have special qualifications or attainments representing important aspects of the Nation's life. The Oireachtas shall hold at least one Session each year. The Initiative and, save in regard to amendments to the Constitution, the Referendum which were originally embodied in the Constitution, have been abolished by Constitutional amendments. The Oireachtas has the exclusive right to regulate the raising and maintaining of such armed forces as are mentioned in the scheduled Treaty in the territory of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann) and every such force shall be subject to the control of the Oireachtas. Save in the case of actual invasion, the Irish Free State shall not be committed to active participation in any war without the assent of the Oireachtas.

The Executive.—The Executive Authority is vested in the King and is exercisable in accord with the law, practice and constitutional usage in the Dominion of Canada, by the representative of the Crown who is styled the Governor-General of the Irish Free State (Saorstát Éireann). The Executive Council consists of not more than 12 and not less than five Ministers. They are responsible to the Dail and must include the President and Vice-President of the Council and the Minister for Finance, who must be members of the Dail. All other members of the Executive Council must also be members of the Dail save one, who may be a member of the Senate. The President shall be appointed on the nomination of Dail Éireann; he nominates a Vice-President and the other members of the Executive Council, who must be approved by the Dail. Every Minister may speak in the Dail and Senate.

The Judiciary.—The Judiciary consists of Courts of First Instance, and a Court of Final Appeal called the Supreme Court (Cúirt Uachtarach). The Courts of First Instance include a High Court (Ard Chúirt), invested with full original jurisdiction in and power to determine all matters and questions whether of law or fact, civil or criminal, and also Courts of local and limited jurisdiction with a right of appeal as determined by law. The decision of the Supreme Court is in all cases final and conclusive, and cannot be reviewed by any other Court, Tribunal or Authority whatsoever. Provided that nothing in the Constitution shall impair the right of any person to petition His Majesty for special leave to appeal from the Supreme Court to His Majesty in Council or the right of His Majesty to grant such leave.

Receipts are on a net basis; the Expenditure figures also include a number of items of a capital and productive character, together with certain abnormal and non-recurrent charges.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—In 1932 there were 760,306 acres under corn crops, 656,474 under root and green crops, 458 under flax, 6,751 under fruit, and 2,281,747 under hay, a total of 3,705,736 acres. The principal produce in 1932 was: Oats, 627,200 tons, potatoes, 3,015,418 tons; turnips, 3,383,962 tons; mangolds, 1,637,590 tons; flax, 85 tons; and hay, 4,792,127 tons. The Live Stock included 4,025,080 cattle, 3,460,856 sheep, 1,108,315 pigs, 149,048 goats, 446,064 horses, 12,271 mules, and 274,826 asses.

Minerals.—517 persons were employed in the coal mines in 1929, 85,187 tons of coal won.

Sea Fisheries.—12,000 persons were employed in the fisheries in 1931, the total value of all fish landed being £223,074.

TRADE

The total trade of the Irish Free State for 1932, exclusive of Ballion and Specie, was valued at £69,514,450, being £42,574,222 for Imports and £26,940,228 for Exports; the Imports from Great Britain were valued at £28,856,206, and the Exports to Great Britain at £22,846,814; the Imports from Northern Ireland at £3,759,270, and the Exports to Northern Ireland at £3,104,479.

THE LEGISLATURE—OIREACHTAS ÉIREANN.

The Legislature (Oireachtas) consists of a Senate (Seanad Éireann) of 60 members; and of a Chamber of Deputies (Dáil Éireann) on a population basis (253 at present) elected on the principles of Proportional Representation. The Oireachtas, unless sooner dissolved, continues for "six years or such shorter period as may be fixed by legislation." The period fixed by legislation is at present five years.

The Indian Empire.

THE INDIAN EMPIRE extends over a territory larger than the Continent of Europe without Russia. Legally, "British India" means all territories governed by the King-Emperor through the Governor-General of India, or through any governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India; while "India" means British India, together with any territories of any prince or chief under the suzerainty of His Majesty, exercised through the Governor-General of India or through any governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India (Act 52-3 Vict., c. 63, s. 18). There are tracts of tribal territory on the N.W. and N.E. frontiers under the political influence, though not yet under the administrative rule, of the Indian Government.

Boundaries.—The political boundary of India marches with Persia and Afghanistan from the Gulf of Oman to Pavalto Schveikovski on the Taghdumbash Pamir. From this point the frontier—in many parts not yet clearly defined—touches the Chinese Empire and Nepal, till the limits of French Indo-China are reached on the Upper Mekong. The Indian frontier, on leaving the Mekong, marches with Siam till it reaches the sea at Victoria Point, half-way down the Malay peninsula. Beyond the sea the Indian Empire includes the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, the Laccadive and Minicoy Islands, Aden and Perim, besides protectorates over Socotra, Bahrain, and various chiefships along the coast from Aden to the Persian Gulf. Continental India, including Baluchistan, reaches from 8° to 37° N. latitude, and from 61° to 101° E. longitude. Delhi, the new capital, lies in 77° E. long.

Area and Population.—The total area of India proper is about 1,800,000 square miles, with a population of nearly 353 millions (about three-fourths of the population of the British Empire). The British Provinces, as distinguished from the Indian States, comprise 61 per cent. of the area, and nearly 77 per cent. of the population. The details of the 1931 Census are as follows:—

Physical Features.—Excluding Burma, which forms no part of the Indian peninsula, we may broadly divide the country into three sections, viz., the Himalayan region, the northern river-plains, and the southern table-land.

The Himalayas.—The Himalayas (which lie partly beyond the frontier), with their southern offshoots, form the natural northern boundary of India. The Himalayan range runs for 1,500 miles from N.W. to S.E., with a varying breadth of 150 to 200 miles, and attains a general height of 20,000 feet above the plain, culminating in the loftiest peaks yet measured on the globe—Mount Everest, 29,141 feet, Kunchinjunga, 23,146 feet, and Dhaulagiri, 26,826 feet, near the centre of the range; and Mount Godwin Austen, 28,250 feet, near its junction with the Hindu Kush. The line of perpetual snow is at about 16,000 feet. The Himalayas collect and store up water for the plains below. The slopes afford a representation of the tropical zone (especially on the southern slopes to the E.), the temperate zone (particularly to the S.W. of the range), and the arctic zone as the upward journey is taken from the plains. In the Himalayas are several sanatoria, including Murree, Simla, Mussoorie, Naini Tal, and Darjiling. Himalayan vegetation includes such varied species as the tree-fern, ilex, pine, oak, fir, deodar (cedar), rhododendron, barley, oats, millet, and many domestic vegetables. The fauna are as varied as the flora, and include the bison, musk-deer, yak, wild sheep and goat, bear, elephant, monkey, and tiger, with eagles, partridges, and pheasants. Between the Himalayas and the plains to the S.E. is the great fever-haunted Tarai or Duar jungle, densely forest-covered and full of big game.

The Great Plain.—The northern river-plains, lying at the foot of the Himalayas, comprise the rich alluvial plains watered by the Indus, the Ganges, the Lower Brahmaputra, and their tributaries. At no great distance from one another, four rivers take their rise in the Himalayas. The sources of two are on the north side—the Indus, which flows westward for 1,800 miles, and the Tsan-po or Brahmaputra, which flows eastward for nearly 1,500 miles. The other two, on the southern slope, are the Sutlej, which, after flowing W. and S.W. for 900 miles and collecting various other streams, joins the Indus, and the Ganges, which, during a journey S.E. and E. of about 1,550 miles, drains almost all the Bengal plain. The Brahmaputra, after flowing along the northern side as far as the eastern extremity of the Himalayas, turns sharply to the S., then to the W., and finally joins the Ganges, 75 miles from where their combined streams enter the Bay of Bengal. Thus the Himalayas supply India with the water gathered on both slopes. The Indus and Ganges, with their tributaries, are the source of an extensive system of irrigation by canals. The richest, most populous, and most historically famous part of India lies in the basins of these great rivers. Formerly the Ganges was the only great highway of Bengal; it is still the fertiliser and the water-carrier. But a close network of railways is increasingly used for transport. The richness of the Indo-Gangetic plain, with its ample rainfall, enables it to support a dense population, almost wholly agricultural. The density of the population rises in some districts to 900 per square mile. On the other hand, in Baluchistan there are only 6 persons to the square mile. The population has increased most in the densest areas, and pressure on the soil is severe in parts of Bihar and the United Provinces. In Northern India there are two harvests, rabi (spring) crops being reaped in March and April, kharif (autumn) crops in October to December. In the north we find wheat, pulse, maize, millet, barley, and tea; while in the south, indigo, cotton, sugar-cane, jute, oilseeds, tobacco, opium, and spices are produced. Among the fauna are monkeys, panthers, tigers, leopards, hyenas, jackals, squirrels, elephants, deer, crocodiles, and snakes. Salt, mica, and coal are the chief minerals. The Ganges delta yields rice, bamboo, and a large variety of palms. The Aravalli range, the primeval chain of India, divides Rajputana from the Central India States. To the N.W. of the peninsula lies the mountainous, barren, and thinly populated region of Baluchistan.

The Deccan.—Just as the Himalayas on the N. and the Hindu Kush and Suleiman Mountains on the N.W. form natural barriers of defence for Hindustan, so do the Vindhya Mountains, running almost due E. from the head of the Gulf of Cambay, north of the Nerbudda River, form a firm southern boundary to the river-plains of Northern India. Southern India, or the Deccan, is a plateau of triangular shape and very old geological formation, bounded on two sides by the Malabar and Coromandel coasts, which converge at Cape Comorin, and on the third by the Vindhvas. The Eastern and Western Ghats all but complete this environing triangle of mountain ranges. In the extreme N.W., south of the Vindhvas, and parallel to them, but north of the Western Ghats, we find the Nerbudda and the Tapti flowing westwards, their basins being sharply defined by the Satpura Mountains, which lie midway between them. As the Western Ghats lie close to the coast, and afford no exit for rivers, there are no streams on the Malabar coast south of the Tapti; all the rivers flow eastwards, through defiles in the Eastern Ghats, into the Bay of Bengal. The four chief rivers are the Mahanuddy, in the extreme N.E. (520 m.), the Godavery (900 m.), the Kistna (800 m.), and the Cauvery (472 m.), at intervals further to the south. The physical geography of Southern India has shaped its history: the S.W. coast, shut in by mountains, is very primitive and moves slowly; the S.E., open and easy of access by sea and towards the interior, has made great progress. The mountain slopes of this region, especially those of the Western Ghats, which rise to 8,000 feet in the Nilgiris, are still covered with the splendid vegetation of primeval forests. Teak, ebony, satinwood, sandalwood, palm, and bamboo abound. The jungles in the E. are very deadly. The tiger, bison, leopard, deer, and various smaller game afford sport. Snakes are found everywhere. In the valleys and on the higher plains many valuable crops are raised, chiefly rice, millet, cotton, oilseeds, coffee, tea, indigo, tobacco, and chinchona. The black cotton soil is very fertile. There is irrigation by dams, wells, tanks, and canals. The southern tableland has furnished considerable supplies of minerals. At present the minerals principally worked are coal, manganese ore, mica, monazite, and gold.

Burma.—Beyond the Bay of Bengal is the large province of Burma, watered by the Irrawaddy and its tributaries and by the Salween. The delta region is flat; further inland are hills and rolling downs, while the north is mountainous. Rice is the chief staple. Millet, cotton, sesamum, and tobacco are also grown. The forests, particularly of teak, make a considerable contribution to the exports. Petroleum is produced on a considerable scale, and jade, wolfram, and rubies are mined. The fauna include monkeys, jackals, tigers, elephants, bison, and deer.

Climate.—About half of India is within the tropics, but the greatest extremes of heat and cold are in the N.W. In the Himalayas the climate is moist and cold. In Northern India it is dry, and the winters are rather cold. In tropical Southern India the climate is more equable. Calcutta, Bombay, and Madras all have an equable climate, owing to proximity to the sea. India depends for its fertility upon the monsoon rains. The S.W. monsoon brings moisture from the ocean south of the Equator, and reaches the west coast early in June and the northern provinces late in June. The mountains arrest these currents and precipitate rainfall, which averages 60 inches in the sub-Himalayan region, 39 inches in the Indo-Gangetic plain, and 30 inches in the Deccan, but is small in Sind and Rajputana. Madras benefits by the N.E. monsoon in the autumn.

Population.—The sixth general census of India was taken on the 26th February, 1931. The returns gave a population of 352,837,778, as compared with 318,942,480 in 1921 (for details see p. 705), an increase in the ten years of 10·6 per cent. The census total of 1931 is divisible into 271,526,933, (or nearly 77 per cent.) for British India, and 81,310,845 (or over 23 per cent.) for Indian States. India is not over-populated, for two-thirds of the people live on one-quarter of the area. In Burma, Assam, and elsewhere a much larger population might subsist. There were in 1931 37 towns with a population of over 100,000. Urban areas of over 5,000 people comprise only about 11 per cent. of the total population.

Caste, Tribe, Race or Nationality.—Owing to the operation of the caste system India is broken up into a large number of mutually exclusive aggregates, the members of which are forbidden by an inexorable social law to marry outside the group to which they themselves belong. A caste may be defined as a collection of families, or groups of families, bearing a common name, which usually denotes or is associated with a specific occupation. The boundary of a caste may be said to be fixed by the rule restricting intermarriage, but its social status depends on the occupation of its members and their habits in respect of diet. The chief castes and races are (Census 1931)—Brahman (15,207,277), Chamar (12,195,156), Ahar, &c. (14,170,032), Rajput (10,743,091), Burmese (8,596,031), Jat (8,377,819), Maratha (6,113,061).

Religion (Census 1931).—The population by religions in 1931 includes 239,195,149 Hindus (68 per cent. of the total), 77,677,545 Muhammadans (22 per cent.), 12,786,806 Buddhists (3·6 per cent.), nearly all in Burma, leaving nearly 6 per cent. for all other religions, including 6,296,763 Christians (3,773,087 of whom are in Madras, Travancore, and Cochin), 4,335,771 Sikhs, 1,252,105 Jains, 109,752 Parsis, Jews 24,141, and 8,280,347 described as Tribal, who believe in magic and strive to propitiate impersonal forces. Minor Religions, and Religions not returned, 571,187. The Muhammadans, who are increasing faster than the Hindus, are influenced by the caste system and other Hindu characteristics. No particulars of religion are available of 2,308,221 persons (Bombay 75,735, Burma 19,649, and North-West Frontier Province, 2,212,837). The number of Indian Christians has increased 238 per cent. since 1881.

Occupations.—Over 66 per cent. of the population was in 1931 dependent on agricultural and pastoral pursuits. Industry occupies 10 per cent. of India's workers. The most important industrial occupations are those connected with textiles, mainly hand-weaving.

Sex.—Marriage is almost universal owing to religious obligations. The movement against infant marriage and enforced widowhood is gaining ground. There were in 1931 over 26,248,000 widows in India. The males outnumbered the females in 1921 in the proportion of 1,000 to 945, and 1,000 to 940 in 1931.

Languages.—India has 225 languages, exclusive of dialects, spoken in the Indian Empire, about 150 of which are confined to Assam and Burma. The languages spoken by 349,883,022 persons in 1931 (excluding 2,308,221 persons for whom details by language are not available) are grouped in eight families. The principal languages are Western Hindi (spoken by 71,547,000 persons), Bengali (53,469,000), Bihari (27,927,000), Telugu (26,374,000), Marathi (20,890,000), Tamil (20,412,000), Punjabi (16,839,000), Rajasthani (13,808,000), after which come Kanarese, Gujarati, Oriya, Burmese, and Malayalam. Hindustani, a dialect of Hindi, containing a large number of Persian and Arabic words, is the lingua franca of India. Hindustani and Hindi have become the chief literary languages of Hindustan. English is understood by many.

A Brief Sketch of Indian History.

ALEXANDER'S invasion of India (326 B.C.) is the first landmark of Indian history. A dim outline of earlier events can be traced from the evidences of race and language, from the traditions contained in ancient Indian literature, from accounts by later Greek and Chinese writers, and from coins and inscriptions. The oldest Indian books are supposed to date from about 1500 B.C. ;

they are written in Sanskrit, a language akin to Persian and to the principal European languages. The writers of these books were Aryans, a race which, as their traditions indicate, came into India from north of the Hindu Kush. They found in India, and conquered, a population of yellow-skinned type in the Himalayan districts, and a short, dark-skinned race, of low civilisation, in the rest of India. Of both these types there are still survivals. The religion and metaphysics of the Aryans are to be found in the Pedas and Upanishads; their epics, the Mahabharata and Ramayana, extol their mythical heroes; while in the Code of Manu we find a picture of Indian society, rather as the priestly caste of the day wished it to exist, than as it actually existed. The ascendancy of the Brahman priesthood over the soldier class of Kshatriyas is represented as fully established. The system of caste, originating in the attitude of the Aryas (kshatriyas) to the dark and servile aborigines, generally prevails, and the people are organised in village communities. In the sixth century B.C. a new religion arose, called Buddhism. Its founder was Gautama, a prince of the Kshatriya caste, who took the name of Buddha, the "awakened," and died about 487 B.C. His supposed remains were discovered near Peshawar in 1909. His tenets are contained in the Tripitaka, the Buddhist gospel. Buddhism was, in India itself, mainly a social reform, a revolt against the pride of caste and the exclusiveness of the Brahman priesthood. It prevailed widely from 250 B.C. to 350 A.D., but was never quite general, and existed side by side with Brahmanism, which it never succeeded in ousting. At length it lost ground, less through persecution than through a change in popular feeling; and before the twelfth century it had become practically extinct in India itself, though it still flourishes not only in Siam, China, and Japan, but also in Nepal, Burma, and Ceylon. Its decline in India was accompanied by a revival of Brahmanism, much modified.

According to Herodotus the twentieth satrapy of Persia at one time included part of the north-west of India. Alexander (356 B.C.) did not penetrate beyond the tributaries of the Indus, though he sailed down the river. At his death his Indian possessions fell to Seleucus, whose ambassador, Megasthenes (366 B.C.), has left an account of the country under the rule of Chandragupta, the Greek Sandracottus. Megasthenes describes the democratic village communities of the Punjab, speaks of the people as brave and faithful and adverse to litigation, and notes the absence of slavery. Asoka (272-231 B.C.), the grandson of Chandragupta, whose edicts on stone pillars throw light upon this period, was a convert to Buddhism, which became the State religion. Our last contributors to a knowledge of India before the period of continuous authentic history are the Buddhist pilgrims from China who visited the country between 399 and 605 A.D.

The influence of the Greek conquest was swept away by the Scythians, who poured in many waves, between about 165 B.C. and 320 A.D., over Northern India. Their raids left a lasting influence on the character of the population, and profoundly modified the religious beliefs and domestic institutions of the Hindus. The sixth century was a period of confusion. The emperor Harsha (606-648), after many years of fighting, made himself master of Northern India, and ended his reign in piety and peace. From about 650 to 950 anarchy prevailed.

The Arab conquest of Persia, towards the middle of the seventh century, brought the successors of Muhammad to the Indus, and in N.W. India they made some temporary acquisitions; but three centuries were to pass before the foundations of a durable Muhammadan empire were laid. It was in 999 that Mahmud of Ghazni (in Afghanistan) began a long series of incursions into India, no fewer than fifteen expeditions taking place between 999 and 1027, one of which carried him beyond the Jumna, while another ended in the capture of Somnath, in Kathiawar. The succeeding dynasties of Afghan kings held power in India for 500 years; but their advance was gradual, for it was not till 1206 that Delhi was taken and the greater part of Hindustan annexed by Kutub-ud-din, whose memory is perpetuated by the Kutub Minar, near Delhi. The first Muhammadan invasion of the Deccan took place in 1294.

THE MUGUL EMPIRE.—The Muhammadan Mongols, or Moguls, after overrunning Central and Western Asia, arrived in 1219, under Genghis Khan, on the frontiers of India, but did not cross the Indus. During the reign of the last monarch of the Taghik line, the famous Tamerlane (or Timur) burst into India at the head of a mighty host, captured and sacked Delhi in 1398, and laid waste a great part of Hindustan. A period of weak dynasties followed; frequent invasions from without, and general misrule and anarchy within, paved the way for larger conquests by the Mogul Emperors. In 1526 Babur, a direct descendant of Timur, overthrew the last of the Afghan kings at Panipat, and founded the MUGUL EMPIRE, which at his death extended from the Oxus river in Central Asia to the borders of the Gangetic delta. His son, Humayun (1530-50), lost the whole of the territory conquered by Babur, but recovered a portion of it (including Delhi) shortly before his death. His victor was Sher Shah Sur, who reigned from 1540-1545. Akbar the Great, Humayun's son (1556-1605), spent a long reign in firmly establishing the empire; at his death his dominions extended over Kabul, Kandahar, and all India north of the Nerbudda. Moreover, of the Muhammadan kingdoms of the Deccan, Ahmednagar, Berar and Bidar were absorbed, and Bijapur and Golconda forced to pay tribute. Akbar followed up his conquests by important financial reforms. He was tolerant in religion, and just to all classes of his subjects. Among the great men of his time were the Hindu, Todar Mall, his able finance minister; Abul Fazl, the historian of his reign; and Fazl, the poet. Jahangir (1605-27) received in 1616 Sir Thomas Roe, the ambassador of James I. Under Shah Jahan (1627-1658) the Mogul Empire reached the zenith of its glory. Many stately buildings, including the Taj Mahal at Agra, testify to his magnificence and taste. The close of Shah Jahan's reign was embittered by the rivalries of his four sons. Aurangzeb (1658-1707) defeated and killed his brothers and kept his father a prisoner till death (1666). Aurangzeb had great ability and courage, but religious intolerance, distrust and dissimulation characterised his chequered career. His reign, in some respects splendid, ended in failure. He brought the Mogul Empire to its greatest extent by conquering and incorporating all India as far south as Tanjore. But from this time the decline of the empire began. Four sons disputed the right of succession, and Bahadur Shah (1707-12) secured the crown. After four short-lived emperors Muhammad Shah (1719-48), grandson of Bahadur, came to the throne. His viceroy became rebellious, and so contributed to the success of the Marhattas, who subdued the Deccan. About 1724 part of the Deccan became practically independent under Nizam-ul-Mulk (ancestor of the present Nizam). In 1738, to avenge an alleged insult, Nadir Shah of Persia invaded India, captured Delhi, gave orders for a general slaughter of the inhabitants, and carried off enormous plunder. All the country west of the Indus was lost to the empire. On the death of Muhammad, the phantom rulers, Ahmad Shah (1748-1754) and Alamgir II. (1754-1759), occupied the throne, and were succeeded by Shah Alam (1759-1806), who came to terms with the British.

THE MAHRATTAS.—As the Moguls declined, the power of the Mahrattas increased. They were Hindus, and their country was in the Western Ghats, to the east of Bombay. The founder of their power was Sivaji (1627-1680), a chieftain of the family of Bhonsla, who became famous by his raids in the Deccan, and aimed at founding a Hindu kingdom. Balaji Vishwanath (1712-1730) Peishwa, or Prime Minister, succeeded in making that office of paramount importance and hereditary in his family, Sivaji's descendants thenceforth holding a merely nominal position. Under the Peishwas, aided by Scindia, Holkar, and the Gaekwar, who formed independent States about this time, the Mahrattas rapidly extended their territory and influence, conquering Gujarat, Malwa, Bessar, and Orissa. Although they were severely defeated at Panipat in 1761 by Ahmad Shah, the Afghan invader, they remained for some time the first power in India, and were the most dangerous opponents of the English. Too often their rule degenerated into a system of organised plunder. With the Pindaris, a horde of freebooters who followed in their train, they became a scourge to the country. It was not until both Pindaris and Mahrattas were finally overthrown in 1818 that India enjoyed the blessings of internal peace. The Mahratta empire, containing within itself the seeds of disintegration, was fated to bend before the superior sway of Europeans, who had gradually extended their power in India.

THE SIKHS.—The Punjab lay beyond the reach of the Mahrattas. There the decay of the Mogul empire gave the opportunity, not to a nation, but to a religious sect, united by military discipline, to establish territorial dominion. The founder of the Sikh religion was Nanak Shah, a Hindu reformer, born near Lahore in 1469. He preached the one God, purity of life, and abolition of caste. He had ten successors, named gurus or apostles, ending with Gurind Singh (1708). The sect, though cruelly persecuted, survived, and gradually adopted a political organisation. It became a power under Ranjit Singh (1780-1839), who, revolting against the Afghan Amir, by whom he had been appointed Governor of Lahore, founded the kingdom of the Punjab. The powerful army he had organised brought on the collision with the British, and after two wars the Sikh kingdom was annexed, and became the province of the Punjab (1849).

EUROPEAN ADVENTURE.—From time immemorial the lucrative trade of Europe with India and the further East has enormously enriched in turn each nation that has held it. In the 15th century it was mainly possessed by the Venetians on the European side, and by the Arabs on the Eastern side. The chief trading centres of the Arabs were Calicut, Ormuz, Aden, and Malacca. Seeing the large profits to be derived from this trade, the rising nations of Europe in the 15th century sought to obtain a share. Hence the ardour of the navigators who set out to discover an ocean route to India. The sea route round the Cape of Good Hope was discovered by Vasco da Gama, who anchored before Calicut in May, 1498. From that time until they lost their naval supremacy, a century later, the Portuguese enjoyed practically a monopoly of Indian trade. The first Portuguese viceroy, Francis of Almeida (1505-1509), established numerous factories and fortresses; while his successor, Alfonso de Albuquerque, captured Goa (1510), and extended the Portuguese dominion, notably on the Malabar coast. This dominion for 60 years from 1542 was tantamount to an entire regulation of the Asiatic coast trade with Europe from the Persian Gulf to Japan. It was stained by great cruelty. Up to the union of the crowns of Spain and Portugal in 1580 under Philip II., the Portuguese brought Indian products to Lisbon, whence the Dutch carried them to other parts of Europe. But when Philip II., on account of the Dutch revolt, shut Lisbon against them, the Dutch were driven to trade directly with the East. In 1602, by amalgamating existing trading companies, they formed "The Dutch East India Company," and the principal Portuguese settlements in the East were gradually captured. By 1662 the Portuguese held only those remnants of their Indian possessions which they still hold. The Dutch, who had some small trading factories, were in turn forced by the British to relax their hold on India. French and Danish East India Companies were established in 1601 and 1616 respectively. The latter achieved little, but, as will be seen directly, the French had a brief but brilliant period of influence in the middle of the 18th century.

ENGLISH DOMINION.—At the close of the 16th century the English became eager to share in the profits of Indian commerce. After some smaller ventures, the London East India Company was incorporated by Queen Elizabeth by royal charter on 31st December, 1600. There were 217 subscribers of the capital of £68,373, and the official title was "The Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading to the East Indies." A second charter in 1609 made the Company's privileges perpetual. The Portuguese resisted the new competitors, who nevertheless obtained a permanent footing at Surat after several stubborn engagements off Swally in 1612. In 1613 the British ambassador, Sir Thomas Roe, supported by the Emperor Jahangir, greatly improved the position of the Company. In 1639 the English acquired a strip of land on the east coast, built a factory there, fortified it, and named it Fort St. George; in 1633 this settlement of Madras became a Presidency. In Charles I.'s reign rival enterprises led to confusion and piratical excesses, but in 1657 co-operation and discipline were secured by the charter granted by Cromwell to a single company comprising the whole body of merchants. The charter was renewed by Charles II., in whose reign the Company enjoyed great prosperity. When, in 1662, Charles II. married Katharine of Braganza, a part of her dowry from Portugal was the Island of Bombay; in 1668 he transferred all his rights over it to the Company for an annual payment of £10. In 1687 Bombay replaced Surat as the seat of the western Presidency. Although in 1633 the Company had obtained certain treaty rights in Bengal from the Mogul, and in 1651 a factory had been established at Hooghly, yet in that part of India they held no territory as in Bombay and Madras. In 1688 the Muhammadan rulers forced them to abandon their settlement, but being invited to return, they laid, in 1690, amid swamp and jungle, the foundations of the Presidency of Fort William, which was destined to develop into the city of Calcutta. In 1693 a new charter was granted to the company. In 1698 a charter was granted to a rival company called "The English East India Company," to distinguish it from the old "London Company." After a brief period of conflict and trade losses, the rival companies came to terms in 1702; and in 1708 they were amalgamated under the title of "The United Company of Merchants of England trading to the East Indies."

When Great Britain engaged in war with France in 1744, the rival Companies of England and France came into collision, with the result that Madras was captured in 1746. Had Dupleix been well supported from home, he might have founded a French empire in India. The first reverses of the English were retrieved by Clive, whose gallant defence of Arcot (1751) was followed up by a series of brilliant movements, culminating in the utter defeat of the French army by Coote at Wandiwash in 1760, and in the capture of Pondicherry in 1762, which completed the ruin of the French Company. Since then the territory retained by the French in India has been insignificant; and in it they are forbidden by treaty to hold any considerable military force. The tragedy of the Black Hole of Calcutta (1756) summoned Clive from Madras, and his victory at Plassey over the Nawab of Bengal in 1757 made British influence predominant.

Clive was appointed first Governor of Bengal in 1758. In 1760 he returned home, and in 1763 the English were again embroiled in Bengal, but completely defeated their opponents at Buxar (1764). In 1765 Clive (now Lord Clive) returned to Bengal as Governor, and before he left finally in 1767 he succeeded in reforming the services, in which great abuses existed. Owing to Clive's efforts, the Company in 1765 received from the Emperor at Delhi the diwani or fiscal administration of Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, with the Northern Circars (Madras), and 25,000,000 people came under their government. Thus were laid the foundations of England's territorial dominion in India.

After an interval of misrule Warren Hastings (1772-85) was appointed Governor of Bengal, and in 1774 Governor-General, on the creation of that office under the Regulating Act of 1773. He vigorously reformed the revenue system and judicial procedure. Hastings was the first great administrative organiser of the British possessions. He greatly increased the power and territory of the Company, notwithstanding the opposition of his Council. Mysore in 1760 had been seized by Hyder Ali, a Mussulman adventurer, and a powerful and inveterate enemy of the English. By repelling Hyder Ali's memorable invasion of the Carnatic (1780), and defeating the triple alliance of the Nizam, the Marhattas, and Hyder Ali, Hastings probably saved British India. On his return to England he was impeached on a number of charges, but acquitted.

The first administration of Lord Cornwallis (1786-93) was marked by a thorough reform of the Company's Civil Service, by the introduction of a permanent settlement of the land revenue, by a reform of the judicial system, and by the third Mysore War, in which he defeated Tipoo, the son and successor of Hyder Ali. The rule of Sir John Shore (1793-98) was uneventful.

The administration of the Marquess Wellesley (1798-1805) was distinguished by many important events. Tipoo, as hostile to the English as Hyder, was in 1798 in secret correspondence with the French, who were then dominant in the military councils of the Nizam and of Scindia, were established in Mauritius, and under Napoleon, then engaged in his Egyptian campaign, were aiming at a great Eastern Empire. Lord Wellesley saw the necessity of crushing this dangerous Power, and the Fourth Mysore War ended in the capture of Seringapatam (1799), the death of Tipoo, and the conquest and restoration of Mysore to a representative of the family of Hindu Rajas whom Hyder Ali had dethroned. The Treaty of Bassoni (1800) broke up the Marhatta confederacy, but led to the Second and Third Marhatta Wars, which curtailed the power of Scindia and Holkar, and increased the strength and extent of the Company's dominions. Lastly, Lord Wellesley developed, if he did not initiate, a system of subsidiary alliances with Native States, which aimed at making the British the one paramount Power, while giving greater security than the balance of power attempted by his predecessors. Wellesley doubled the territories of the Company, and transformed a mercantile body into a political power with a preponderating influence throughout India. During the brief second administration of Lord Cornwallis (1805), and that of Sir G. Barlow (1805-7), Wellesley's policy of subsidiary alliances was reversed.

Lord Minto (1807-13) established peaceful relations with the Punjab, Afghanistan, and Persia, through the mediation of Metcalfe, Elphinstone, and Malcolm respectively. On the renewal of the Company's charter in 1813 the monopoly of Indian trade was abolished.

Under the Marquess of Hastings (1814-23) a severe struggle with Nepal ended with the Treaty of Sagauli (1816), which still regulates India's relations with that State. The annexation in 1818 of the territory of the Marhatta Peshwa enlarged Bombay Presidency to its present dimensions. Lord Hastings in the same year crushed the marauding Pindaris of Central India, who had devastated the country in all directions. Revising Lord Wellesley's policy of alliances, he settled on their existing basis the relations of the Supreme Power with the feudatory States of Rajputana and Central India. He encouraged education. Lord Amherst (1823-8) succeeded Lord Hastings. Encroachments on British districts by the King of Ava and his insolent refusal of all redress led to the first Burmese War, which cost 20,000 lives and nearly £14,000,000, but gave to India the provinces of Aracan and Tanasserim, and, practically, Assam.

While Lord William Bentinck was Governor-General (1828-35), steam communication with India was introduced, suttee (or widow-burning) was abolished, educated natives were admitted more freely into the service of the Company, and various reforms were passed affecting education, the liberty of the Press, finance, and justice. The new charter of the East India Company in 1833 abolished the remaining monopoly of Chinese trade, introduced reforms in the constitution of the Indian Government, made the North-West Provinces a separate administration, and abolished the restrictions on the residence of British subjects in India. The resolution of Lord Auckland (1835-42) to support Shah Shuja against Dost Muhammad brought on the first Afghan War (1839-42), and the serious disaster attendant on the fatal retreat from Cabul. The administration of Lord Ellenborough (1842-44) saw the conquest of Sind by Sir Charles Napier and its annexation (1843). Lord Hardinge (1844-48) conducted in person the first Sikh War, and fought a series of severely contested battles, ending with Soobraon (1846).

Lord Dalhousie's administration (1848-56) was fruitful in events. The Second Sikh War resulted, after severe fighting, in the submission of the Sikhs and the annexation of the Punjab (1849). The second Burmese War (1852), deprived the King of Burma of Pegu. Lord Dalhousie promoted the introduction of railways and the telegraph. He established cheap postage, promoted steam navigation with England via the Red Sea, and opened the Ganges Canal. His annexation policy was much criticised at home. It proceeded on the principle that British being preferable to Indian rule, gross misrule or a break in the natural succession justified, in the interest of the subject populations, the transfer of a native State to the British Government. In 1849 this "doctrine of lapse" was applied to Satara, and in 1853 Jhansi similarly became British territory; while on the death of the last of the Mahratta Princes of Nagpur, his territory was annexed, and became the Central Provinces in 1853. In 1856, after repeated warnings to the tyrannical ruler of Oudh, that kingdom was also annexed, without bloodshed or fighting.

Earl Canning (1857-62), who succeeded Lord Dalhousie, left England pledged to pursue a policy of peace, but he was destined to face the greatest crisis that has threatened British rule in India. A mutiny of sepoys broke out on the 10th May, 1857, at Meerut, and spread through the whole Bengal Army. Delhi was for some months in the possession of the rebels, and many chiefs joined the revolt. The siege of Delhi, the massacre at Cawnpore, the relief of Lucknow, and the Central India campaign stand out among the stirring events of that momentous time. Although the control of Indian affairs was vested in the Cabinet through the Board of Control, the great mutiny was laid to the charge of the East India Company, whose eventful annals were brought to a close by the transfer of the entire administration of India to the Crown.

INDIA UNDER THE CROWN.—The "Act for the Better Government of India" established the authority of the Crown; and a Proclamation to the Princes, Chiefs, and People of India, dated the 1st Nov., 1858, announced the resolution of Her Majesty to assume the government of the territories in India "heretofore administered in trust by the Honourable East India Company." Legislative Councils were established. Lord Canning was succeeded in 1862 by Lord Elgin, who, however, died in Nov., 1863.

Sir John (Lord) Lawrence (1861-69) reformed the finances, which had been seriously burdened by the heavy military expenditure necessitated by the Mutiny. His administration was marked by the Bhutan War (1864) and by the terrible Orissa Famine of 1866. He encouraged irrigation.

Lord Mayo (1865-72) effected many administrative reforms, instituted State railways, promoted the construction of roads and canals, and inaugurated the system of provincial finance, which has since been extended.

During the tenure of office of Lord Northbrook (1872-76) the late King Edward VII., then Prince of Wales, visited India. The Viceroy devoted attention to finance and to famine relief. In 1875 the reigning Gaekwar of Baroda was deposed for misrule and disloyalty.

Lord Lytton's administration (1876-80) was made eventful by a terrible famine in Southern India and by the Second Afghan War. In 1877 the Queen assumed the title of EMPRESS OF INDIA.

The peaceful term of the Marquess of Ripon (1880-84) was marked by the extension of local self-government, and by fiscal, judicial, educational, and other reforms.

His successor was the Marquess of Dufferin (1884-88). In 1885-6 occurred the Third Burmese War, by which Upper Burma with the Shan States was annexed. The N.W. frontier of Afghanistan was delimited, the frontier of India strengthened, and the army increased. The first Indian National Congress met in 1885.

The Marquess of Lansdowne (1888-94) continued his predecessor's policy of strengthening the army and consolidating British influence on the frontier. The Indo-Afghan boundary was defined, and a serious outbreak in Manipur was suppressed. He took the first step in currency reform by closing the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver. He reconstituted the Legislative Councils in 1892 by introducing a more popular element, and conferring a limited right of interpellation and criticism in financial matters.

The viceroyalty of Lord Elgin (1894-99) was full of events. In 1895 an outbreak in Chitral made necessary a large military expedition to relieve the garrison. Plague broke out in 1896, and has raged more or less severely ever since. In 1896-7 an area of 307,000 sq. ms., with a population of 70 millions, was visited by a grievous famine. In 1897 the border tribes from Chitral to Baluchistan rose against the British garrisons. In the Turai campaign that followed over 40,000 troops were employed. Several boundaries were settled under Lord Elgin, notably those with Russia on the Pamirs and with France on the Mekong. The frontiers of Afghanistan, Persia, and China were also defined. The general Customs tariff, abolished in 1882, was reimposed in 1894.

Lord Curzon (1899-1904 and 1904-5) succeeded Lord Elgin. In 1899 the pound sterling was made legal tender in India concurrently with the rupee, at the exchange of Rs. 15 to £1. In 1899-1900 occurred one of the worst famines on record, the tracts affected covering 475,000 sq. ms. with a population of 60 millions. Lord Curzon's term of office was a period of reform and reconstruction. He appointed Commissions of Inquiry on irrigation, railways, universities, agricultural banks, excise, and police, all of which suggested important reforms. He instituted agricultural banks and departments, and initiated legislation to free the cultivators from the money-lenders. The famine codes were amended. A new province, under the direct control of the Governor-General in Council, was created, called the North-West Frontier Province (1901). The Aden and the Perso-Afghan boundaries were delimited. An Imperial Cadet Corps of native princes and nobles was inaugurated. Educational policy was reviewed and reforms introduced. A much-needed reform of the police was undertaken. Lord Curzon also secured a perpetual lease of Berar from the Nizam. In 1904 a mission with a military escort proceeded to Tibet, and secured a favourable treaty. During Lord Curzon's absence in England for a few months in 1904 Lord Amethull occupied the post of Viceroy. Lord Curzon was reappointed in Dec., 1904. In 1905 the treaty with Afghanistan was renewed. The Viceroy reduced the dimensions of Bengal, and constituted a new province, called Eastern Bengal and Assam, by combining parts of Bengal with Assam. He carried out great reforms in the Army in conjunction with Lord Kitchener (appointed Commander-in-Chief in 1902), but, differing from certain proposals made by the latter, and finding that he lacked the support of the Home Government, he resigned (Aug., 1905).

Lord Minto succeeded in Nov., 1905. The Prince of Wales (now H.M. King George) made a tour in India during the winter of 1905-6. For some years after 1905 there was agitation among Bengalis owing to the partition of Bengal, and a Seditious Meetings Act was passed in Nov., 1907. In his Budget speech in 1907 the Secretary of State, Viscount Morley, foreshadowed important reforms in Indian administration, designed to associate the people more closely with the Government. He nominated two Indian members to his own Council, and an Indian member to the Governor-General's Council. He appointed Commissioners to inquire into railways, into the possibilities of financial and administrative decentralisation, and into the conditions of factory labour, and action was taken on their reports. In 1908 the unrest in Bengal assumed an anarchical character. To mark the fiftieth anniversary of the transfer of India to the Crown a royal proclamation was issued in Nov., 1908, promising extended self-government. Owing to the continued unrest in 1909 and 1910, a Press Act, to control printing presses, was passed.

Lord Hardinge succeeded in Nov., 1910. The Indian Legislative Council in June, 1911, prohibited indentured emigration from India to Natal after 1 July, 1912, and a new Seditious Meetings Act was passed. A great Durbar was held at Delhi on 12 December, 1911, by H.M. King George, to announce his Coronation. On this occasion the King-Emperor also made announcements of new and far-reaching steps in Indian policy, viz. the transfer of the seat of Government from Calcutta to Delhi, and the creation of a Governorship for the presidency of Bengal, of a Lieut.-Governorship for Bihar, Chota-Nagpur, and Orissa, and of a Chief Commissionership for Assam. Delhi was chosen as the capital on geographical, historical, and political grounds. The provincial changes involved a partial rescission of the partition of Bengal and the abolition of the province of Eastern Bengal and Assam, created in 1905. Bengal as reconstituted is a compact Bengali-speaking province, placed under a Governor in Council. A new province, Bihar and Orissa, was formed, including Chota-Nagpur and the Sambalpur district. Assam again became a separate province, under a Chief Commissioner. The reconstituted provinces came into existence on 1 April, 1912. In pursuance of recommendations by the Decentralisation Commission, enhanced powers in respect of appointments and expenditure were granted to local governments having a quasi-permanent provincial settlement. Moreover, greater permanency was arranged for in financial settlements with the provinces, the control of the Government of India being relaxed. In Dec., 1912, the Viceroy took formal possession of the new headquarters at Delhi. The State entry was marred by an attempt on the life of the Viceroy. The outbreak of The Great War in August, 1914, was the signal for an outburst of loyalty and devotion to the King-Emperor on the part of the princes and peoples of India. Practically all the ruling chiefs placed their military forces and the resources of their states at the disposal of the Government.

Following on the outbreak of war serious disturbances were started in the Punjab and elsewhere by emigrants returning from Canada and the United States imbued with revolutionary ideas. Order was restored as a result of measures taken under the Defence of India Act, which was passed in March, 1915. Lord Hardinge's term of office as Viceroy was extended from November, 1915, to March, 1916. The Viceroy announced in March, 1916, that it had been decided eventually to abolish the system of indentured emigration from India. Lord Hardinge put forward proposals for post-war constitutional reforms.

Lord Chelmsford succeeded in April, 1916. The year 1917 was marked by certain symptoms of unrest and the development of an agitation for constitutional changes towards self-government, or, in its extreme form, "Home Rule for India."

The Public Services Commission, appointed during Lord Hardinge's administration, reported.

Towards the end of 1917 the Secretary of State visited India in connexion with a development of constitutional progress. The Bombay Government took the first steps towards obligatory primary education; a policy of more complete local self-government was decided on by the Government of India. The influenza epidemic spread to India, and it was estimated that over 12 million deaths in British India and Indian States resulted. The Industrial Commission, appointed in 1916, issued a report. In 1919 a bill was introduced into Parliament embodying the proposals of the "Montagu-Chelmsford Joint Report," and eventually passed. During the year considerable distress occurred in consequence of the partial failure of the 1918 autumn crops throughout Northern India and the Peninsula, and relief measures were undertaken. Serious disturbances in the Punjab and Delhi, resulting in many deaths, followed on a "passive resistance" movement, inaugurated by Mr. Gandhi against the "Rowlatt" Bills, introduced by the Government of India, on the recommendation of the "Rowlatt" Committee, for renewing some of the powers with which the Government had armed themselves during the War to deal with sedition. The murder of the Amir and the subsequent events in Afghanistan were followed by an invasion of Afghans and some frontier tribes into India, necessitating prompt military action by the Government of India. The "Sadler" Commission on the Calcutta University reported during the year, and made drastic proposals for recasting the Indian secondary and university educational system. The Home Parliament, by rules, laid down the details of the constitution of the new Central and Provincial Governments (see pp. 719, 721). The Amir's representatives visited India and discussed with officers of the Indian Government the possibility of a resumption of more friendly relations. Fighting with the Mahsuds on the North-West frontier continued throughout the year, in consequence of which the Viceroy announced Government's intention to occupy Central Waziristan, and to continue the railway from Jamrud towards the Khyber. Further steps towards employing more largely Indians in the various Government services and for the improvement of conditions of service and pay of both European and Indian members of the same were taken. The recommendation of the Exchange and Currency Committee for the linking of the rupee to gold and the adoption of an exchange rate equivalent to one-tenth of the gold contents of the sovereign, i.e., an exchange rate of Rs. 10 to the £, was adopted. A High Commissioner for India in London, with a separate establishment, responsible to the Government of India for certain agency work, previously performed by the India Office, was appointed. The Army in India and the Medical Services Committees respectively reported. The Army in India Committee attempted to determine the part to be played by the Army in India in a scheme of Imperial Defence and to analyse the steps which must be taken to make the Army, both in its administration and its personnel, more efficient and more attractive to the right type of soldiers.

In January, 1921, the new Indian Legislature, Provincial Councils, and the Chamber of Princes, were inaugurated by the Duke of Connaught.

Lord Reading succeeded in April, 1921. The battle between constitutionalism and revolution continued. A conflict between Sikhs at Nankana resulted in many deaths. Mr. Gandhi, the All Brothers, and their associates, continued to advocate non-co-operation with the Government and boycott of the reforms. The utterances of the All Brothers forced Government to order their arrest. The Moplahs (Muhammadan fanatics of Malabar) resisted the ordinary processes of law, and a widespread outbreak of violence ensued which forced the authorities to take strong military measures for its suppression. Frontier disturbances and fighting continued. Failure of the crops in some parts necessitated the opening of relief works. Special missions were sent to Afghanistan and Tibet. The Railway Committee reported and recommended drastic changes, including the termination of the system of management of railways by Government companies domiciled in England.

In November the Prince of Wales visited India. In 1922 the Government arrested Mr. Gandhi, who was sentenced to six years' imprisonment. The Government found it necessary to give to Ruling Princes some measure of protection against attacks in the Press.

The Fiscal Commission (appointed in 1921) reported and advised the adoption of a policy of protection.

The Hon. V. Sri Nivasa Sastri visited the Dominions, as a representative of the Government of India, to discuss with the leaders of political thought the disabilities of Indians in the self-governing Dominions. Twenty-three Acts and Regulations supplementing the criminal law were repealed. A Central Advisory Board for Railways was established.

In 1923 Burma was constituted a Governor's Province. The "Inchcape" Retrenchment Committee, appointed in 1922, reported and recommended a total reduction in the Budget of Rs. 19½ crores. The Government accepted the principle of Protection, but declared that it should be applied with discrimination; hitherto the Indian tariff had been a revenue tariff. A trade Convention was concluded with Afghanistan. A Bill was passed providing for the removal of existing racial distinctions in the criminal procedure applicable to Indians and non-Indians. The new frontier policy was further developed by the completion of various roads for mechanical transport within Waziristan and along the Derajat border. At the Imperial Conference, a Resolution was passed recommending each Dominion of the Empire concerned to set up a Commission to consider, in conjunction with a Commission of equal number from India, how far the principle laid down by the Imperial Conference of 1921, that Indians lawfully resident overseas should not suffer derogation of rights of citizenship, had been given effect to and to what extent it could be further applied. The Bengal Government was given special powers to deal with violent crime. The Punjab was greatly disturbed by the Sikh invasion of the Nabha State. The Royal Commission on the Superior Civil Services, appointed in 1923, reported and recommended financial improvements for the Indian Civil and other Services. Further Indianisation of the Services was recommended. During the year a Legislative Council was set up in Coorg.

Early in 1925, the Swarajist leader, Mr. Das, repudiated the policy of violence, but asked in return for the cessation of "repressive" measures. A committee was appointed to enquire into the difficulties arising from or inherent in the working of the Constitution, and recommended many alterations, particularly that the control of the Secretary of State should be relaxed in purely Indian matters. The terms of reference did not, however, extend to the larger question of a complete revision of the Constitution, contemplated in the Montagu-Chelmsford scheme of 1918. The Viceroy came home to confer with the Home Government, and on his return to India announced the decision that the moment for such an enquiry had not arrived. The Government extended the policy of protection by granting a bounty on steel manufactured in India. The Khyber Pass Railway, 27 miles in length, from Jamrud—some three miles from the entrance of the Pass—to Landi Kotal, on the Afghan border, was opened.

In 1926 the Cotton Excise duty was abolished. It was decided to reconstruct the Royal Indian Marine as a combatant force so that India may ultimately undertake her own naval defence. The Government of India decided to prohibit the export of opium for medical purposes, thus taking the lead in initiating the measures for which the Geneva Protocol provides.

Lord Irwin succeeded Lord Reading as Viceroy in April, 1926. In the United Provinces a Bill was passed to improve the lot of tenants in Agra Province by facilitating occupancy tenure and for the prevention of unauthorised imposts by landlords.

The Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance recommended that the gold value of the rupee should be fixed at 2s. 6d., that the currency authority should be put under a statutory obligation to buy and sell gold or gold exchange at appropriate prices to maintain the ratio, that a central bank should be created apart from the Imperial Bank and that measures should be taken to establish a gold standard for India. Government announced their intention to adopt the ratio of 2s. 6d. and to pass the necessary legislation to put the matter on a statutory basis.

Following the success of the Government mission for the suppression of slave trading in the Hukawng valley an expedition was sent to the Kachin tribal chiefs in Burma with the object of endeavouring to persuade the chiefs to agree to the abolition of the system of tribal slavery in the area lying between the head waters of the Irrawaddy. In Nepal the slave liberation scheme, formulated by the Prime Minister of that State, was completed at a cost of £275,000.

Important changes in the administration of the State of Hyderabad were made by H.H. the Nizam following representations by the Supreme Government.

During the year there was a recrudescence of communal and religious strife between Moslems and Hindus, and serious riots, with great loss of lives, occurred in most parts of India, particularly in Kohat, Calcutta and Delhi. The Government of Bengal were obliged to proclaim a state of emergency.

The elections for the Indian Assembly and Provincial Councils were held towards the close of the year.

In 1927 a continuance of the measures for the protection of the Indian steel industry, in a modified form, was recommended by the Indian Tariff Board, whose main proposals were accepted by the Government of India. It was also decided to protect the cotton textile industry against competition in cotton yarn produced under conditions which enable such yarn to be produced at a cost below that at which it can be produced in India, by an alteration in the import duty on cotton yarn, and to abolish the duty on imported mill stores, etc. An Act for the registration of trade unions came into force. The rupee was stabilised by legislation, at 2s. 6d., and a bill for the establishment of an Indian Reserve Bank was introduced. The Bombay Back Bay Reclamation Committee recommended the carrying on of a certain portion of the work, but that it should in future, as far as possible, be undertaken by contract agency.

A substantial and progressive Indianisation of the Indian Army was recommended by the Sandhurst (Skeen) Committee in order that, by 1932, 50 per cent. of the cadre of officers should be Indians.

A settlement was reached with the Government of South Africa on the question of the position of Indians in the Union. A Public Services Commission was formally constituted. The new Council House at New Delhi was opened. The Indian Princes met in conference to consider their future status. His Highness the Maharajah of Patiala sanctioned a scheme of compulsory education in his State. Slavery was abolished in the State of Kalat (Baluchistan).

In the Home Parliament the Indian Navy Bill and the Indian Church Bill were passed. The latter provides that the Church in India shall be an autonomous body.

In November the Home Government announced its intention to set up a Statutory Commission, with the Rt. Hon. Sir John Simon as Chairman, to report to what extent it is desirable to establish the principles of responsible government in India, or to extend, modify or restrict the degree of responsible government.

In 1928 the Commission visited India, but was unfavourably received by many who were dissatisfied with the terms of reference. Boycotts and sympathetic strikes were organised. Towards the end of the year the Commission succeeded in securing the offer of the co-operation of most of the political parties and groups previously hostile. A Committee was appointed, with Sir Harcourt Butler as Chairman, to consider the relations between the Paramount Power and the Indian States, with special reference to the financial and economic relations between British India and the States.

The Royal Commission on Agriculture in India (appointed in 1926) issued its Report and the first step to carry out its recommendations was taken by the opening of a Conference in India to draw up schemes for co-ordinated action.

In 1927 it was announced that in future the number of direct vacancies open to Indian candidates at Sandhurst would be doubled, that a certain number of vacancies would be reserved for Indian officers holding the Viceroy's commission, and that Woolwich and Cranwell would be open to Indian aspirants for King's Commissions.

In 1929, power was given by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act to appoint Indian judges, etc., as additional members of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for the hearing of appeals from India. The Statutory Commission continued its labours, but met with a considerable amount of opposition organised by some of the political groups in India. Indian leaders attempted (but with little success) to draw up proposals acceptable to the main recognised political parties for submission to the Commission. A bill was introduced in the Assembly providing for the removal from India of non-Indian communist agents and a few days later an attempt was made by communists to destroy members of the Assembly by throwing bombs at the Government benches. The Bill was passed later as an Ordinance owing to the refusal of the President of the Assembly to allow its discussion on the ground that some of its provisions were sub judice in view of a trial of some conspirators then proceeding. There was considerable unrest in parts of India during the year, particularly in Bombay. An Act was passed providing for the investigation and settlement of trade disputes; under it strikes and lock-outs in utility services are penalised; strikes and lock-outs having any object than the furtherance of a trade dispute within the trade or industry in which the strikers or employers are engaged, or are designed to inflict severe general and prolonged hardship upon the community and government, are illegal.

A Royal Commission was appointed to report on the existing conditions of labour in industrial undertakings in British India, on the health, efficiency and standard of living of the workers, and on the relations between employers and employed. A Committee was also appointed to consider the general problem of road development.

An Act was passed providing that the age of marriage shall not be less than 14 and the age of consent not less than 16.

The Indian States Committee presented its Report. It recommended that the Viceroy, not the Governor-General in Council, should in future be the Agent of the Crown and that important matters of dispute between the states themselves, between the states and the Paramount Power and between the states and British India should be referred to independent Committees for advice. The Committee dealt with the relationship between the Paramount Power and the financial relations between British India and the states, particularly the claim of the states for a share in the maritime customs, the proceeds of which are enjoyed at present exclusively by British India.

In 1930 the outstanding event was the issue of the Report of the Statutory Commission (the Simon Commission). The report was unanimous. A survey of the facts, containing an analysis of the trend of political thought in India was first published (Cmd. 3568), then, after a short interval, the Commission's Recommendations (Cmd. 3569). These, though in no sense revolutionary, foreshadowed many changes: First, the separation of Burma, whose political association with India is not based on any natural or racial affinity, but is a mere accident of history, and, secondly, a number of radical reforms in the constitution of India proper. Broadly these may be summarised as the grant of the greatest possible measure of independence to Local Governments within their own sphere, and the substitution of a Federal system in place of the existing arrangements. Measures were also proposed whereby representatives of the Indian States will join with representatives of British India for the discussion of matters of common concern in a "Council of Greater India," to be appointed not by Statute but by Royal Proclamation.

It was proposed that the Provinces should be provided with enlarged financial resources. Their Governments would no longer be "dynastic," as under the Montagu-Chelmsford Constitution, but unitary, every Member being required to accept joint responsibility for all acts of the Administration. Ministers, whether chosen from the local Legislature or not, were to be nominated by the Governor, and would have charge of those branches of the administration which are now "reserved" to the Official Side of the Government, e.g., control of the Police and maintenance of Law and Order. The Commission recommended that reserve powers should be vested in the Governor for such essential purposes as the protection of minorities and of the rights of the Services, and the carrying on of the Government in any emergency such as the breakdown for any reason of the normal arrangements; that Legislatures should be enlarged, the franchise basis widened and constituencies reduced to more manageable size. Moreover, a certain elasticity was recognised as indispensable, and measures were indicated whereby each Province may advance towards self-government on the lines found best suited to its individual needs, provided always that the rights of minorities were not invaded by any constitutional changes thus effected.

The Commission's Report, published in June, was received with a storm of disapprobation in Indian political circles, and was the signal for a recrudescence of the non-co-operation movement in an acute form. There were serious riots and bomb outrages in various parts of India. In the course of the measures taken to restore order Mr. Gandhi and numerous other political leaders were brought to trial, convicted, and sentenced to terms of imprisonment.

In September the Round Table Conference was convened in London as the next stage in the process of settling the future constitution.

General elections to the Indian and Provincial Legislatures took place in the autumn.

In 1931 the various Committees of the Round Table Conference presented their Reports, one of the most important being that of the Federal Relations Sub-Committee outlining the constitution of a Federal Government of India. The representatives of the Indian States had expressed their willingness to consider their entry into a Federal system. The Conference adjourned in January. Later, there was considerable disorder in India, but eventually negotiations resulted in an agreement for the cessation of civil disobedience and of the boycott of English goods.

New Delhi was inaugurated in February. The Earl of Willingdon succeeded Lord Irwin as Viceroy in April.

The Royal Commission ("Whitley") on Labour, appointed in 1929, submitted their Report and recommendations.

The Round Table Conference re-assembled in London in October, and discussed the composition and functions of the proposed Federal Legislature, the Federal Court, the representation of minorities, the States' places in the Legislature, &c.

At the conclusion of the Session of the Conference in December the Prime Minister stated, that in view of the differences of opinion revealed during the discussions, the Government proposed to appoint three Committees to work in India to investigate more fully the questions of franchise, federal finance, and relations with certain Indian States.

In 1932 measures were taken to counteract the civil disobedience movement and Mr. Gandhi, who attended the Conference, was arrested on his return to India. The various communities having failed to agree in regard to their representation in the Provincial Legislatures, the Home Government decided on certain provisions to give effect to a scheme for the representation of the communities, to be laid before Parliament in due course. Later, it was announced that another (small) Round Table Conference would be convened in November, with a view to reach an agreement consistent with the declared policy of His Majesty's Government on the important constitutional questions still remaining to be decided. The North-West Frontier Province was constituted as Governor's Province; an annual subvention of Rs. 1 crore (£750,000) being granted by the Central Government, to be operative for three years or until the new constitution of India is inaugurated, whichever is earlier. An initial balance of Rs. 10 lakhs (£75,000) was placed at the disposition of the Province. Aden was constituted a Province, under a Chief Commissioner under the direct control of the Government of India.

In March, 1933, after further inquiries and discussions, including a third session of the Round Table Conference, His Majesty's Government announced their proposals for constitutional reforms (Cmd. 4268—White Paper). A Joint Select Committee of both Houses of Parliament was set up to consider and report on them in consultation with Indian representatives, the intention of His Majesty's Government being to introduce a Bill embodying their final plans, after consideration of the Committee's report. The proposals provide for a federal system of government with self-government at the centre and in the Provinces; the Federation to consist of the autonomous Provinces of British India and the Indian States, the latter to surrender certain of their Sovereign rights to the Federation but retaining autonomy in respect of rights not surrendered; a Federal Legislature consisting of elected representatives of British India and of representatives of Indian States to be appointed by their Rulers, and a Federal Executive consisting of the Governor-General representing the Crown, aided and advised by a Council of Ministers, responsible, subject to certain qualifications, to the Legislature so composed, and to endow these authorities with powers and functions in relation to British India, and with such powers and functions in relation to the States as the States-members of the Federation will formally accept as being of full force and effect within their territories, full liberty to be reserved to the Crown to refuse to accept the accession of any State to the Federation if it is sought on terms incompatible with the scheme of Federation embodied in the Constitution Act; the Governor-General to have a special responsibility in relation to the peace or tranquillity of India, financial stability, minorities, Public Services, protection of rights of Indian States, prevention of commercial discrimination, and any matter affecting the administration of the Reserved Departments, the eleven provinces (Madras, Bombay, Bengal, The United Provinces, The Punjab, Bihar, The Central Provinces, Assam, The North-West Frontier Province, Sind, Orissa) to become autonomous units, the government of each being administered by a Governor representing the King, aided and advised by a Council of Ministers responsible to the Legislature of the Province, the Governor to have the same special powers and responsibilities as the Governor-General, with certain modifications.

IMPERIAL LEGISLATION.—Legislation for India in England is chiefly of a constitutional or financial character. The Regulating Act (1773), which created the first Governor-General, a Council of five members, and a supreme court with a chief judge, was the first statute that recognised the East India Company as a ruling body. Pitt's India Act (1784) left the business and most of the patronage to the Court of Directors, but gave the supreme civil and military authority to a Board of Control, whose president represented India in the House of Commons. In 1793 the Company's charter was renewed; in 1813, on a further renewal of the charter, the trade of India was thrown open, while on the next renewal in 1833 the Company's monopoly of the China trade was abolished, and they became a non-commercial governing body. In 1853 the Company's charter was renewed for the last time, and the Indian Civil Service was thrown open to competition. By "An Act for the Better Government of India" (1858), all the territories governed by the East India Company were transferred to the Crown, and all the powers exercised by the Company and the Board of Control were vested in the Secretary of State for India, assisted by a Council. Under this Act as amended by Acts of 1889, 1907, 1915 and 1919, at least one-half of the members of Council must have served in India for 10 years, and must not have left India more than 5 years prior to their appointment. The number of members may be 12 and must not be less than 8, and is at present 9. Their term of office is now 5 years, with power of extension. There are now 3 Indian members. In 1877 (under the Royal Titles Act) Queen Victoria assumed the title of Empress of India. By the Indian Councils Act (1909) the Imperial and provincial Legislative Councils were enlarged, their powers of interpellation and criticism enhanced, and the elective element extended, special provision being made for the representation of landholders, the professional classes, Muhammadans, and European and Indian traders and planters. The executive councils of Madras and Bombay were increased in size, and power was given to constitute executive councils in provinces under Lieut.-Governors. The Government of India Act (1919) created a Governor of Bengal, established an Executive Council for Bihar and Orissa, and authorised the creation of legislative councils in provinces under Chief Commissioners. The Indian High Courts Act (1911) empowered the Government of India to increase the number of High Court judges from 15 to 20, to establish new High Courts, and to appoint temporary judges. An Act to consolidate the Imperial Legislation relating to the Government of India was passed in 1915. The Government of India Act, 1919, confers on provinces a larger measure of independence of the Government of India; it distinguishes the functions of local governments and local legislatures from the functions of the Governor-General in Council and the Indian Legislature; it provides for the devolution of authority in respect of provincial subjects to local governments, for the allocation of revenues to those governments and for the use under the authority of the Governor-General in Council of the agency of local governments in relation to central subjects; it provides for the transfer of some provincial subjects to the administration of the Governor acting with Ministers. It gives borrowing powers to local governments. It lays down that the major provinces shall be governed, in relation to reserved subjects, by a Governor in Council, and in relation to transferred subjects by a Governor acting with Ministers, appointed from among the elected Members of the local legislative Council. It confers extended powers on local legislatures. For the Supreme or Central Government, it provides that the Legislature shall consist of the Governor-General and two Chambers, viz., the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly. It provides for the appointment of an Auditor-General and a Public Services Commission on India.

By the Government of India Act, 1920, His Majesty may by Order in Council transfer the control of the military government of Aden to such person or authority as may be specified in the Order.

INDIAN LAW.—The law administered in the Indian courts consists mainly of: (1) The enactments of the Indian Legislative Councils (Imperial and provincial) and of the bodies that preceded them; (2) statutes of the British Parliament applicable to India; (3) the Hindu and Muhammadan laws of inheritance and domestic law; (4) the customary law affecting particular castes and races.

The Government of India.

EMPEROR OF INDIA—H.M. GEORGE V.

Secretary of State—The Right Hon. Sir Samuel Hoare, Bt., G.B.E., C.M.G., M.P.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA is the head of the Indian Administration in England, and as a member of the Cabinet he is solely responsible to, and represents the supreme authority of, Parliament. Subject to the provisions of the Government of India Act and rules made thereunder, the Secretary of State can impose his orders on the Government of India. In matters requiring secrecy (e.g., foreign policy and the affairs of Indian States) the Secretary of State can act on his own authority without consulting his Council, and in most other matters can overrule the majority of his Council. Indian Government business in England is transacted at the India Office and at the office of the High Commissioner for India (see p. 299).

The King-Emperor appoints the Governor-General, the Governors of the 10 major Provinces (Bengal, Madras, Bombay, the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa, the Punjab, the Central Provinces, Assam, Burma, and the North-West Frontier Province), the Commander-in-Chief, the Members of the Executive Councils of the Governor-General and of Governors, and the Judges of the High Courts. The term of these appointments, except judgeships, is usually 5 years.

Subject to the Secretary of State's direction, the supreme executive authority in India, in both civil and military affairs, is the Governor-General in Council. The Governor-General's Executive Council now contains 7 members including the Commander-in-Chief (three of whom must have served in India 10 years), as well as himself. Ordinarily, the opinion of the majority prevails, but the Governor-General is empowered in special circumstances to overrule the majority. In accordance with the Government of India Act, 1919, and rules thereunder, the Indian Legislature consists of the Governor-General and two Chambers, viz. the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly (see pp. 719, 721 as to their constitution). Except as otherwise provided by or under the Act, a Bill is not deemed to have been passed unless agreed to by both Chambers. The Act confers powers on the Governor-General of securing essential legislation in emergencies, subject to disallowance by His Majesty in Council; of returning Bills for reconsideration, and of vetoing proposed legislation affecting the safety or tranquillity of British India. The Indian Budget is submitted to both Chambers, and is voted on by the Legislative Assembly except in regard to certain specified heads, but the Governor-General in Council can act, notwithstanding a refusal or reduction of grants, where essential to the discharge of his responsibilities, and he may authorise expenditure necessary for the safety and tranquillity of British India or any part thereof. Differences of opinion between the two Chambers may be referred for decision by the Governor-General to a joint meeting of members of both Chambers appointed for the purpose. Although the Government does not command a majority in the Indian Legislature, it is necessarily given the power to reject adverse votes, since its responsibility is not to the Indian Legislature, but to Parliament.

The seat of the Supreme Government is at Delhi, the summer headquarters being still at Simla.

Business is conducted by 9 Departments—Finance; Foreign and Political; Home; Legislative; Commerce; Industries and Labour; Education, Health and Lands; Army; and Railway. Each Department is in the charge of a Secretary to Government (the Foreign and Political Department has both a Foreign and a Political Secretary), and is under the care of a member of the Viceroy's Executive Council, who has authority to deal with affairs of minor importance, and to select what is worthy of the consideration of the Governor-General and his Council. The Governor-General himself superintends the Foreign and Political Department.

The Finance Department deals with public accounts, loans, taxation, opium, currency, banking, mints, &c. The Foreign and Political Department conducts relations with external politics, relations with Foreign States, frontier tribes, relations with Indian States and Feudatories within the limits of India, and, through its Political Residents and Agents in the various Indian States, supervises their administration and regulates their relations with the paramount Power. The Political Residents in the Persian Gulf and Muscat look after the commercial and political interests of India in those quarters. The Home Department deals with the internal politics, civil service, judicial affairs, prisons, police, &c. The Legal Member of Council takes charge of Government Bills in connexion with the Legislative Department. The department of Commerce deals with trade and shipping, ports, &c. The department of Industries and Labour deals with industries, stores, labour, public works, post-office, telegraphs, civil aviation, communications, irrigation, factories, &c. The Army is under the Army Department, of which the Commander-in-Chief has charge in Council. The Education, Health and Lands Department has the control of education, local government, sanitation, land revenue and surveys, agriculture, famine, meteorology, forests, foodstuffs, &c. Railway administration is entrusted to a Railway Department, which is in the charge of the Commerce Member of Council.

British India is divided into 16 Local Governments and Administrations, viz. :—Under Governors, Madras, Bombay, and Bengal, still termed Presidencies, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces, Assam, Burma, and the North-West Frontier Province; under Chief Commissioners, who are under the immediate authority of the Governor-General in Council, British Baluchistan, Delhi, Ajmer-Merwara, Coorg, the Andaman and Nicobar Islands and Aden.

The Governors of Madras, Bombay and Bengal are permitted to communicate direct with the Secretary of State.

The unit of administration throughout British India is the District, the executive head of which is the District Officer, called Collector-Magistrate or Deputy-Commissioner, as the case may be. In subordination to a Commissioner, who corresponds direct with the Provincial Government, he has control in every department of administration, and is the responsible head of his jurisdiction. There are 267 Districts in British India.

There are separate High Courts for both civil and criminal cases in Madras, Bengal, Bombay, Bihar and Orissa, and in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, the Punjab and Burma, and a Chief Court in Oudh. Appeals may be carried to the English Privy Council. The Central Provinces and Berar, Coorg, Sind, the North-West Frontier Province and British Baluchistan have each a Judicial Commissioner's Court.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS AND ADMINISTRATIONS.*

Under the Government of India Act, 1919, and rules made thereunder, the local governments are given a large measure of independence of the Supreme Government. The Act distinguishes the functions of local governments and local legislatures of the Provinces from the functions of the Governor-General in Council and the Indian Legislature. The Supreme Government is given authority over certain subjects, classified as "Central," such as defence, political relations, railways, tariffs, &c. Other administrative heads, classified as "Provincial"—viz., local self-government, public health, education, public works, water supply, land revenue administration, famine relief, agriculture, excise, administration of justice, &c., are wholly or partly handed over to Provincial Governments with responsibility, subject to certain limitations, within their own areas, for administering them. In the ten major or "Governors' Provinces"—i.e., Madras, Bengal, Bombay, the United Provinces, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces, the Punjab, Assam, Burma, and the North-West Frontier Province—provincial subjects are further divided into "reserved" and "transferred subjects," the administration of, and responsibility for, which rests with the Governor and his Executive Council and with the Governor and Ministers respectively. Ministers are chosen from among the elected members of the Legislative Council by, and hold office during the pleasure of, the Governor. They are directly responsible to the Legislative Council for the administration of the "transferred" subjects, but can be overruled by the Governor if he considers their policy inconsistent with the discharge of his responsibilities.

The Act legislates for a transition from a bureaucratic to a self-government system and for the gradual transfer of more subjects to the Ministers. Matters of departmental or minor importance are dealt with, as a rule, by the Governor, his Council, and the Ministers sitting in conclave, but the decision on reserved subjects rests with the Governor in Council, and that on transferred subjects with the Ministers, subject to the Governor's intervention and control.

Legislative Councils have an elected majority, and normally a life of three years, but may be sooner dissolved by the Governor. The previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council is required to the introduction of certain classes of Provincial Bills. The Governor has powers of veto in regard to proposed legislation affecting the safety or tranquility of his Province or any part of it, or of another Province, and can secure legislation essential to the discharge of his responsibilities for reserved subjects. Such Bills must be sent to the Governor-General for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, but in emergencies the Governor-General may assent to them, subject to disallowance by His Majesty in Council. Governor has powers of assenting to, of withholding assent to, or of returning for reconsideration, other Bills, but must in certain circumstances send them for consideration to the Governor-General, who may reserve them for His Majesty's pleasure.

Provincial Budgets are voted on by the Legislative Councils, but the Governor has power to act, in respect of a demand for reserved subjects, notwithstanding a refusal or a reduction of grants, if the demand is essential to the discharge of his responsibilities for the subject, and in cases of emergency he can authorise such expenditure as may be necessary for the safety or tranquillity of his Province. Certain heads of expenditure do not require an annual vote: a deadlock is thus avoided in case of irresponsible action by the Legislative Council in the matter of supply.

Of the members nominated to the Indian Legislature and Provincial Legislative Councils some represent certain communities and interests. Males over 21 (28 in the case of Burma) years of age possessing certain qualifications (residence within the constituency and the possession of certain property qualifications, the payment of land revenue, rent, local taxes, income-tax or municipal rates) are eligible for the franchise. Women are not qualified for registration, but the disqualification may be removed in certain circumstances in any Province, or in all. The franchise is low, and gives the vote to small cultivators and some wage earners. The electorate of the fourth general election comprised over 8,744,802 persons, of which nearly 398,000 were women.

(1) MADRAS (area, 142,277 sq. miles; pop. 45,740,107) was not only the oldest, but the most important of the three original Presidencies before the conquest of Bengal, though it was small in extent until the annexation of the 'Carnatic' in 1801. With a coast-line of 1,750 miles the province has no good natural harbour, but an artificial harbour has been constructed at Madras at great expense. The province is not naturally fertile, though irrigation systems in the river deltas have enormously increased the produce of the soil, and have yielded a large profit to the State. Rice, millet, and other food-grains, oilseeds, cotton, indigo, spices, tobacco, tea, &c., are cultivated. Manganese ore is mined and exported. Madras is served by the South Indian and by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railways, the latter connecting it with Bengal on the north and Bombay on the west. About 88 per cent. of the people are Hindus. There are 1,774,226 native Christians, mainly Roman Catholics. Many natives of the Presidency emigrate to Burma and Ceylon, some only temporarily. The languages principally spoken are Tamil, Telugu and Malayalam. Madras (182,018) and Trichinopoly (142,847) famous for their Hindu temples, are the chief cities after the capital.

(-) BOMBAY.—The Island of BOMBAY was part of the dowry of the Infanta of Portugal (1662), and was made over by Charles II. to the East India Company in 1668. The greater part of the present territory was obtained by annexations from the Mahrattas, and by the lapse of the Satara State. Sind was conquered in 1843. The province (including Sind), contains 123,579 square miles (about equal in size to the British Isles), with a population of 21,879,123. Eastern Sind is desert. The administration of Sind (which occupies about two-fifths of the Presidency) is in some respects separate. About 76 per cent. of the people of the Presidency are Hindus, and 20 per cent. Muhammadans. The Parsis (89,544), who are very prominent in trade, are mainly found in Bombay. Marathi, Gujarati, Sindhi, Kanarese and Western Hindi are the principal languages. Millet and other food-grains and oil seeds are cultivated. Cotton is largely produced for export and for manufacture in the constantly extending cotton-mills of Bombay and Ahmedabad. The chief railway systems are the Bombay, Baroda and Central India with the lines worked by it to the north, and the Great Indian Peninsula (with the Indian Midland) eastwards; south-eastwards is the Madras and Southern Mahratta system, while Karachi (Sind) is the port for the extensive North-Western Railway system. Ahmedabad (313,789), Poona (250,187), Sholapur (144,654), Surat and Karachi (263,565), the capital and chief port of Sind, are the most important cities.

(3) BENGAL (area of newly-constituted province, 77,521 sq. miles, with population of 50,114,002) was placed under a Lieutenant-Governor in 1854. The old Bengal Presidency included practically all Northern and Central India, but subsequently the province consisted of part of Bengal proper with Bihar, Orissa, and Chota-Nagpur. Fifteen districts of Eastern Bengal were detached in 1905 and combined with Assam, while one district from the Central Provinces was added to Bengal. This partition was revoked in 1911, and Bengal now includes five Bengal-speaking divisions. About 55 per cent. of the population are Muhammadans and 43 per cent. Hindus. The principal languages are Bengali and Hindustani. For the most part the province is a great alluvial plain, very populous and productive. The chief products are rice, jute, oilseeds, sugar, tobacco, silk, tea, and coal. The East Indian Railway is the great artery of the Ganges Valley. The Eastern Bengal Railway, running north, and the Beugul-Nagpur, south, from Calcutta, are also important. Important cities are Dacca (1,28,518), now the second capital, and Howrah (224,873), a great jute-manufacturing centre adjoining Calcutta.

(4) The UNITED PROVINCES OF AGRA and OUDH, called "North-Western Provinces and Oudh" until 1902 (area, 106,248 sq. miles; pop. 48,408,763), forms the upper part of the great Ganges plain to the W. of Bengal, lying between the Himalayas and the hilly border of the central plateau. Originally (excluding Oudh) it formed part of the Bengal Presidency, but in 1835 a separate administration was formed under a Lieutenant-Governor. OUDH was annexed in 1856 and placed under a Chief Commissioner. After 1877 the two administrations were combined. The chief products are wheat, rice, barley, pulse, tobacco, millet, cotton, sugar, and oilseeds. About 85 per cent. of the population are Hindus and nearly 15 per cent. Muhammadans. Western Hindi is the chief language. The province is served by the East Indian, Oudh and Rohilkhand, and Rohilkhand and Kumaon Railways. Among the important cities may be named the ancient city of Agra (229,764), containing the Taj Mahal and other great works of architecture, the sacred Hindu city of Benares (205,315), the great manufacturing centre, Cawnpore (243,775), Lucknow (274,659), Bareilly (144,031), and Allahabad (183,674).

(5) The PUNJAB (area, 99,265 sq. miles; pop. 23,580,851) occupies the N.W. angle of the great northern plain of India, and derives its name from the "Five Rivers" which, descending from the Himalayas traverse the plain and unite in the Indus. It was annexed in 1849. Up to 1853 it was under a Board of Administration, who were then superseded by a Chief Commissioner, who was made Lieutenant-Governor in 1859, when also the Delhi Division was transferred to the Punjab from the North-West Provinces. The Punjab possesses rich deposits of rock-salt, which, with wheat and other grains and cotton, form the principal exports. Timber is scarce. 57% of the population are Muhammadans, and 27% are Hindus. The Sikhs number about 4,072,000 in the Punjab and Punjab States, to which they are mainly confined. Punjab, Western Punjab and Western Hindi are the chief languages. The various branches of the North-Western and Southern Punjab Railways serve the province. Amritsar, the sacred city of the Sikhs, has 264,840 people.

(6) BURMA is bounded by Tibet on the north, by China, French Indo-China, and Siam on the east, and by Assam, Bengal and the sea on the west. It is the largest province, having a total area of 233,492 sq. miles, about equal to Spain and Portugal, with a population of 14,667,146. These figures include the Shan States and Chin Hills. Many immigrants came from Bengal, Madras, and China. Tenasserim and Aitkan were annexed after the first Burmese war in 1825, Pegu after the second war in 1852, and Upper Burma and the Shan States after the third war in 1885. The Shan States form a minor administration distinct from that of Burma though under the same Executive Government and not subject to the jurisdiction of the Burma Legislature. The province is thinly peopled; but, owing to remarkable prosperity, the population has increased 11 per cent. in 20 years. The inhabitants belong to numerous tribes, who are distinguished by a variety of manners, languages, and religions. Burmese and Shangle are the chief languages. Buddhism, now almost confined to Burma, so far as the Indian Empire is concerned, is the religion of 85 per cent. of the people. The Burmese are much better educated than the natives of India proper, education being conducted by Buddhist monks. The delta country of Lower Burma is flat, but above Prome there is upland, hilly country. Rice, the main product of the delta region, is largely milled at Rangoon and exported. The principal export after rice is teak, which comes from the extensive forests of Burma and the Shan States, and overland from Siam. Burma is fairly rich in minerals, especially petroleum, rubies, jadestone, and wolfram. The Irrawaddy and its chief tributaries, the Chindwin, the Shweli, and the Myittha, form important waterways. The main stream is navigable beyond Bhamo, 900 miles from its mouth, and carries much traffic. There are considerable exports by land to Western China. The Burma Railways have reached Myittha, on the Upper Irrawaddy, while a branch has been built to the Shan States, which lie in the Salween basin.

(7) BIHAR AND ORISSA (area of new province, 83,054 sq. miles, with pop. of 37,677,576). This province, which came into existence on April 1, 1912, comprises Bihar, Orissa and Chota-Nagpur, hitherto forming part of Bengal, as well as the Samalpur district transferred to Pegu from the Central Provinces in 1905. Bihar is liable to extreme temperatures. The population is exceedingly dense. Orissa and Chota-Nagpur are ill-watered and liable to drought. Orissa has a variety of races and a considerable seaboard. The highlands of Chota-Nagpur are thinly peopled and contain a large aboriginal population. The Patna High Court came into existence on March 1, 1916. Bihar and Orissa yields the greater part of India's output of coal and mica. Rice, wheat, oilseeds, sugar and tobacco are cultivated. 82% of the people are Hindus, and the great Hindu temple of Juggernaut is at Puri, in Orissa. There is a variety of languages, Hindustani (mainly Bihari), and including other forms of Hindi, as well as Urdu) and Oriya being the chief. The language spoken by the majority of the population is Bihari. The railway systems are the East Indian, Bengal and North-Western, and Bengal-Nagpur.

(8) THE CENTRAL PROVINCES and BERAR (area, Central Provinces alone, 82,149 sq. miles; pop. 12,055,885). The Central Provinces were formed in 1861 out of territory taken from the North-West Provinces and Madras, but originally belonging to the Mahratta Kingdom of Nagpur. The country, hilly and forest-clad, contains a large population of aboriginal tribes. The people are mostly Hindus, and they speak mainly Western Hindi and Marathi. The province, which is served by the Indian Midland, Great Indian Peninsula, and the Bengal-Nagpur Railways, possesses coal and manganese ore, and produces rice, wheat, millet, pulse, oilseeds and cotton. There are cotton mills at Nagpur.

Since October 1, 1902, BERAR has been amalgamated with the Central Provinces. Berar (area, 17,789 sq. miles; pop. 3,441,838), which lies to the north of Hyderabad, was placed in British hands by the Nizam in 1853, in payment of arrears, and its revenues were charged with the future cost of the Hyderabad Contingent (which was in 1903 incorporated in the Indian Army). In 1902 Berar was leased in perpetuity to the Government of India on payment of £167,000 a year to the Nizam. Berar is purely agricultural. It is very fertile, and yields cotton, millet, oilseeds, &c. The chief language is Marathi, and most of the people are Hindus.

 (9) ASSAM (area, 55,014 sq. miles; pop. 8,622,251) was constituted a separate administration in 1874 out of certain Bengal districts, most of which had been ceded by Burma in 1825. It was combined in 1905 with part of Bengal to form a new province, Eastern Bengal and Assam, but again became a separate administration in 1912. A range of mountains divides Assam into the Surma and Brahmaputra valleys, of which the chief towns are Sylhet and Gauhati respectively. The people are mainly Hindus and Muhammadans, and the chief languages are Bengali and Assamese. The Assam-Bengal railway serves the province. Tea and rice are the principal products. Assam contains nearly 900,000 immigrants from other parts of India, chiefly coolies for tea-gardens. Seat of Government, Shillong (pop. 21,300).

(12) THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE was constituted in 1901 by the transfer from the Punjab of portions of the districts of Hazara, Peshawar, Kohat, Bannu and Dera Ismail Khan (area, 13,528 sq. miles; pop. 2,425,076, partly estimated). It was constituted a Governor's Province on April 18, 1922. Attached to the Province are the five trans-border political agencies of Malakand, Khyber, Kurram, Tochi and Wao, together with tribal areas under the control of the Deputy Commissioners of the five settled districts first above mentioned. The officer in charge is directly responsible to the Government of India. The people are chiefly Muhammadans, and the chief languages are Pashtu and Western Punjabi. The province produces wheat, barley and other grains, oilseeds, cotton, &c. It has a considerable trade with Afghanistan.

(13) BRITISH BALUCHISTAN (area, 54,228 sq. miles; pop. 463,508) was constituted a separate administration in 1888, under the Governor-General's Agent in Baluchistan, who also controls the affairs of the native States of Baluchistan up to the Persian frontier. The districts it comprises (Sibi, Quetta, Pishin, Thal-Chotiali, Nushki, Zhob, Chagai, Nasirabad and the Bolan) were acquired partly from Afghanistan by the treaty of Gundamak (1879), partly from the Khan of Kalat by arrangement. Baluchistan consists largely of mountains and sandy deserts, and is sparsely populated. A large part of the people lead a pastoral, nomad life. In religion they are Sunni Muhammadans, and Pashto is the chief language. The Afghan-Baluch frontier was demarcated in 1896-7. To Chaman, on this frontier, a railway runs via Quetta and is continued to Mithjawa. The Khan of Kalat, the head of a loose confederacy, receives about £19,000 per annum for quit-rents, subsidy, &c. British troops occupy Quetta, commanding the Bolan Pass, and have the treaty right to occupy any other position.

(14) DELHI.—This province (area, 573 sq. miles; pop. 636,246) was constituted on October 1, 1922, out of the Punjab division of Delhi, in pursuance of the policy announced by H.M. the King-Emperor at the Delhi Durbar in December, 1921, to move the capital of India and its seat of Government from Calcutta to Delhi. (Pop. 447,442.)

Chief Commissioner, J. N. G. Johnson, C.I.E. (March, 1922) Rs. 3,000

(15) THE ANDAMANS and NICOBARS (area, 3,143 sq. miles; pop. 29,463) form a chain of islands in the eastern part of the Bay of Bengal. Since 1858 Port Blair, in South Andaman, has been used as an Indian penal settlement. Much valuable timber, worked by convict labour, is obtained. The Nicobar Islands, almost due south of the Andamans, were first occupied by the British in 1869. They comprise 21 (area 635 sq. miles) islands. The principal products are coco-nuts.

Chief Commissioner, J. W. Smyth, C.I.E. Rs. 3,000

The Laccadive Islands comprise 14 islands (nine inhabited), distant 200 miles from the Malabar coast of the Madras Presidency, in which they are included. (Pop. 16,046 in 1921.)

ADEN AND PERIM.—From old time the peninsula of Aden, situated on the southern coast of Arabia and lying on the Red Sea trade-route between Europe and the East, has been an important centre. Its trade decayed after the Portuguese discovery of the Cape route, but with the opening of the Suez Canal it regained more than its old importance. It was occupied by the British in 1839. It is now a great oil bunkering and coaling station and port of call, and an emporium for the trade of the adjacent African and Arabian coasts. It is the only fortified port between Egypt and Bombay, and may be regarded as an outpost of the Indian Empire. It has an area of 75 square miles and a population (according to the census of 1931) of 51,478. It is a free port. The chief industries are salt and cigarette manufacture. The traffic in arms and ammunition is subject to special regulations. The total sea-borne trade in 1931-32 was £6,894,600. In 1931-32, 1,483 vessels called at Aden and 298 at Perim. The British Government has treaty engagements with, and subsidises, the neighbouring Arab tribes, both inland and along the coast (Hadhranaut), from the Straits of Bah-el-Mandeb to Muscat territory at Ras Saïr.

Aden was separated from the Bombay Presidency and formed into a Province under a Chief Commissioner under the direct control of the Government of India from April 1, 1932.

Perim—a small unfortified island with an area of 5 square miles and a population of 1,700 serving as a bunkering station at the southern entrance to the Red Sea, was occupied in 1857 and is administratively attached to Aden.

Aden: Chief Commissioner and Resident and Commander-in-Chief, Lt.-Col. B. R. Reilly, C.I.E., O.B.E......per annum Rs. 3,500.

In 1834 the East India Company occupied Sokotra (area, 1,400 sq. miles), 250 miles from Cape Guardafui, which has a pastoral Muhammadan population roughly estimated at 12,000, mainly Arabs. A formal protectorate was established in 1886. The Shukh receives a small subsidy, and is pledged not to cede the island to any foreign power. The Kuria Muria Islands, to the south of Oman, which have been a British possession since 1854 and which were formerly attached to the Aden Residency, were transferred to the control of the British Resident in the Persian Gulf in 1931.

The island of Kamaran in the Red Sea about 200 mile north of Perim was taken by the British from the Turks in 1915, and is administered by the Government of India through a Civil Administrator under the control of the Chief Commissioner of Aden. It has an area of 22 square miles and a population of about 2,200. A quarantine station for pilgrims travelling to Mecca from the East is maintained on the island under the joint control of the Government of India and the Government of the Dutch East Indies.

Civil Administrator, Captain G. V. Wickham.

INDIAN APPOINTMENTS.

THE higher civil administration of British India is recruited from four sources—1. Open competitive examination in England and India. 2. The Indian Army. 3. The patronage of the Secretary of State. 4. The patronage of the Local Governments.

The Civil Service of India.—The annual examination ordinarily commences in London July-August. Candidates must be over 21 and under 24 on Aug. 1 in the year of examination. Application for permission to compete must be made on or before May 8, on forms that can be obtained from the Secretary, Civil Service Commission, London, W. 1. Examination fee, £8. Selected candidates are on probation in England for one or two years, and receive an allowance of £270 if of European domicile, or £375 if of Indian domicile, if they pass their probation at one of the Universities or Colleges approved by the Secretary of State, fulfil the requirements of the authorities, and show satisfactory progress. A final examination is held in Indian law, language, &c. A first-class passage to India will be engaged for selected candidates. In case of failure to pass the final examination, or to execute the usual covenant and to proceed to India, all allowances received must be refunded. The salary of a covenanted civil servant commences at Rs. 7,500* a year. The Regulations for competitive examinations to be held in India can be obtained from the India Office, London.

The Indian Army.—Copies of a pamphlet giving full information regarding conditions of service may be obtained, on application, from the Military Department of the India Office. The following is a summary of the principal points. Candidates for commissions in the Indian Army are required to pass the Army Entrance Examination held by the Civil Service Commissioners. Candidates must be between 18 and 19 years of age (in the case of Indian candidates the age limits are 18 and 20 years). Of the cadetships for the Indian Army offered, some are allotted to King's India Cadets nominated by the Secretary of State for India; the remainder being offered to candidates in the order of their passing the entrance examination. A few direct appointments to the Unattached List for the Indian Army are made by the War Office from candidates nominated by the principal Universities in the United Kingdom. A few direct appointments are also offered to officers of the Territorial Army and Supplementary Reserve between the ages of 21 and 25 who undertake the final examination of the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, under arrangements made by the War Office. At the end of the period of training at Sandhurst, cadets recommended for commissions are gazetted to the Unattached List for the Indian Army. On appointment to an Indian regiment, an officer's initial pay is at the present moment roughly Rs. 480 (£36) per month. Regulations and examination papers can be obtained from His Majesty's Stationery Office, Imperial House, Kingsway, W.C.

Indian Police Force (Higher Grade).—A competitive examination is usually held in London and other centres in June of each year in conjunction with the Army and Air Force Examination. The standard of the competitive examination for admission to the Indian Police Service is such that competitors whose school education ended before they reached the age of 17 can have little prospect of qualifying for appointment. A fee of £4 is required from candidates examined in London, and a fee of £5 from those examined in other centres.

* The rates of pay quoted are subject to such reduction, not exceeding 10 per cent., as the Secretary of State in Council may decide to make in consequence of the state of financial emergency at present prevailing in India.

save as provided in the regulations a candidate must be a European British subject. Indian and Burmese candidates are eligible if they have been resident in the United Kingdom for not less than five years. Candidates must be above 19 and under 21 years of age on Aug. 1; must be unmarried, and if they marry before reaching India must forfeit their appointments. Applications to compete at the examination must be made on forms to be obtained from the India Office, Whitehall, London. Successful candidates are required to undergo a strict medical examination; are examined as to their ability to ride. Free passage to India is granted to probationers. Their initial pay is Rs. 350 per month, plus an over-seas pay of Rs. 200 per month in the case of probationers with non-Indian domicile. The pay proceeds by annual increments to Rs. 700, plus over-seas pay of £30 a month, and thence to Rs. 1,350 per month, with over-seas pay of the same amount, subject to efficiency bars, with prospects of promotion to higher posts.*

The patronage of the Secretary of State for India is not extensive. Appointments of Chaplains of the Church of England and the Church of Scotland to the Indian Ecclesiastical establishments are normally made, on the occurrence of vacancies, by the Secretary of State for India from amongst candidates nominated by the Indian Chaplains Board of the Church of England and the General Assembly's Committee on Indian Churches respectively. Church of England candidates must be between 27 and 34 years of age, and Church of Scotland candidates must be under 34 years of age. On appointment chaplains receive a salary of Rs. 600 per month, rising by annual increments to Rs. 1,050 per month, plus over-seas pay of £30 a month.*

Indian Railway Service of Engineers.—Recruitment for this Service is at present suspended, and it is not known whether, or under what conditions, it is likely to be resumed.

Indian Forest Service.—Recruitment for this Service is at present suspended, and it is not known whether, or under what conditions, it is likely to be resumed. In Bombay and Burma, the Forest Service is under the control of the Local Government, by whom appointments are made. Any recruitment of candidates from Europe is undertaken by the High Commissioner for India, India House, Aldwych, London, W.C.2, to whose offices enquiries should be addressed.

Further information regarding these and other Indian appointments can be obtained on application, from the Services and General Department, India Office, Whitehall, London, S.W. 1. Pay, Leave, and Pension Regulations of the Indian Services are contained in the Civil Service Regulations and other Statutory Rules, which can be consulted at the India Office.

THE FINANCES OF INDIA (CENTRAL GOVERNMENT AND PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS) FOR THE YEAR ENDED MARCH 31, 1932.

(In lakhs of rupees.)*

SEPARATION OF CENTRAL AND PROVINCIAL FINANCES

The Government of India Act, 1919, was designed inter alia to secure a greater measure of independence for Provincial Governments, and to this end provision was made, in the Act and in Rules subsequently published under authority of the Act, for the delimitation of the functions of Government as between the Government of India and the chief Provincial Governments, and for the definite assignments to each of these Provincial Governments of specific revenues of their own. Effect has been given to these measures of devolution in the ten "Governor's Provinces," viz.: Bengal, Madras, Bombay, the United Provinces, the Punjab, Bihar and Orissa, the Central Provinces, Assam, Burma, the Province of Coorg and the North-West Frontier Province†. As regards these provinces the functions of Government have been classified as either "central subjects" or "provincial subjects." A general authority to control all matters coming under the latter head, subject to certain expressed provisions, is devolved upon the Local Governments concerned.

The sources of revenue available to Local Governments for the purpose of defraying their administrative charges consist, in the main, of the receipts from those provincial subjects which are revenue-producing, the principal heads being Land Revenue, Irrigation, Stamp Duties and Excise. In addition, a local Government is given a small share in any expansion of Income Tax (otherwise a "central" source of revenue) that may be due to an increase of the total assessed incomes within the Province over that of 1920-21.

When the division of the sources of revenue was made between the Central and Provincial Governments, it was realized that the Central Government would be left insufficiently provided. It was therefore arranged that an annual contribution should be made by eight of the local Governments to the Central Government. The annual contributions fixed at the outset aggregated 983 lakhs of rupees. They were not, except in case of emergency and with the sanction of the Secretary of State, to be subject to increase, and should reduction of the aggregate be found possible, reductions were to be made in fixed proportions from the quotas of the several Provinces. The general policy pursued has involved a progressive reduction of the provincial contributions with a view to their ultimate cessation. The Budget for 1928-29 provided for the remission of those portions of the contributions which had not been permanently remitted at the close of the previous year.

The revised financial arrangements outlined above came into force from April 1, 1927, as from that date all "provincial" revenue and expenditure ceased to be included in the estimates and accounts of the Central Government. In the case of Coorg the separation was made on April 1, 1924.

* A lakh = Rs. 100,000. (See p. 731 for the Indian system of notation.)

† See p. 726 as to the financial arrangements sanctioned on the constitution of the North-West Frontier Province as a "Governor's Province."

INDIAN SYSTEM OF NOTATION.—The Indian numerical notation system differs from the European. Large numbers are punctuated as crores and lakhs and not in hundreds, thousands and millions. A lakh is one hundred thousand (written out as 1,00,000), and a crore is one hundred lakhs or ten millions (1,00,00,000). Thus, 1,68,00,000 is read as 1 crore 68 lakhs. A lakh of rupees (Rs. 1,00,000), may be read as equal to £7,500 at 13½ rupees—the statutory rate adopted for conversion in this article. The rupee is divided into 16 annas and at 13½ rupees to £1 the anna is equivalent to 1½d. The anna is subdivided into 32 pies (¼d. approximate value).

NET REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE OF THE CENTRAL GOVERNMENT.

The figures of Gross Revenue given above include the net receipts of railways and other commercial undertakings without any deduction on account of interest charges, the total receipts from the sale of opium, and the receipts of certain spending departments; while the figures of Gross Expenditure include the interest charges of commercial undertakings, and the cost of cultivation and manufacture of opium. This method of compilation may cause the revenue available for administrative purposes and the expenditure on such purposes to appear greater than they really are. A statement of the net revenue and expenditure of the Central Government for 1931-32 is therefore given in the table below, which shows the net revenue derived from commercial undertakings, after deducting all expenditure including interest charges, and net figures under other heads of revenue and expenditure obtained by deducting (1) the cost of cultivation and manufacture of opium from sale receipts, and (2) the receipts of the spending departments from the gross expenditure incurred by them. The cost of the establishments maintained for the collection of revenue is not shown as a deduction from revenue, but as a separate head of expenditure.

BURDEN OF TAXATION.—If taxation proper be divided among the population of British India, without allowing for certain portions of Salt, Excise, and Customs duties which fall on persons in the Indian States, the burden is estimated at Rs. 3.8 per head, or, if land revenue (which is akin to rent) be added, Rs. 5.0 per head.

DEBT AND ASSETS.—On March 31, 1933, the public debt of the Central Government amounted to Rs 510 crores (£383 million) in India and £380 million in England. The figures include debt incurred on behalf of Provincial Governments, the debenture stock of various railways taken over on the transfer of the lines, and the capital value of liabilities undergoing redemption by way of terminable annuities. The interest-bearing obligations and certain interest-bearing assets of the Government of India amounted to Rs 705 crores (£529 million) in India and £380 million in England. The excess of interest-bearing obligations over interest-yielding assets amounts to Rs. 207 crores (£155 million). Apart from Rs. 692 crores in cash, bullion and securities held on Treasury Account, the Central Government held on March 31, 1933, £40 million in the Gold Standard Reserve.

LAND REVENUE.—This is the oldest and the most important source of revenue. The State is the paramount landlord in India, and the land revenue is the State's share in the rent of the soil. In most of Bengal and Bihar and Orissa, about one-fourth of Madras, and part of Assam the land revenue has been permanently fixed; elsewhere generally the assessments, or settlements, are revised periodically (usually once in 20 or 30 years). The nature of the settlements varies in different provinces. In parts of Bengal and Bombay, the greater part of the United Provinces, the Punjab, the N.W. Frontier Province, and the Central Provinces the settlement is with large proprietors or proprietary village communities (zamindari), and the estate is assessed as a whole. Elsewhere (especially in Burma, Berar, Bombay and Sind, Assam, and most of Madras) the rayatwari tenure prevails, and each rayat, or peasant proprietor, holds direct from the State. In temporarily settled zamindari districts the land revenue usually amounts to about 50 per cent of the rental paid to the landlord by the cultivating tenant, while in temporarily settled rayatwari districts the revenue varies from 20 per cent of the gross produce down to much smaller proportions, averaging about 8 per cent. Private improvements are exempt from assessment. The gross land revenue paid to the State (Central and Provincial Governments) in 1931-32 amounted to Rs. 3,299 lakhs (£24,743,000).

THE OPIUM REVENUE.—Poppy may now be grown only in parts of the United Provinces and in the Central Indian (Malwa) States. Except in these States the manufacture is a Government monopoly. Bengal opium is either sold direct to the Governments of Borneo, Netherlands Indies, Hong Kong, Straits Settlements, &c. or issued to the Excise Department for local consumption. In addition a substantial quantity is supplied to the Medical Department for medical purposes, and by export to the United Kingdom for sale to chemists. The gross revenue from Bengal opium, including the value of opium sold by the Excise Department for consumption in India, was £1,556,000 in 1931-32. The expenses of production, &c., were £598,000. Formerly, most of the opium exported from India was consumed in China; but the Government of India, in furtherance of the efforts of the Chinese Government to suppress the growth and consumption of opium in China, decided in 1907 to reduce progressively the amount of Indian opium exported to China, and as from March 31, 1917, export of Indian opium to China is prohibited. In 1926 the Government of India announced its intention to restrict the export of opium except for medicinal purposes.

EXCISE.—Licence fees and duties are levied on the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, opium, and other drugs. The revenue amounted to Rs. 1,486 lakhs (£11,143,000) gross in 1931-32 (Central and Provincial Governments).

CUSTOMS.—The net receipts amounted to Rs. 4,644 lakhs (£34,827,000) in 1931-32. (For tariff see p. 735.) The export duty on rice yielded 93 lakhs (£695,700). The export duty on jute produced 309 lakhs (£2,316,500). The duty on motor spirit and kerosene amounted to 590 lakhs (£4,425,000). The protective special duties on iron, steel, &c., yielded 494 lakhs (£3,707,000).

INCOME TAX is levied on non-agricultural incomes at the following rates.—

* 12 pices = 1 anna 16 annas = 1 rupee; 12 rupees = £1 (statutory rate). A lakh is 100,000 rupees.

In the case of companies and registered firms, whatever the total income, the rate is $3\frac{1}{2}$ pies in the rupee.

Super-tax is leviable in addition to ordinary income tax on incomes of Hindu undivided families at rates ranging from 1 anna $6\frac{1}{2}$ pies to 7 annas $9\frac{1}{2}$ pies in the rupee on incomes over Rs. 75,000, and on the taxable incomes of companies above Rs. 50,000 at a flat rate of 1 anna 3 pies in the rupee. In the case of individuals, unregistered firms, and other associations of individuals not being a registered firm or a company, the rate ranges from $1\frac{1}{2}$ pies to 7 annas $9\frac{1}{2}$ pies on incomes in excess of Rs. 30,000. Rs. 1,757 lakhs (£13,177,000) were received from taxes on income in 1931-32.

STAMPS.—Stamps yielded 1,197 lakhs gross (£8,978,000) in 1931-32. About two-thirds of the revenue is from court fees and one-third from commercial stamps.

SALT.—The salt duty was reduced from Rs. $\frac{1}{2}$ to Rs. $\frac{1}{4}$ a maund (82½ lb) in 1903, to Rs. $\frac{1}{8}$ in 1905, and to R. 1 in 1907. It was increased to Rs. $\frac{1}{4}$ on March 1, 1916, to Rs. $\frac{1}{2}$ from March 1, 1923, reduced to Rs. $\frac{1}{4}$ from March 1, 1924, and raised to R. 1 As. 9 in 1931. Rs. 872 lakhs (£6,539,000) were received from salt in 1931-32.

FORESTS.—About 107,000 square miles of forests are reserved and scientifically worked by the State, while about 142,000 square miles besides are under State control. The revenue from forests amounted to Rs. 400 lakhs (£3,000,000) in 1931-32. A third of the revenue comes from Burma.

POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS.—The Post Office in 1931-32 handled 1,175½ million of letters, post-cards, newspapers, &c., and issued 38 million of money orders. Inland letter rates are the lowest in the world. The length of telegraph wire, including cable, in India on March 31, 1932, was 532,283 miles, and the number of paid messages sent in 1931-32 was over 17 million. The capital outlay amounted to Rs. 1,563 lakhs (£11,721,000) at the end of 1931-32. The Indian Postal and Telegraph services were amalgamated on April 1, 1914. The combined services showed for the year a loss of 93·8 lakhs (£703,000), a reduction of nearly 40 lakhs as compared with 1930-31.

RAILWAYS.—Nearly all the railways in India are owned by the State and administered by a Railway Board, though many are leased to and worked by companies. The mileage open for traffic on March 31, 1932, was 42,813·07 of the mileage open about 50 per cent was on the standard gauge (5½ ft.), and about 42 per cent on the metre gauge. On March 31, 1932, the total capital at charge was Rs. 8·6 crores (£657,255,000). The net earnings of the railways in 1931-32 amounted to 2,812 lakhs (£21,086,000), showing a percentage of 3·2 on total capital at charge. The number of passengers "originating" was 506 million, and the goods traffic amounted to 74·6 million tons. Rates are very low, third-class passengers travelling on the average about four miles for a penny. The net gain to the Central Government from "Budget Lines" administered from funds under its direct control was 5·4 crores in 1931-32. The payment of the contribution has been held in abeyance until the return of prosperous years. The total capital expenditure on State and other railways in 1931-32 was 837 lakhs (£6,780,000).

IRRIGATION.—The total capital outlay on State irrigation works up to March 31, 1931, was £102,331,000, which, apart from the advantages to cultivators and protection against famine, yielded a profit to the State, after payment of interest charges, of about £1,276,000. The area irrigated by Government irrigation works, excluding the Indian States, in 1930-31 amounted to 31 million acres, while the annual value of the crops raised amounted to over 1½ times the total capital expended on the works. Two-fifths of the irrigation revenue comes from the Punjab.

HOME CHARGES.—The net expenditure in England, chargeable to Revenue, amounted in 1931-32 to £26,997,000. The main items were:—Interest on Railway Debt and Annuities, £9,573,000; Interest on Ordinary Debt and other obligations, £5,377,000; management of debt, £268,000; interest assumed in respect of British 5 per cent War Loan, £418,000; Stores, £1,321,000, of which £1,211,000 was for Marine and Military stores, payments for British forces, troop service, &c., £1,772,300; Army non-effective charges, £3,408,000; Civil annuities, pensions, &c., £1,359,000; Punglough payments, civil and military, £2,042,000; home administration (£435,000 less £105,500 contributed by H. M. Treasury); Aden contribution, £137,000. The expenditure of the Indian Government in England is met by bills or telegraphic transfers drawn on India by the Secretary of State, and sold by him in London for sterling.

CURRENCY.—The principal coin in use is the silver rupee, containing 165 grains of fine silver and 15 grains of alloy, and weighing in all 18 grains 110 of 1 tola. Up to 1893 the Indian Mints were open by law for the unrestricted coinage of silver into rupees. Owing, however, to the almost continuous fall in the value of the rupee from 1871 to 1893, legislation in the latter year closed the mints to the public, with a view to eventually fixing the exchange. For a time the rupee continued to fall, but subsequently it rose, and between 1898 and 1916, was practically stable at 12·47. The Act of 1899 made the British sovereign legal tender in India at the ratio of 15 rupees to the sovereign, the rupee, however, remaining also legal tender to any amount, but the ratio was altered to 10 rupees in 1920, and to 13½ rupees in 1927. The Gold Standard Reserve has been built up out of the profit from the coinage of rupees. The principal objects for which it is maintained are (1) to provide funds from which the Secretary of State can finance his requirements when remittance of funds from India through the usual market channels cannot conveniently be arranged, and (2) to furnish resources against which sterling drafts may, if necessity arises, be sold by the Government of India to remitters in India. In recent years the Reserve has been maintained at £40,000,000. The total receipts from profit on coinage, interest and discount, and profit by exchange up to March 31, 1933, amounted to £60,356,090. Of this sum £1,123,655 has been used for capital expenditure on railways; £2,886,217 has been transferred to the Paper Currency Reserve in reduction of created rupee securities, £14,626,619 has been transferred to Revenue, and the remainder credited to the Gold Standard Reserve. On March 31, 1933, the investments of this fund in sterling securities amounted to £26,220,769 (estimated value), while £897 was held in cash in England, £2,152,324 was deposited in gold at the Bank of England and £11,626,000 held in gold in India. India has a paper currency. The 1, 2½, 5, 10, 50, and 100 rupee notes are legal tender everywhere in India, but other notes only within their circles of issue. In 1928 a branch of the Royal Mint was established at Bombay for the minting of gold coins.

ARMY.—The sanctioned strength of the Army in India is: British troops and officers, 68,900; Indian troops and officers, 155,200; Army in India Reserve of Officers, 1,600; Indian Army Reserve, 40,000; Auxiliary Force, 36,000; Indian State Forces, 41,700; and Indian Territorial Force, 19,000. For police duties and frontier service the regular military is supplemented by frontier militia and local levies. During the period (1902-9) when Lord Kitchener was Commander-in-Chief, considerable changes were effected in the organisation and training of the Army. On June 1, 1907, there was a redistribution of the Army of India. The net military expenditure (including marine) has risen from about £20,000,000 in 1912-13 to 5,176 lakhs (£38,820,000) in 1931-32. The estimated net expenditure for 1933-34 is 4,620 lakhs (£34,650,000). During the Great War of 1914-18 the Government of India recruited on a voluntary basis over 877,000 combatants and 563,000 non-combatants, giving a grand total of about 1·4 million men. 1,381,000 officers and men were sent on service overseas from India; the total Indian casualties were about 122,000 (as compiled up to Dec. 31, 1919). In 1917 the bar hitherto precluding the admission of Indians to King's Commissions was removed; the pay and pensions of the Indian soldiery were improved. India has an Auxiliary Force on a volunteer basis.

The ROYAL INDIAN MARINE was reorganised on a combatant basis in 1928 and now flies the white ensign. An admiral of the Royal Navy was appointed as the first Flag Officer commanding. The fleet consists of four sloops, two patrol boats, one survey ship and various auxiliary craft.

EDUCATION.—Elementary education is based, so far as possible, on an adaptation of indigenous institutions and traditions. Higher education is an imported product. It is popular, and has undoubtedly been attended with beneficial results. As is natural with an imported product, its development is marked by some crudities, and its influence has to some extent been unsettling. There are 16 Universities in British India and 2 in Indian States, viz., Agra, Andhra, Annamallai, Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, Allahabad, Benares (Hindu), Patna, Dacca, Aligarh (Muhammadan), Lahore, Hyderabad, Mysore, Lucknow, Rangoon, Nagpur and Delhi. In State institutions education is secular. The institutions in 1930-31 numbered 262,052, and the scholars 12,689,086, including 1,544,268 females. Of the institutions, about 50 per cent are maintained by the State or aided by grants, the rest being private and unaided. Of the total expenditure on education in 1930-31, (£21,237,000), £4,603,000 came from fees, and £13,045,000 from Government revenues or local and municipal funds. The census of 1931 showed that only 126 males and 29 females per thousand are literate, in the sense of being able to read and write any language.

LOCAL SELF-GOVERNMENT, municipal and rural, in its present form, is a product of British rule. The municipalities at the end of 1930-31 numbered 781, with a total population of over 22 million, and receiving an income of £9,512,400 from rates and taxes (of toll, taxes on houses and lands, water, lighting, and conservancy rates, &c.) and £17,935,000 from other sources. Out of 12,776 members of municipal bodies 797 were officials and 11,979 non-officials.

† Net Exports.

In almost all districts in British India there are local district boards, partly representative. Of their total expenditure of about £12,663,000 in 1930-31 28 per cent. was devoted to civil works, 36 per cent. to education, and the remainder largely to sanitation and hospitals.

TRADE OF INDIA.—India's visible balance of trade in 1932-33 was Rs 68·3 lakhs (£51,225,000). The ordinary course of Indian trade shows yearly a large net export of merchandise and a net import of treasure, but in 1932-33 exports of treasure exceeded imports by £50,753,000. The table (p. 734) exhibits the leading figures for the last five years in thousands of pounds sterling (Rupees being converted at the rate of 13½ to the £).

During the year 1932-33 as compared with 1931-32 the value of the imports (excluding Government stores and treasure) increased by Rs. 621 lakhs (£4,659,000), or 5 per cent., while the total exports (including re-exports but excluding treasure and Government stores) fell by Rs. 2,489 lakhs (£18,869,000), or 16 per cent.

The bulk of the imports consists of manufactured articles, while two-thirds of the exports consist of food, tobacco, and raw materials.

The following statement shows the chief articles of the foreign trade of India in 1932-33 (converted at Rs. 13½ to the £):—

JUSTICE, POLICE, AND PRISONS.—There are 8,168 officers and 17,641 honorary judges and magistrates exercising civil and criminal jurisdiction. Many of the superior and the great majority of the inferior officers are Indians. In 1930, 2,507,871 civil suits were instituted; 2,552,927 persons were tried, and 1,250,890 convicted, in criminal cases, of whom 811 were sentenced to death and 783 executed, 1,702 to transportation, and 240,120 to imprisonment. The strength of the police in 1930 was 14,704 officers and 186,834 men. There were 1,210 prisons, with a daily average of 153,442 prisoners. At the convict settlement of Port Blair (Andamans) there were 7,613 prisoners on March 31, 1931.

VITAL STATISTICS.—The reporting of vital occurrences is still defective. The recorded death rate for British India in the decennium ended 1913 ranged between 28·21 per 1,000 in 1908 and 28·72 in 1913; it was 35·9 per 1,000 in 1919 and 26·85 in 1930. There were over 12 million deaths from influenza during 1918-19. Fevers of various kinds are by far the commonest cause of death, cholera, dysentery and diarrhoea, smallpox, and (since 1896) plague being other chief causes. The reported deaths from plague up to the end of 1930 were about 12,280,000 in India as a whole. The ratio of births per 1,000 of the population was 35·99 in 1930. In 4,771 hospitals and dispensaries, maintained mostly from public funds, 57,443,000 patients were treated in 1930. The number of persons vaccinated in 1930-31 was 15,865,000. According to the census of 1931 there were 147,911 lepers.

CUSTOMS DUTIES.—The general import tariff is now 25 per cent. ad valorem. The principal exceptions are:—Cotton twist, yarn and thread 6½ per cent. or As. 1½ per lb. whichever is higher; cotton piece goods 25 per cent. if of British manufacture, 50 per cent. if not; plain grey, i. e., not bleached or dyed in the piece, 35 per cent. or As. 4½ per lb., whichever is higher, if of British manufacture 50 per cent. or As. 5½ per lb., if not; raw cotton 5 per lb.; raw hemp, artificial silk yarn and thread 18½ per cent.; silk or artificial silk mixtures 35 per cent. or As. 2 Ps. 3 per sq. yard, whichever is higher; motor cars and motor cycles 37½ per cent.; sugar 15s. 9 As. 1 per cwt.; arms and certain "luxury" articles, including gold and silver manufactures, silk or artificial silk piece goods, gold and silver plate, &c., 50 per cent.; cigars 112½ per cent.; cigarettes, from Rs. 10 As. 10 to Rs. 15 per 1000; spirits generally Rs. 37 As. 8 per gallon; salt R. 1 As. 9 per maund (82½ lb.), plus As. 2½ per maund if manufactured outside India; motor spirit As. 10 per gallon, and kerosene As. 3 Ps. 9 per gallon; mineral oil 12½ per cent. (an excise duty of As. 10 is leviable on motor spirit and As. 2 Ps. 9½ per gallon on kerosene produced in India); coal As. 10 per ton; coal tar dyes 10 per cent.; spices 37½ per cent.; manufactured tobacco Rs. 3 As. 12 per lb., matches R. 1 As. 14 per gross of boxes of 100; match spirits As. 5 Ps. 7½ per lb.; veneer (for match boxes) As. 7 Ps. 6 per lb.; ale, beer As. 28 per gallon; porter, &c., As. 15 per gallon; perfumed spirits Rs. 60 per gallon; certain machinery 10 per cent.; certain metals, iron and steel and railway plant and rolling stock 15½ per cent.; gold coin, metallic ores, certain agricultural instruments, quinine, etc., are free. A few other articles pay 2½ per cent. There are protective duties at special rates on coal, iron and steel and certain manufactures thereof. There are export duties of As. 2 Ps. 3 a maund on rice; Rs. 4½ per bale of 400 lb. on raw jute other than cuttings, for which the rate is Rs. 1¼ per bale; Rs. 20 per ton on jute sacking; Rs. 32 per ton on hessians, and 5 per cent. ad valorem on raw hides and skins.

SHIPPING.—In 1932-33 the number of vessels engaged in the foreign trade which entered and cleared with cargoes at ports in British India was 5,707, with a tonnage of 14,230,000. Of this tonnage, over 67 per cent. was under the British flag.

The following table shows the distribution of the Indian private sea-borne trade in 1932-33:—

PORTS.—The chief ports are Bombay, Calcutta, Rangoon, Karachi, and Madras.

AGRICULTURE is by far the most important occupation of the people of India. In British territory in 1931-32, 262,901,000 acres were sown, or 229,000,000 acres excluding area sown more than once. Of the total area sown approximately 10 per cent. was under wheat, 35 per cent. under rice, and 43 per cent. under other food-grains and pulses, 7 per cent. under oilseeds, and 8 per cent. under cotton, jute, and other fibres. Sugar, tea, and tobacco are other important crops. The total area under irrigation was 22 million acres, including area irrigated at both harvests.

BANKS.—In addition to the Imperial Bank of India, which is closely associated with the Government, there are joint-stock banks, European and Indian, and many small native banks. In 1930 there were 30 Indian joint-stock banks, whose head offices are located in India, in addition to 28 exchange banks with head offices outside India, and 26 Indian co-operative banks, with capital and reserve of Rs. 5 lakhs and over. The capital of the Imperial Bank of India was Rs. 562 lakhs; reserve, Rs. 552 lakhs; deposits, Rs. 8,397 lakhs; and cash balance, Rs. 1,304 lakhs. The corresponding figures for the Indian joint-stock banks were: capital, Rs. 744 lakhs; reserve, Rs. 441 lakhs; deposits, Rs. 6,321 lakhs; cash balance, Rs. 767 lakhs. The 28 exchange banks with head offices not located in India had:—capital, £93 million; reserve, £100 million; deposits, £1,196 million outside India, and Rs. 6,821 lakhs in India; cash balances £209 million outside, and Rs. 772 lakhs in India. The 26 Indian co-operative banks had a capital of Rs. 156 lakhs; a reserve of Rs. 89 lakhs; deposits, Rs. 1,236 lakhs; loans outstanding, Rs. 1,033 lakhs; and cash balances amounting to Rs. 85 lakhs. The proportion per cent. of cash to liabilities on deposit was:—16½ in the case of the Imperial Bank; 13½ for exchange banks doing a considerable portion of their business in India; 8½ for other exchange banks; and 12½ in the case of Indian joint-stock banks.

CO-OPERATIVE CREDIT SOCIETIES.—In 1930-31 there were in British India and Indian States 1,863 central, 93,773 agricultural and 10,530 non-agricultural societies, with a total membership of 4,545,840 and a capital of £68,934,000. The Provincial and Central Banks showed a profit of £442,000, and agricultural and non-agricultural societies £1,472,600.

MINERALS.—The output of coal in India in 1930 was 23,803,000 tons. Nine-tenths of the total comes from Bengal and Bihar and Orissa. The production of crude petroleum in India (chiefly Burma) has increased from 19 million gallons in 1897 to 311 million in 1930. The production of salt is about 1,722,000 tons. The production of manganese ore was about 830,000 tons, and of salt-petre 3,827 tons (export figures). The yield of gold (nearly all from Mysore) was about 329,000 oz. Monazite and tungsten ore have taken an important place in the list of minerals of economic value produced in India. The output of the former in 1930 was 14 tons, and of the latter 2,452 tons.

MANUFACTURES.—In India the ancient village handicrafts still survive. Cotton-weaving is by far the most important hand industry. There were 8,128 factories in 1930 subject to the Indian Factories Act, employing 1,258,000 persons, including 255,000 women and nearly 38,000 children (12 to 15 years of age); the percentage of factories maintaining a week of 48 hours or less for men is 27, the corresponding percentage for women was 32. The maximum weekly hours for children are 36. There were 310 cotton mills at work in British India and Indian States in 1930-31, mostly in Bombay and Ahmedabad. In 1930-31, the production was 867 million lb. of yarn (mostly of low counts) and 590 million lb. of woven goods. The 100 jute mills, mostly situated in or near Calcutta, contained 1,224,982 spindles and 61,834 looms. There were, in 1930, 17 woollen and 21 paper mills, 11 breweries, and various other factories.

JOINT STOCK COMPANIES.—In 1930-31 there were 7,328 joint stock companies registered in British India and in the Indian States, with a paid-up capital of Rs. 21,189 lakhs (£211,890,000).

STATES OF THE RULING PRINCES AND CHIEFS OF INDIA.

THE States in India whose chiefs are in subordinate alliance with, or under the suzerainty of, the King-Emperor, comprise about two-fifths of the area, but only two-ninths of the population of India. Their administration, with a few unimportant exceptions, is not under the direct control of British officials, but it is subject, in varying degrees, to the Supreme Government. The chiefs are entitled to British protection, but have no power of making war and peace, or of sending ambassadors to one another or to foreign States; the military force they maintain is strictly limited; no European is allowed to reside at any of their courts without special sanction; and in case of misrule the Supreme Government can dethrone the chief or temporarily suspend him from the exercise of his powers. In matters of Imperial interest, trade, main lines of railway, &c., the Supreme Government has jurisdiction. Some States pay tribute, most do not. Payments aggregating £614,000 (£276,000 from Mysore) were made to the Government of India in 1931-32. Generally speaking, the States are governed by their Princes, Ministers, and Councils, with the advice of a political officer of the Supreme Government. This officer may have charge, as British Resident, of one large State, or may be the Agent for a group of States. A common characteristic of all Indian States, important or insignificant, is that in their territory British Indian law does not run. For them the Indian Legislature or the Provincial Legislative Councils cannot legislate; and over them the High Courts or Chief Courts of the Provinces have no jurisdiction.

The Assigned Districts of Mysore (Bangalore), Kalat (Quetta), and Berar are still technically Indian States territory. The Shan States, on the other hand, are technically part of British India, though administered by local Sawbwas or petty chiefs. Excluding these territories, the Indian States have a combined area of 713,146 square miles, and a population of 81,310,845. They maintain in the aggregate a considerable body of troops of inferior military organisation in addition to their Indian State forces. Many treaties provide that States shall furnish troops on the requisition of the Supreme Government, and troops of Indian States served in almost every Indian campaign of the 19th century. Lord Curzon inaugurated an Imperial Cadet Corps of Indian princes and nobles. The States vary greatly in size and importance. Hyderabad is nearly as large as Great Britain, and the Nizam enjoys a very large revenue. On the other hand, in Kathiawar and elsewhere, where family custom has led to minute sub-division, there are many chiefs of single villages. In these petty estates the nominal chief may have some very limited magisterial powers, but the administration is regulated and carried on by the Supreme Government in its executive capacity. The amount of control thus exercised over an Indian State in its internal affairs depends on a number of considerations, and varies from State to State. The rulers have not necessarily any religious or tribal connexion with the majority of their subjects. Thus the Nizam of Hyderabad is a Muhammadan, but most of his people are Hindus. Although the Indian States, large and small, number 662, only about 200 are of any real importance. The majority represent the scattered military chiefships which sprang from the ruins of the Moghul Empire in the 18th century. The rulers of Gwalior, Indore, and Baroda are all descendants of successful generals who then rose to power. Most of these States are of more recent origin than the British power in India. A unique step was taken in 1910, when a new Indian State was created out of the family domains of the Maharaja of Benares.

The salutes enjoyed by the Indian princes indicate their relative importance. Those with eleven guns or more are addressed as His Highness. On pages 737, 738 are the names of 86 ruling chiefs who have salutes of eleven guns or more, with some particulars of their States. Some well-known Indians of title, such as R.H. the Aga Khan, G.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., G.C.V.O., and the Maharajah of Burdwan, G.C.I.E., K.C.S.I., are not ruling chiefs.

The States of Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, Sikkim, and Kalat, and those belonging to the Rajputana and Central India Agencies, 175 in all, are under the direct supervision of the Governor-General in Council. The remainder, chiefly minor States, are under the supervision or control of various Provincial Governments. The States of first magnitude, which have a superior Resident, are Hyderabad, Mysore, Baroda, Kashmir, Jaipur, Udaipur, and Gwalior.

The Indian States may be thus classified:—
1. Hyderabad, the premier State in India (capital, Hyderabad, pop. 456,804—the fifth city in India). This State is in the centre of the Deccan or central plateau of Southern India.

The ruling dynasty is of Tūkhan origin, and is descended from Asaf Jahl, who became Viceroy of the Deccan in 1712, and then independent of the Mogul Emperor. Telugu and Marathi are the chief languages. Wheat, rice, and cotton are produced. The Nizam's Guaranteed Railway is the principal line. 2. Mysore. This State, situated on a plateau in Southern India, was administered by the Indian Government from 1831 to 1882, when it was restored to native rule, under a somewhat strictly framed instrument of transfer. In Dec., 1913, the instrument was replaced by a new Treaty putting the relations between the British Government and the State on a footing more in consonance with the actual position of the Maharaja among the Feudatory Chiefs of India. Kannarese and Telugu are the chief languages. There is a Mysore State Railway. Millets, pulses, and rice are the principal crops. Mysore has important goldfields. 3. Baroda, situated in Western India in Gujarat and Kathiawar and much interlaced with British districts. The reigning Gaekwar was the adopted heir of the ruler deposed in 1875 for misgovernment and misconduct. 4. The Himalayan Hill States, west of Nepal, including Kashmir. The important frontier State of Kashmir (capital, Srinagar, pop. 173,573) was granted to Gholab Singh by Lord Hardinge, after the First Punjab War (1846). It comprises Jammu, Kashmir, Ladakh, Gilgit, and Baltistan. A force stationed at Gilgit watches the northern passes and controls the feudatory chiefships of Hunza and Nagar, while on the west the subordinate chiefship of Chitral is occupied by British troops, depending for their support on the Peshawar border. 5. Sikkim, a frontier State situated on the borders of Tibet, between Nepal and Bhutan, acknowledged the British protectorate in 1890, when also the boundaries of Tibet were defined by the Sikkim-Tibet Convention. 6. The Sikh States, in the Sirhind plain, south of the Sutlej. The most important of these is Patiala. 7. Rajputana, comprising the ancient sovereignties lying between Sind and the United Provinces. Rajputana (pop. 11,225,712) extends some 460 miles from north to south, and is 530 miles in breadth, and is larger than the British Isles. About half of the area is desert. It comprises 20 States of varying size and importance. Of these 17 are ruled by hereditary Rajput chiefs, two by Jat chiefs, and one by a Muhammadan. The Governor-General's Agent's headquarters are at Ajmer; he has under him Residents for Eastern and Western Rajputana, and about twenty other officers, distributed among the States to supervise the administration, and give advice when it is required. The most important States are Jodhpur (Marwar), Udaipur (Mewar), and Jaipur. The Rajput dynasties, the most ancient in India, go back before the Mogul Empire and resemble feudal monarchies. 8. The States of Central India, lying to the north of the Nerbudda and to the south and east of Rajputana, although in the aggregate one-third less in extent than those of Rajputana, are nearly four times as numerous. All but 17 are petty chiefships. The most important are Gwalior and Indore, which include between them one-half of the whole area. The 31 minor States of Bundelkhand (largest, Rewa) are in political relation with the Central India Agency. Bhopal, one of the principal Muhammadan States in India. 9. The Malayalm States of Travancore and Cochin, lying together in S.W. India. These important States, attached to Madras Presidency, represent ancient Hindu dynasties. 10 The three northern Muhammadan States of Khatipur (Sind), Bahawalpur, and Rampur. 11 Kulat (including Makran and Kharan) and Las Bela, with tribal areas in the possession of the Mutri and Bugti tribes. 12 Gujarat, including Kutch and the numerous petty chieftships of Kathiawar. 13 The Southern Mahratta States. 14 The numerous Afghan and Baluch tribes of the N.W. frontier, inhabiting the mountains from the north of Peshawar to the base of the Suleiman range, a distance of 800 miles. The names of some of these tribes, Waziris, Orakzais, Afridis, &c., have become familiar owing to the many expeditions against them. 15 The aboriginal Gond and Kol tribes, under petty princes of aboriginal or Rajput blood, in Chota-Nagpur, Orissa, the Central Provinces, and the Jarpan (Vizagapatnam) Agency. 16 The Indo-Chinese group of States, and the numerous hill tribes of the N.E. frontier.

NEPAL.

Sovereign, His Majesty Maharaja Dhurja Tribhuhana Bir Bikram Jung Bahadur Shah Bahadur Shamsher Jung, sac. 1911.

Prime Minister, His Highness Maharaja Sir Joodha Shumshere Jung, Bahadur Rana, G.C.S.I., Maurizio e Lazaro, G.C.I.E., Prime Minister, and Supreme Commander-in-Chief. (Personal salute in British India, 19 guns.)

Nepal (area, about 54,000 sq. miles, pop. 5,600,000) lies between British India and Tibet on the S. slopes of the Himalayas, and includes Mt. Everest (29,141 ft.). Amid the sterile mountains lie many fertile valleys. The lower hills are covered with jungle, in which wild animals abound. Rice, wheat, &c., are grown. Nepal is divided into four provinces. Its exports to British India are estimated to amount to about £4,000,000, and its imports to £2,000,000 a year. The chief trade route is that between Kathmandu and the Bihar and Orissa frontier (77 miles). Nepal exports rice and other grains, hides, oilseeds, ghil, cattle, jute, large quantities of timber, &c., and imports cotton goods and yarn, sugar, salt, spices, metals, &c. The revenue, realised chiefly from land rent, forests, customs, &c., is over £1,000,000. The aborigines are Mongolian in type, and their religions are Buddhism and Hinduism. The aboriginal stock is Mongolian with a considerable admixture of Hindu blood from India. They were originally divided into numerous hill clans and petty principalities, one of which, Gorkha or Gurkha, became predominant in about 1769 and has since given its name to all. The ruling family are Hindu Rajputs. Their frequent aggressions led to a war with the British in 1814-6. Relations have now long been friendly. The policy of seclusion is, however, consistently followed by the Nepal rulers. The real political power rests with the Prime Minister. This office is always held by a member of his family, the succession being determined by special rules. The army numbers about 45,000. By arrangement with Nepal, India obtains many fine recruits for its Gurkha regiments. During the Great War, and in the subsequent Afghan war, the Nepal Government rendered unstinted and unconditional assistance to the British Government in men, money and material. A new Treaty was concluded in December, 1923 between the British and Nepalese Governments, by which inter alia the internal and external independence of the State was recognised.

CAPITAL, Kathmandu (pop. 80,000) — British Envoys at the Court of Nepal, Lt.-Col. C. T. Dawkes, C.I.E. Re. 3,000

BHUTAN.

Bhutan (area, about 20,000 sq. miles; pop. about 250,000, mainly Buddhists) also lies on the S.E. of the Himalayas, and its products resemble those of Nepal. In 1863, owing to outrages on British subjects, portions of it were annexed to India, an annual allowance being paid by the Indian Government as compensation. By a treaty in 1910 it is allowance was fixed at £6,667, and Bhutan agreed to be guided in its external relations by the advice of the British, who, however, will not interfere in its internal affairs. The former dual government of a spiritual chief and a temporal chief came to an end when the Tongsa Penlop, the chief councillor and virtual ruler, the late Su Teyen Wangchuk, K.C.S.I., G.C.I.E., was chosen hereditary Maharaja in 1907. He has a salute of 15 guns in British territory. The estimated annual revenue is £13,000. Bhutan's total trade with India is estimated at over £65,000 a year. There is no British Resident.

CAPITAL, Punakha.

THE PERSIAN GULF.

For three centuries England has taken the lead in the Gulf trade. She has suppressed piracy, slavery, and inter-tribal warfare on land and sea, made surveys, and laid down buoys and cables. Vigorous measures have been taken against gun-running. England and India still have the lion's share of the trade, the bulk of which is conducted by Indians, who make Bombay their entrepôt. The Arabian shores are low-lying deserts, the Persian coasts mountains; at the head of the Gulf are great alluvial plains. The heat is intense in summer. Natural harbours are few.

The ruler of Bahrain (capital, Manama) has been in treaty relations since 1820 with the Government of India, who have a Political Agent at Bahrain. In 1880 he engaged not to make treaties with any other State.

The Sultan of Oman (Muscat) is in treaty relations with the Government of India, who have a Political Agent and Consul at his Court.

The independent tribes on the Pirate (Arab) Coast from Ras-al-Khaima to Uldai are bound under treaties with the Indian Government (dating from 1820, and confirmed in 1853 by a Treaty of Perpetual Peace) to maintain a maritime truce for the prevention of piracy and slavery, and for the cessation of hostilities at sea. Hence their chiefs are sometimes called the "Trucial" chiefs. The British Political Resident in the Persian Gulf is the recognised arbiter and adviser of these tribes, and peace is maintained by the British flag. In 1892 these tribes agreed not to enter into relations with, or cede territory to, any other Power than the British. The trade of the Arab coast ports largely consists in exports of pearls to India via Lingah and Bahrain.

Important caravan routes converge at Kuwait, which has an excellent harbour. The Shaikh is under treaty obligations with the Indian Government.

PERSIA (q.v.) borders on Baluchistan and Afghanistan. The demarcation of the Perso-Baluch frontier, partially carried out in 1872 and 1895, was completed in 1905.

ASIATIC RUSSIA.—A portion of what was once the Russian Empire is common to Persia and Afghanistan. The Trans-Caspian Railway runs, via Merv, to Samarkand and Andijan, with a branch to Tashkent. The Murghab Valley branch from Merv to Kushk on the Afghan frontier, opened in 1898, brings the Russian railways within 70 miles of Herat, and within 450 miles of the Chaman terminus of the Indian railways. Another important strategic line connects Tashkent directly with Orenburg. The Amu-Darya, or Oxus, which separates Bokhara from Afghanistan for 330 miles, is navigated by Russian steamers.

CHINA—India is in contact with two dependencies of China, Chinese Turkestan and Tibet, and one province, Yunnan.

Chinese Turkestan is surrounded by the mountains of Tianshan, the Pamirs, and Kuenlun. There are three difficult passes into Russian Turkestan and two still more difficult ones into India. The boundary between Kashmir and Chinese Turkestan has not been officially defined. There is a British consul-general at Kashgar. Trade with India is chiefly carried over the Karakoram Pass (18,500 feet) via Ladakh, in Kashmir.

Tibet, a plateau seldom lower than 10,000 feet, forms the northern frontier of India (boundary imperfectly defined), from Kashmir to Burma, but is separated therefrom by the Himalayas. India imports from Tibet wool, bonas, salt, and musk, in exchange for cotton and woollen goods and grain. Trade passes from Bengal (through Sikkim) and from the Punjab and the United Provinces. Under the Anglo-Chinese Sikkim Convention of 1890, a trade mart was opened at Yatung; but as the Tibetans persistently disregarded the Convention, a political mission was despatched from India, with a military escort. It reached the capital, Lhasa, after sharp fighting, on August 3, 1904. A new Convention was signed (Sept. 7), providing for the erection of boundary pillars between Sikkim and Tibet; for three trade marts, with British and Tibetan agents; for unrestricted traffic by existing routes; and for payment of an indemnity. The Tibetans pledged themselves not to alienate any territory or grant concessions to, or permit the intervention of, any foreign Power. By the Convention of Peking (April, 1906) China accepted the Conventions of 1890 and 1904, and declared that no foreign State should interfere in Tibet, while England also undertook not to interfere in the administration of Tibet or annex territory. By the Anglo-Russian Convention of Aug., 1907, both Powers recognised the suzerain rights of China in Tibet, agreed to maintain its territorial integrity, to refrain from intervention in its internal administration, to treat with Tibet only through the Chinese Government, not to send representatives to Lhasa, not to assign any territory to either Power, and not to obtain railway, mining, or other concessions; but direct relations between British commercial agents and Tibetan authorities under the Conventions of 1904 and 1906 are permitted. In Dec. 1905, the ruler of Tibet, the Tashi Lama, visited India. The Dalai Lama, who fled before the British advance on Lhasa, returned to Tibet in Jan., 1910. The Chinese had meanwhile strengthened their hold over the administration, despite the opposition of the Lamas or monks, who resented the loss of their authority. In Feb., 1910, the Dalai Lama again fled to India, pursued by Chinese troops. He was then deposed by the Chinese Emperor. The British Government refused the Dalai Lama's appeal for their intervention, but allowed him to remain at Darjeeling. He left India in June, 1912, for Lhasa, where sharp fighting occurred between the Chinese and Tibetans, the former being worsted. In August, 1912, the British Minister at Peking presented a Note to the Chinese Government, urging that China should not actively intervene in internal administration in Tibet. To this the Chinese Government agreed, and representatives of the British, Chinese, and Tibetan Governments met in conference at Simla in Oct., 1913, to discuss the relations between the three countries. A convention, the terms of which have not been made public, was initiated by the three representatives, but the Chinese Government has so far refused to ratify it.

Yunnan is a Chinese province to the N.E. of Burma. By Anglo-Chinese agreements of 1894 and 1897 a boundary was fixed between Burma and Yunnan, and arrangements were made regarding trade, extradition, &c. Part of the boundary is still undefined. By an agreement of 1896 Great Britain and France agreed to share equally all privileges or advantages that might be conceded by China in Yunnan. Trade with Yunnan is chiefly by a difficult route from Bhamo, in Upper Burma. Burma imports from Yunnan hides, raw silk, &c., and exports cotton goods, &c. Teng-yueh and Ssuma, near the Burma frontier, are treaty "ports." There are British consuls at Teng-yueh and Yunnan-fu.

SIAM (q.v.) matches with Burma for many hundreds of miles through mountainous country, and considerable trade is carried on over this frontier, mainly with Chiengmai. Burma imports from Siam teak, cattle, silk goods, &c., and exports cotton goods, &c. The boundary of Burma and N.W. Siam was demarcated in 1892-3. France in 1904 recognised the portion of Siam west of the Menam basin, including the Malay peninsula and adjacent islands, as within the British sphere of influence.

Canada was originally discovered by Cabot in 1497, but its history dates only from 1534, when the French took possession of the country. The first permanent settlement at Port Royal (now Annapolis), Nova Scotia, was founded in 1605, and Quebec was founded in 1608. In 1759 Quebec succumbed to the British forces under General Wolfe, and in 1763 the whole territory of Canada became a possession of Great Britain by the Treaty of Paris of that year. Nova Scotia was ceded in 1713 by the Treaty of Utrecht, the Provinces of New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island being subsequently formed out of it. British Columbia was formed into a Crown colony in 1858, having previously been a part of the Hudson Bay Territory, and was united to Vancouver Island in 1866. By the British North America Act, passed in 1867, the Provinces of Canada (Ontario and Quebec), Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick were united under the title of THE DOMINION OF CANADA, and provision was made in the Act for the admission at any subsequent period of the other provinces and territories of British North America.

The Dominion of Canada occupies the whole of the northern part of the North American Continent (with the exception of Alaska and part of the coast of Labrador), from 49° North latitude to the North Pole, and from the Pacific to the Atlantic Ocean. In Eastern Canada, the southernmost point is Middle Island in Lake Erie, at 41° 41' (approximately the latitude of Rome, Italy).

Relief.—From a physical point of view Canada may be divided into an eastern division, a western division, the Red River Valley, in long. 97°, forming the separating line, and a northern division. The eastern division comprises two areas, presenting radically distinct aspects:—(1) The south-eastern area, bounded by the line of the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, from Belle Isle to Montreal, thence by a line running directly south to Lake Champlain, which is generally hilly, and sometimes mountainous, with many fine stretches of agricultural and pastoral lands. (2) The southern and western area, presenting, in the main, a broad, level, and slightly undulating expanse of generally fertile country, with occasional step-like ridges or rocky escarpments. The main hydrographical feature is the chain of lakes, with an area of 95,000 square miles, contributing to the great river system of the St. Lawrence. The northern division, embracing nearly two-thirds of the Dominion, with an average elevation of 1,000 feet above the level of the sea, is pre-eminently a region of waterways, and including the great Laurentian plateau. In this area are found the other great river systems, the Nelson and the Mackenzie. The western division referred to may also be said to possess two areas equally distinct in character. The first stretches from the Red River Valley to the Rocky Mountains. Here, between lat. 49° and 54°, is the great Prairie Region, rising to the west in three terrace-like elevations, the lowest of which is 700 feet, and the third about 3,000 feet above the level of the sea. North of the 54th parallel the country passes again into forest. The second area, from the western edge of the Prairie to the Pacific coast, is a distance of 400 miles, and contains the Rocky Mountains (Mount Robson, 12,972 feet) and the Selkirk and Cascade Ranges, whose summits are from 4,000 to 16,000 feet high, the country being on the whole densely wooded. The highest mountain peaks in Canada are Mount Logan, 19,850 feet, and Mount St. Elias, 18,008 feet, both in the Yukon.

Climate.—The climate in the eastern and central portions of the Dominion presents greater extremes of cold and heat than in corresponding latitudes in Europe, but in the south-western portion of the Prairie Region and the southern portions of the Pacific slope the climate is milder. Spring, summer, and autumn are of about seven to eight months' duration, and the winter four to five months. The soil is generally fertile and all the products of the temperate zone are cultivated.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of a Senate and a House of Commons. The Senate consists of 96 members, nominated for life by the Governor-General, distributed between the various provinces thus: 24 for Ontario, 24 for Quebec, 10 for Nova Scotia, 10 for New Brunswick, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 6 for British Columbia, 6 for Manitoba, 6 for Alberta, and 6 for Saskatchewan; each Senator must be thirty years old, a resident in the province for which he is appointed, a natural-born or naturalised subject of the King, and the owner of a property qualification amounting to $4,000. The Speaker of the Senate is chosen by the Government of the day. The House of Commons is elected every five years at longest, and the Parliament consists of 245 members, elected as follows: 82 for Ontario, 65 for Quebec, 14 for Nova Scotia, 11 for New Brunswick, 17 for Manitoba, 14 for British Columbia, 4 for Prince Edward Island, 16 for Alberta, 21 for Saskatchewan, and 1 for Yukon. The House of Commons is also composed of natural-born or naturalised subjects of the King; no property qualification is necessary, its members are elected upon a very wide suffrage, and at the General Election in Dec. 1921 women exercised the franchise on the same terms as men for the first time in a Federal Election. For electoral purposes each province is divided into districts, returning a member on a majority of votes taken by ballot. The members of the House themselves elect their Speaker, and twenty, including the Speaker, form a quorum. Members of the Upper and Lower Houses receive* $4,000 per Session, with travelling expenses and deductions for non-attendance.

The Houses of Parliament were destroyed by fire on Feb. 6, 1916, the new buildings being started the same year; the foundation stone was laid by H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught (Gov. Gen.), Sept. 1, 1917, and the corner stone of the main tower by H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, Sept. 1, 1919. The Speaker's Chair in the new House of Commons (a replica of that at Westminster) was presented in 1921 by Viscount Elsworth (ex-Speaker of the House of Commons of the United Kingdom) on behalf of the Empire Parliamentary Association of the Houses of Lords and Commons.

THE JUDICATURE.

The Judicature—Justice is administered, as in England, by judges, police magistrates, and justices of the peace, of whom the first-named are appointed by the Governor-General, for life, from among the foremost men at the Bar in the several provinces. The highest court is the Supreme Court of Canada, composed of a Chief Justice and six puisne judges, and holding three sessions in the year at Ottawa. The only other Dominion Court, viz., the Exchequer Court of Canada, is presided over by separate judges, and its sittings may be held anywhere in Canada.

* All salaries and sessional indemnities are subject to a reduction of 10 per cent. for the fiscal years 1923-34.

The Provincial Courts include the Court of Chancery, Court of King's Bench, Court of Error and Appeal, Superior Courts, County Courts, General Sessions, and Division Courts. The duties of coroners are generally analogous to those in force in England, as are also methods of civil and criminal procedure, while trial by jury prevails.

DEFENCE.

The Canadian Militia is composed of the Active Militia and the Reserve, the Active Militia consisting of the Canadian Permanent Force (a small body of all arms) and the units of the Active Militia of the several branches of the service which are organized and perform annual training. The Reserve Militia consists of reserve units and of all able-bodied citizens between the ages of 18 and 60, with certain well-defined exceptions. The total establishment of the Non-Permanent Active Militia (1932) is 9,029 officers and 125,722 other ranks.

Expeditionary Force in the Great War.—The number enlisted up to the cessation of hostilities was 595,441, of whom 418,052 were sent overseas. Over 80% of all enlistment was voluntary. The total outlay for the War is estimated at $2,000,000,000.

Royal Canadian Navy.

The Royal Canadian Navy consists (1932) of 4 Destroyers and 3 Mine-sweepers. The authorized complements are 104 officers and 792 men of the Permanent Force. There is also a Naval Reserve of 70 officers and 430 men and a Naval Volunteer Reserve of 70 officers and 930 men.

Royal Canadian Air Force.

The strength of the Royal Canadian Air Force, permanent service, was on Jan. 1, 1933, 98 officers and 592 airmen.

Shipping. The registered shipping on Dec. 31, 1931, including inland vessels, was 3,168 sailing vessels and 5,727 steamers (total net tonnage, 1,427,648). The sea-going vessels entered and cleared at Canadian ports in 1932 were: Canadian 15,919 (11,808,667 tons), British 5,754 (19,075,391 tons), Foreign 16,604 (21,506,183 tons); total tonnage 52,340,241. The number of coasting vessels entered and cleared was 139,927, with a registered tonnage of 90,224,871.

Banking.—There were 10 chartered banks on Dec. 31, 1932, with 3,772 branches, with liabilities to the public of $2,546,129,789; assets of $2,860,429,779; deposits $2,216,639,530. The balance of undrawn deposits in the Post Office and Dominion Government savings banks on March 31, 1932, was $23,919,677. These two classes of Dominion savings bank were amalgamated in 1929.

Canals.—In 1932 the vessels passing through the canals of the Dominion numbered 21,915 of 17,937,048 tons. There are seven systems under control of the Dominion Government with a total waterway of 1,846 miles (of which 509.40 miles are constructed canals).

The new Welland Ship Canal between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, with a 25 foot channel, was opened for traffic on April 20, 1931, although the official opening was postponed until August, 1932.

Posts and Telegraphs.—There were 12,133 post-offices on Mar. 31, 1932. The postal revenue was $32,476,604 in 1931-32. On March 31, 1932, there were 4,315 rural mail delivery routes on which were erected 235,755 boxes. The length of telegraph lines directly operated by the Dominion Government in 1932 was 9,078 miles, and that by the Canadian National System 24,018 miles. Other lines reached 19,266 miles. On March 31, 1932, there were 1,222 coast and land wireless stations, 291 ship wireless stations, 84 wireless and radio broadcasting stations, and 598,358 private receiving stations for the reception of broadcast programmes. The ship to shore wireless traffic for the twelve months ended March 31, 1932, amounted to 307,869 messages and 6,936,062 words. Wireless "beam" stations are operated at Drummondville, Quebec, for direct communication with Great Britain and Australia, and a station at Lonsburg, N.S., provides a long-distance service to ships.

On December 31, 1931, there were 1,364,200 telephones and 4,985,076 miles of telephone wire in use; earnings, $66,806,580; expenses, $60,667,016.

Provinces of the Dominion.

ONTARIO.

Area and Population.—The Province of Ontario contains a total area of 412,582 sq. miles, with a population (1931) of 4,431,683. Of the population (Census 1931) 1,335,691 live in rural parts and 2,095,992 in urban centres.

Government.—The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and a Legislative Assembly of 90 members elected for five years which meets every year at Toronto. Executive Council act as the Ministry of the Province.

Finance.—The Ordinary Receipts of the Provincial Government for 1932 were $54,175,233, and the Ordinary Expenditure $52,173,086.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The total area is 234,163,000 acres, and in 1932 the area of cleared land was about 15,000,000 acres, of which 9,225,700 acres were under field crops. The estimated total value of all field crops in 1932 was $113,904,000. Cheese factories produced 79,816,828 lb. of cheese in 1929 valued at $14,313,547, and creameries made 59,185,194 lb. of butter valued at $23,623,174. In 1932 there were 578,615 horses, 2,528,615 cattle, 1,039,692 sheep, 1,375,115 pigs, and 22,029,143 poultry. Free grants of land are obtainable in the great clay belt of Ontario, opened up by the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario railway. Improved farms, orchards and small holdings can be bought on reasonable terms in the older settled parts of the Province. There is a scheme of land settlement, with free land and financial assistance for returned soldiers, both Imperial and Canadian. There is always a demand for farm workers.

Lumbering.—The value of production including primary forest production and the value added by manufacture in pulp-mills and saw-mills in 1929 was $111,000,000.

Manufactures.—Ontario is the chief manufacturing province of Canada. The total value of its manufactures in 1931 was $1,312,400,828. There were, in 1931, 269,739 employees, an invested capital of $2,285,361,451, and an annual wage bill of $313,676,300. The chief manufacturing centres in 1930 were Toronto ($521,540,020), Hamilton ($166,910,535), Ottawa ($137,104,464), Oshawa ($41,382,402), London ($45,497,024), and East Windsor ($44,123,658).

Minerals.—Ontario is the leading mineral Province in the Dominion, the output in 1932 being $79,509,239. The principal metals are gold, $47,133,952; silver, $2,006,648; nickel, $7,179,862; and copper, $4,407,928.

Hydro-Electric Power.—The chief power rivers are the Niagara, the St. Lawrence and the Ottawa. One of the world's largest and most successful electrical undertakings, the largest publicly-owned—is operated by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, which generates and transmits power to more than 600 co-operating municipalities and serves about 75 per cent of the population of the Province. The aggregate peak load exceeds 1,200,000 h.p. The undertaking represents a capital investment of about £70,000,000 ($350,000,000).

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, TORONTO, population (1931) 631,027, with great shipping interests on the Lakes, and the chief centre of industrial and commercial activity, Hamilton, the "Birmingham of Canada" (255,547); Ottawa, the Federal capital (226,872), with a large lumber trade and woodenware manufactures; London (71,148), Brantford (30,107), Kingston (23,439), Peterborough (22,327), Windsor, connected by tunnel beneath Detroit River with Detroit, Mich., U.S.A. (63,108); Port William (26,277), Kitchener (30,793), Guelph (21,075), St. Catharines (24,753), Sault Ste. Marie (23,082).

QT EBEC.

Area and Population.—The Province of Quebec contains an area estimated at 594,434 square miles, with a population (1931) of 2,674,255, an increase since the last census of 513,590. In 1927 the Province was diminished by 112,400 square miles by the award of the Imperial Privy Council in the controversy between the Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland with regard to their boundary in the Labrador Peninsula.

Government.—The Government of the Province is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor, the Council of Ministers, a Legislative Council consisting of 24 members appointed for life, and a Legislative Assembly of 90 members elected for five years to represent the 90 electoral districts of the Province.

Finance.—The actual revenue for the year 1931-32 was $36,941,000 and the actual expenditure $37,525,790. The bonded debt (June 30, 1932) was $91,987,691 and the net funded debt $66,860,821.

Production and Industry.—The gross value of manufactured products in 1930 was $1,022,280,687; the principal manufacturing centres being (1930): Montreal ($532,404,756), Quebec ($38,314,617), Three Rivers ($37,972,620), Shawinigan Falls ($44,510,936), Sherbrooke ($15,946,699), Granby ($21,385,685), and Hull ($8,960,340). The lumber industry is still by far the most important trade, but the settled portion of the country has been too much denuded of wood, and the provincial Government has found it necessary to organise an effective service of rangers to prevent the destruction of trees by forest fires. The forest lands cover an area of over 120,000,000 acres, of which 51,000,000 are under licence to cut timber. The wood pulp industry is assuming greater importance every year. Several large mills have recently been built, and during 1930 the production reached 1,833,000 tons, valued at $12,355,872. The Province produces more than half of the total output of the Dominion. In 1930, 1,536,240 tons of paper were manufactured, valued at $90,668,121 (mainly newsprint). Unimproved lands may be bought from the Government at 60 cents per acre, and the purchase-money paid in five instalments. The area of land subdivided for the purpose of settlement unsold on June 30, 1930, was about 8,463,816 acres. In 1930 the production of dairy industry products was cheese 34,059,680 lb. (valued at $5,106,866), and butter 60,746,665 lb. (valued at $17,851,545). In 1931 there were in the Province 304,537 horses, 1,720,000 cattle, 732,000 sheep, 725,358 swine, and 7,932,000 poultry.

Education.—The Superintendent of Education, assisted by a Council composed of a Roman Catholic and a Protestant Committee, each under a deputy head, is invested with the central control of Education. The schools, both Roman Catholic and Protestant, are maintained partly by local taxation and partly by Government grants. There were, in 1930, 8,279 schools with 634,757 scholars, including the high and superior schools and 20 normal schools supported by the State. There are also Schools of Agriculture, Dairying, Polytechnic, Fine Arts, Rangers, Historic Guides, Blind and Deaf, Nursery, Commercial and Classical Schools, and four Universities—two Protestant (McGill University, Montreal, and Bishop's College, Lennoxville); and two Roman Catholic (Laval University, Quebec, and Montreal University).

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, QUEBEC (population, 230,594), historic city visited annually by thousands of tourists, and one of the great seaport towns of Canada; and Montreal (population, 818,577), the commercial metropolis, and the principal centre of the Canadian grain export trade, situate at the confluence of the Ottawa and St. Lawrence Rivers. Ocean-going steamers ascend the St. Lawrence as far as Montreal. Other important cities are Hull (29,433), Sherbrooke (28,933), Trois Rivières (35,450), Verdun (60,745). Population figures from the "Seventh Census of Canada, 1931."

NOVA SCOTIA.

Area and Population.—NOVA SCOTIA is a peninsula between 43° 25'–47° N. lat. and 59° 40'–69° 25' W. long., and is connected with New Brunswick by a low fertile isthmus about thirteen miles wide. It comprises an area (with Cape Breton Island) of 21,428 square miles (360 miles of which consists of lakes, rivers and inlets of the sea) with a total population, at the Census of 1931, of 522,846, a decrease since the last census of 10,991 persons.

Government.—The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, aided by an Executive Council and a Legislative Assembly of 30 members.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—About 8,000,000 acres are fit for tillage, and the soil is of good average fertility. The climate is delightful, the winter being less severe than in most of the other parts of the Dominion. In 1932 there were about 4,300,000 acres of land occupied, of which about 575,000 acres were under crop, 2,800,000 acres in pasture and partially wooded lands, and about 70,000 acres in gardens and orchards. Fruit is extensively cultivated, and the apple crop for 1932 was 2,000,000 (estimated) barrels, the principal fruit belt being the Annapolis Valley. The products of the fields and orchards in 1932 were valued at $13,000,000. Improved farms of 100 to 250 acres, with house and buildings, may be obtained at from £200 to £1,000, whilst the Government offer uncultivated Crown lands at $100 per 100 acres, or $1 per acre for any additional, not to exceed 150 acres in all. There is a Government agricultural college and experimental farm at Truro for men and women, and a well-equipped technical college at Halifax. In 1932 the live stock included 44,720 horses, 238,700 cattle, 255,000 sheep, 53,400 swine, and 1,239,500 poultry.

Manufactures.—In 1931 the gross value of the manufactures was $70,679,503. The capital invested was $129,824,727, and 16,175 hands were employed; the principal industrial centres being Sydney ($14,507,166), Halifax ($16,067,662) and Dartmouth ($15,397,611).

Fisheries.—The total value of the fisheries in 1931 was $7,986,711, and the number of persons employed was about 20,000.

Minerals.—Mine products in 1931 were valued at $21,080,745; the coal deposits are extensive and are estimated to last for 200 years. 4,955,563 gross tons were produced in 1931. Iron ores are plentiful, and extensive manufactures of iron and steel are carried on at Sydney and Sydney Mines, Cape Breton.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, HALIFAX (population 59,275), one of the terminals of the Canadian National Railway, with a magnificent harbour, is one of the principal winter ports of Canada, and the entrepôt of a large trade with the West Indies and South America. A shipyard for the building of large ocean-going steamers, with a dry dock, is one of the leading industries. Sydney in Cape Breton has a population of 22,545, and Glace Bay 17,007.

CAPE BRETON ISLAND.

Cape Breton Island, formerly a distinct Colony, now incorporated with Nova Scotia, contains an area of 2,975 square miles, with a population of about 125,582 inhabitants. The chief city, Sydney (pop. 22,060), on the eastern coast, has valuable collieries in the neighbourhood and is the site of the largest steel works in Canada. Glace Bay has a population of 20,706. The Canadian National Railway connects the island with the mainland by rail ferry.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Area and Population.—NEW BRUNSWICK is situated between 45°—48° N. lat. and 63° 47'—66° W. long., and comprises an area of 27,985 square miles, with a population in 1931 of 8,219, an increase since the last census of 20,343 persons. It was first colonised by British subjects in 1761, and in 1783 by the inhabitants of New England, who were dispossessed of their property in consequence of their loyalty to the British Crown.

Government.—The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council, and a Legislative Assembly of 48 members elected by the people.

Finance.—The ordinary receipts for 1931 were $5,795,630, and the ordinary expenditure

$6,360,803.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The total land area is 18,663,000 acres, of which 905,000 acres were under field crops in 1931. The total value of the field crops in 1931 was $12,629,000.

The live stock (1931) included 221,000 cattle,

131,000 sheep, 96,300 pigs, 52,300 horses, and

1,470,100 poultry. Free grants of land are offered, and settlement encouraged. Improved farms are obtainable at reasonable rates. The fisheries include salmon, cod, mackerel, herring, and shad; value of the fisheries (1925) $4,795,589.

In 1927 the cheese factories in operation produced 802,000 lb., and the creameries 1,885,262 lb.

Manufactures.—The gross value of the output of manufactured goods in 1931 was $55,000,812, the principal manufacturing centre being St. John

($56,552,152). The chief industrial pursuits arise from the produce of the forests and the fisheries.

Natural gas has been found in immense quantities in Albert County, and the south-eastern section of the Province is remarkably rich in oil shales. Coal is found; also silver, lead, antimony, copper, iron, manganese, and other valuable minerals in considerable quantities.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, FREDERICTON; population (1931), 8,830. St. John (pop. 47,514) is one of the principal winter ports of Canada, and is connected by C.P.R. and Canadian National Railways with Montreal; Moncton (20,669).

MANITOBA.

Area and Population.—Manitoba, originally the Red River Settlement, is situated in about the centre of the continent, between 45°—60° N.

lat. and 95°—101° W. long., with a total area of 251,832 square miles and a population (1931

census of 61,079.

Government.—The Government is administered by a Lieutenant-Governor, assisted by an Executive Council of 8 Ministers, who are members of the Legislative Assembly of 55 members, each

Finances.—The receipts of the provincial government in 1931-32 were $22,162,657, and the expenditure $29,214,217.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The agricultural production of British Columbia in 1932 was valued at $34,373,926. Live stock in 1932 included 57,700 horses, 257,000 cattle, 151,000 sheep, 51,700 swine, and 3,437,200 poultry. The butter output totalled 5,183,495 lb of creamery and 2,585,400 lb. of dairy butter, and the cheese 431,265 lb.

Production and Industry.—The gross value of the output of manufactures in 1932 was $241,121,932, the principal manufacturing centres being Vancouver, Victoria, New Westminster, and Prince Rupert. The yield of the principal industries was, in 1932: forests, $35,157,000; agriculture, $34,373,926; mining, $28,241,618, fishing, $9,924,071. There are extensive coal measures, and a vast and compact area of merchantable timber; the mines have produced over $1,300,972 646, and are still in the early stages of development. Only one-tenth of the available agricultural and fruit lands is at present settled, and there are miles of pulpwood as yet unexploited. There are undeveloped deposits of magnetite and hematite iron. The climate is healthful and temperate. The principal exports are fish, coal, gold, silver, minerals, timber, fruit, pulp and paper.

Principal Cities.—CAPITAL, VICTORIA. Population 1931, 39,082. Other centres are Vancouver (246,593 in 1931), New Westminster (17,524), Prince Rupert (6,350).

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

Area and Population.—Prince Edward Island lies in the southern part of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, between 46°-47° N. lat. and 62°-64° 30' W. long. It is about 130 miles in length, and from 4 to 24 miles in breadth; its area is 2,284 square miles (rather larger than that of the English county of Norfolk), and its population (Census, 1931) 88,038, a decrease from the last census of 577 persons. The island was first settled by the French, who held it for many years as a fishing station. The British took it from them in 1765, but afterwards restored it; they seized it again, however, during the Seven Years' War (1756-1763) and compelled the greater part of the French inhabitants to leave, and from that time it has remained British.

Government.—The Government is vested in a Lieut.-Governor and an Executive Council, and a Legislative Assembly of 30 members elected by the people, 15 as Councillors (with a property qualification) and 15 as Assembly-men (on general suffrage).

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The value of the field crops in 1929 was estimated at $25,976,000. The soil consists for the most part of a rich red loam, uniform in character and peculiarly suited to the growth of grasses. Nearly the whole of the land is now cleared, and improved farms can be bought at from $20 to $60 an acre (including buildings), according to condition and locality. The breeding of silver black foxes in captivity is an established and profitable industry. There are about 600 fox ranches, conducted by incorporated companies and private partnerships or individuals. The live stock (1930) included 35,570 horses, 99,500 cattle, 87,000 sheep, 54,000 pigs, and 979,700 poultry.

Manufactures.—The gross value of the manufactures in 1930 was $4,638,725, against $2,326,708 in 1900.

Principal Cities—CAPITAL, CHARLOTTETOWN (Pop. 12,347), on the shore of Hillsborough Bay, which forms a good harbour. Other towns are Summerside (3,228), Souris (1,094), and Georgetown (884).

ALBERTA.

Area and Population.—The Province of Alberta has an estimated area of 255,285 square miles, including about 2,360 square miles of water, with a population of 731,605, according to the Dominion Census of 1931.

Government.—The Government is vested in a Lieutenant-Governor and Legislative Assembly composed of 63 members, elected for five years, representing 53 electoral districts into which the Province is divided. The Executive Council consists of eight members.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—The total area in field crops, 1932, was 14,021,529 acres. The Department of Agriculture in the Provincial Government conducts free schools of agriculture at four points in the Province. Free home-steads are still available in many desirable localities. The value of the field crops in 1932 was estimated at $83,620,332; wheat, $44,280,000; oats, $11,165,000; hay and clover, $2,314,000; grain hay, $19,428,000; potatoes, $1,345,000; barley, $2,364,000. The live stock included 726,020 horses, 424,000 milch cows and 759,600 other cattle, $33,700 sheep, and 1,128,000 swine. The creamery butter made totalled 21,016,048 lb., valued at $3,512,635, and cheese 1,439,715 lb., valued at $146,177.

Finance.—Gross bonded Debt, March 31, 1932, $136,720,000; Net General Debenture Debt, $91,450,000. Revenue (1931-32) $13,492,427. Expenditure (1931-32), $18,645,481. Assessed valuation of property within the Province, $595,745,117.

Manufactures.—The gross value of the output in 1932 was $68,367,411, against $1,313,375 in 1900, the principal manufacturing centres being Calgary ($78,000,169) and Edmonton ($20,128,405).

CAPITAL. EDMONTON. Population (1931) 79,157; Calgary (83,762). Lethbridge, Medicine Hat, Red Deer, and Westaskiwini are the other principal cities of the Province.

SASKATCHEWAN.

Area and Population.—The Province of Saskatchewan lies between Manitoba on the east and Alberta on the west, and has an area of 251,700 square miles, the population at the Census of 1931 being 221,785, an increase of 163,596 persons since the Census of 1921.

Government.—The Government is vested in the Lieutenant-Governor, with a Legislative Assembly of 63 members. By amendment of the Legislative Act, coming into effect at the next general election, the membership of the Assembly is reduced from 63 to 52 on a redistribution of seats effected. There is an Executive Council of ten members.

Agriculture and Live Stock.—Saskatchewan is the largest wheat-producing province of the Dominion, and one of the most productive grain areas in the world. In 1931 the grain yield totalled 207,256,000 bushels. The approximate value of grain crops was $66,101,000, of field crops $2,046,000, livestock $12,434,000, poultry products $6,934,000, and garden produce $2,036,000. The live stock included 1,777,234 mules and horses, 1,114,785 cattle, 209,888 sheep, and 497,927 swine.

Industries.—The capital invested in manufacturing enterprises in 1931 was $50,000,000, and the value of the manufactured products $84,000,000, the principal industrial centres being Regina, Moose Jaw, Saskatoon and Prince Albert.

In 1932 there were 4,777 elementary schools with 221,556 pupils; 459 continuation schools, and 2,327 schools giving some high school instruction. Enrolment in High Schools 8,961, total taking high school instruction, 28,292. The enrolment in the Government Correspondence High School courses was 9,205 from rural schools receiving partial instruction, and 1,162 full instruction.

CAPITAL, REGINA. Population (1931), 53,209. Other large centres are Saskatoon (43,291), Moose Jaw (21,299), Prince Albert (9,905), Swift Current (5,296), North Battleford (5,986), and Yorkton (5,027).

TERRITORIES.

THE YUKON TERRITORY was constituted a separate political unit in 1898. It is governed by a Comptroller and a Territorial Council of three elected members. The area of the Territory is 207,076 square miles. The population in 1931 was 4,230 (2,825 males and 1,405 females). Mining is the chief industry. The gold output for the year ending Dec. 31, 1932, was $839,421; the silver output during the same period was $967,303.

Comptroller, George A. Jeckell.
Judge, Hon. C. D. Macaulay.

THE NORTH-WEST TERRITORIES (1,209,682 square miles, population (1931) 9,723), comprise the territories formerly known as Rupert's Land and the North-western Territory (except such portions thereof as form the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta and the Yukon Territory) together with all British territories and possessions in North America and all islands adjacent thereto not included within any province, except the Dominion of Newfoundland and its dependencies. For administrative purposes the Territories were subdivided into the provisional districts of Mackenzie, Keewatin and Franklin. The Commissioner in Council has power to make ordinances for the Territories under instructions from the Governor-General in Council, or the Minister of the Interior, respecting direct taxation within the Territories in order to raise revenue, &c., establishment and tenure of territorial offices, and the appointment and payment of officers, maintenance of prisons, municipal institutions, licenses, solemnization of marriages, property and civil rights, administration of justice and generally all matters of a local nature.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Island of Newfoundland is situated between $46^{\circ} 37' - 51^{\circ} 37' N.$ latitude and $52^{\circ} 44' - 59^{\circ} 30' W.$ longitude, on the north-east side of the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and is separated from the North American Continent by the Straits of Belle Isle. The island is about 317 miles long and 316 miles broad, and is triangular in shape, with Cape Bauld (N.), Cape Race (S.E.), and Cape Ray (S.W.) at the angles. The coast is extremely rugged, and the coastal regions are mountainous, the north and east being cold during winter and early spring owing to the quantities of ice brought down from the Greenland seas. The interior is undulating and is covered with hills (round hills) interspersed with lakes, rivers, and swamps, but containing many fertile valleys, where the climate is favourable to agriculture, and a great wealth of forests, mainly of spruce, fir, pine, and birch. The climate is salubrious, and the people are a strong, brave, healthy, hardy, industrious race. The thermometer seldom falls below zero in winter, and ranges in the shade in summer from 70° to 80° .

GOVERNMENT.

Newfoundland, the oldest English colony, was discovered by John Cabot on June 24, 1497, the first land seen was hailed as Prima Vista—the present Cape Bonavista. The island was afterwards visited (1500) by the Portuguese navigator Gaspar de Cortreal, and soon became the centre of an extensive fishing industry; with settlements of Portuguese, Biscayan, and French. In August, 1583, the island was formally occupied by Sir Humphrey Gilbert, in the name of Queen Elizabeth, and by the Treaty of Utrecht (1713) the whole island was acknowledged to be British. A Governor was first appointed in 1728, and in 1855 "Responsible Government" was accorded to the island.

The executive is entrusted to a Governor, appointed by the Crown, aided by an Executive Council, with a Legislature of two houses.

The principal imports are flour, textiles, coal, hardware, and provisions; the principal exports are codfish, cod and seal oil, pulp and paper, herrings, seal-skins, tinned lobsters, iron pyrites, and other minerals. The total value of the fishery products in 1931-32 was upwards of $6,393,548.

PRODUCTION AND INDUSTRY.

The inhabitants are chiefly located on the coast-line of the shore and bays, nearly 10,000 being engaged in fishing—for cod in summer and seal fishing in winter and spring. Agriculture, mining, and lumbering are also engaging attention and affording means of employment, while large pulp and paper mills have been erected. The larger portion of the interior is practically in a state of nature, but the railways have opened up large tracts. A valuable discovery of copper has been made at Little Bay, about 200 miles from St. John's.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways.—There were 905 miles of railway open in 1926 and 47 miles of private line. The trans-insular line runs to Port-au-Basques, via Exploits River and Bay of Islands, with branch connections to Placentia, Bonavista, Bay de Verde, Hearts Content, Trepassay, the principal settlements in Conception Bay, and to Lewisporte (in Notre Dame Bay). Communication between various points on the coast and Sydney, C.B., is maintained by a fleet of 10 first-class steamers.

Posts and Telegraphs.—There were 621 post offices in 1932 (156 of which were also telegraph offices) and 74 telegraph offices additional, dealing with 8,700,000 letters and post-cards, 4,000,000 newspapers and books, and 500,000 parcels. 631 telephone stations are open, mostly in post offices. There are 4,443 miles of telegraph line and 1,200 miles of postal telephone wire. Postal revenue, $403,215; Customs duty collected, $113,182; telegraph revenue, $179,610.

Shipping.—On Dec. 31, 1930, the Mercantile Marine of Newfoundland consisted of 2,501 sailing vessels of 102,718 tons, and 255 steam and motor vessels of 41,670 tons. In 1929-30 the tonnage of vessels entered and cleared at Newfoundland ports was 3,375,499 tons, of which 1,820,223 tons were British.

TOWNS.

The CAPITAL, ST. JOHN'S (population 1933, 43,176; with suburbs, 59,420), contains two cathedrals, several banks, and numerous public buildings. Other towns are Harbours Grace (3,825), Bonavista (4,052), Carbonear (3,320), and Tullaghbeg (3,217).

HIGH COMMISSIONER.

High Commissioner in London, Hon. Sir Edgar Bowring. Office, 58, Victoria Street, S.W. 1.

LABRADOR.

Labrador, a dependency of Newfoundland, forms the most easterly part of the North American continent, and extends from Blanc Sablon, in the Straits of Belle Isle, on the south, to Cape Chidley, at the entrance to Hudson's Straits on the north. The boundary between Quebec and Labrador came up for settlement before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Oct., 1926. By the judgment given in March, 1927, the boundary was defined as a line drawn due N. from the eastern boundary of Blanc Sablon as far as 52° N. Lat. and from thence W. along that parallel to the Romaine River, and thence N. along the east bank of that river and its headwaters to their source, and thence due N. to the crest of the watershed or height of land there, and thence W. and N. along the crest of the watershed of the rivers flowing into the Atlantic Ocean until it reaches Cape Chidley. The territory thus confirmed as under the jurisdiction of Newfoundland has an area estimated at 120,000 square miles. Labrador possesses valuable cod, herring, trout, and salmon fisheries. One of the grandest spectacles in the world is provided by the Grand Falls on the Hamilton River. The inhabitants are mainly Eskimos, engaged in fishing and hunting. There are no towns; the Moravian Mission stations at Malakovik, Hopedale, Nain, Okak, Hebron, and Killinek have been purchased by Hudson's Bay Company.

Australia was separated from the other great land surfaces at a remote period, and exhibits therefore some very archaic types of fauna and flora. It may be regarded as the largest island or the smallest continent, being surrounded by the following waters:—North, the Timor and Arafura Seas and Torres Strait; East, Pacific Ocean; South, Bass Strait (which separates Tasmania from the Continent) and Southern Ocean; and West, Indian Ocean. The total area of the Continent is 2,948,366 English square miles, the island of Tasmania having an area of 26,215 square miles, and making a total area for the States and Territories of 2,974,581 square miles. The coast-line of Australia is approximately 12,270 miles, and the geographical position of the Continent is between $10^{\circ} 41' - 39^{\circ} 8'$ South latitude and $113^{\circ} 9' - 153^{\circ} 39'$ East longitude; the greatest length East to West is 2,400 miles, and from North to South 1,971 miles. Its nearest distance to England is about 11,000 miles.

From a physical standpoint the continent of Australia is divisible into an eastern and a western area, the former containing a regular coast-line with a good harbourage, roadsteads, rivers, and inland waterways, and a greater development of fauna and flora; the latter a broken coast-line with estuaries rather than rivers, and but little inland water communication. The whole continent is, roughly speaking, a vast, irregular, and undulating plateau, part of which is below the level of the sea, surrounded by a mountainous coast-line, with frequent intervals of low and sandy shore on the north, west and south. The Great Barrier Reef extends parallel with the East coast of Queensland for 1,200 miles, at a distance of about 60 miles from the mainland. A large part of the interior, particularly in the west, consists of sandy and stony desert, covered with spinifex, and containing numerous salt-marshes, though reaches of grass-land occur here and there. The geological formation of Australia is remarkable for its simplicity and regularity; the strike of the rocks is, with a single exception, coincident with the direction of the mountain-chains, from N. to S.; and the tertiary formation to be found in the N., S., and W. develops in the S.E. into a gigantic tertiary plain, watered by the Darling and the Murray Rivers. Nearly all round the coast, however, and in eastern and south-eastern Australia, stretching far inland from the coastal range, is a fertile area devoted partly to agriculture, partly to dairying, while the inland districts particularly are admirably adapted to the rearing of sheep. The most extensive mountain system takes its rise near the S.E. point, and includes a number of ranges known by different names in different places, none of them being of any great height. The highest peak, Mount Kosciusko, in New South Wales, reaches an elevation of 7,328 feet. The principal rivers are the Murray, which debouches on the south coast, after receiving the waters of its tributaries the Murrumbidgee, Lachlan, and Darling, in the S.E. part of the island; on the east coast, the Hawkesbury, Hunter, Clarence, Richmond, Brisbane, Mary, Burnett, Fitzroy, and Burdekin; on the west, the Swan, Murchison, Gascoyne, Ashburton, Fortescue, De Grey, and Fitzroy; on the north, the Drysdale, Ord, Victoria, and Daly; and the Roper, the Flinders, and Mitchell, which debouch into the Gulf of Carpentaria. Lakes are numerous, but nearly all are salt; the scarcity of the natural water supply has been, however, mitigated by successful borings and by the construction of large dams. The work of conserving the vast quantities of water which run to waste in the wet season is being vigorously prosecuted by a system of locks and weirs on some of the rivers. Minerals comprise gold, silver, copper, zinc, iron, and coal in large quantities, antimony, tin, gypsum, magnesite, osmiridium, opal, sapphires, &c., and there are abundant supplies of building stones, clays, &c. The potentialities of the country in regard to its supplies of metals and minerals have not yet been fully tested.

Climate.—The seasons commence about March 21 (Autumn), June 21 (Winter), Sept. 22 (Spring), and Dec. 22 (Summer). The climate is extremely dry, but, except in the tropical coast-land of the north, the continent is everywhere highly beneficial to Europeans, the range of temperature being smaller than that of other countries similarly situated.

GOVERNMENT.

The Government is that of a Federal Commonwealth within the British Empire, the executive power being vested in the Sovereign (through the Governor-General), assisted by a Federal Ministry of ten Ministers of State and such honorary Ministers who may be appointed thereto. The Commonwealth was constituted by an Act of the Imperial Parliament dated July 9, 1900, and was inaugurated Jan. 1, 1901. Under the Constitution the Federal Government has acquired and may acquire certain defined powers as surrendered by the States, residuary legislative power remaining with the States. Trade and customs passed under Federal control immediately on the establishment of the Commonwealth; posts, telegraphs and telephones, naval and military defence, lighthouses and quarantine on proclaimed dates. The Commonwealth also now controls such matters as old age pensions, patents and copyrights, naturalization, navigation, &c. The right of a State to legislate is not abrogated except in connexion with matters exclusively under Commonwealth control, but where a State law is inconsistent with a law of the Commonwealth the latter prevails to the extent of the inconsistency.

THE LEGISLATURE.

The Federal Parliament consists of a Senate and a House of Representatives. The Senate contains 36 members, six from each of the Original States, elected for six years by universal suffrage. The House of Representatives, similarly elected for a maximum of three years, contains members proportionate to the population, with a minimum of 5 Representatives for each State. The House of Representatives, 1932, is made up of 28 for New South Wales, 20 for Victoria, 10 from Queensland, 7 from South Australia, 5 each from Tasmania and Western Australia, and 1 (entitled to debate but not to vote) from the Northern Territory. Members of the Upper and Lower Houses receive £750 per annum, with free railway passes.

President of the Senate, Hon. Sir Walter Kingsmill.
Speaker, House of Representatives, Hon. George Hugh Mackay.

THE JUDICATURE.

There is a Federal High Court with a Chief Justice and 5 Judges, having original and appellate jurisdiction, subordinate to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

DEFENCE.

Navy.

The Australian fleet consists of the Cruisers Australia, Canberra, Brisbane, Adelaide, 1 sloop, 5 destroyers, seaplane carrier, and several auxiliaries. The personnel of the fleet is mainly Australian in character, although still supplemented to some extent by Imperial officers and men. The sea-going forces of the Royal Australian Navy on February 15, 1933, consisted of 339 officers and 2,783 men. There is also a R.A.N. Brigade composed of members of the Citizen Naval forces.

Army.

From 1911 to 1929 the defence policy was based on the universal compulsory training of a Citizen Army, but from November 1st, 1929, the constitution of the forces on a voluntary basis was adopted. Under this system men from 18 to 40 years of age may be enlisted in the Militia Force, and youths from 14 to 17 years in the Senior Cadet Corps. On March 31st, 1933, 27,963 were undergoing training.

Air.

The permanent strength of the Australian Air Force in April, 1932, was 102 officers and 788 airmen; and of the Citizen Air Force, 48 officers and 261 airmen. The Air Force and the Civil Aviation expenditure (excluding war services) for the year 1931-32 was £489,230.

FEDERAL FINANCE.

The Premiers' Plan.

The Governments of Australia met in Conference (May-June and August-Sept., 1931) to consider what measures were possible to restore solvency and to avoid default. The National Income of Australia was £550,000,000 in 1927-28, falling to £554,000,000 in 1929-30, and a further fall to £450,000,000 was estimated for 1931-32.

The Premiers' Conference adopted a plan which combined all possible remedies in such a way that the burden fell as equally as possible on every one, and no considerable section of the people was left in a privileged position. This sharing of the burden was necessary to make the load more tolerable, and because only on this condition was it possible to get the combined effort required.

The plan was adopted by the Conference as a whole, each part being accepted on the understanding that all the other parts were equally and simultaneously put into operation. It embraced the following measures:—

- (a) A reduction of 20 per cent. in all adjustable Government expenditure, as compared with the year ending 30th June, 1930, including all emoluments, wages, salaries, and pensions paid by the Governments, whether fixed by statute or otherwise, such reduction to be equitably effected;
- (b) Conversion of the internal debts of the Governments on the basis of a 2½ per cent. reduction of interest;
- (c) The securing of additional revenue by taxation, both Commonwealth and State;
- (d) A reduction of bank and Savings Bank rates of interest on deposits and advances;
- (e) Relief in respect of private mortgages.

These proposals required the greatest effort in economy and taxation which the Conference considered it safe to attempt.

REDUCTION OF EXPENDITURE.

The plan provides for Government economy on the basis of an immediate cut, averaging 20 per cent., for all Government wages and salaries below the level of 1929-30. To this will be added all saving that can be made from a strict scrutiny into the necessity of every item of Government expenditure.

* In addition, the following amounts were spent from loans for War Purposes and for Works—1925-26, £2,723,598; 1926-27, £2,448,590; 1927-28, £2,638,948; 1928-29, £2,211,147; 1929-30, £2,211,537; and 1930-31, £1,988,800. There was no loan expenditure on Works, in 1931-32 and 1932-33, all such expenditure being made from revenue.

‡ Excludes grants for relief to primary producers, £2,249,622.

DEBT.

The total of the Public Debt for Commonwealth Purposes on June 30, 1932, was £296,806,503, including a War Loan from the British Government of £79,724,220, which is subject to a funding arrangement whereby the debt is to be extinguished about 1956 by annual repayments of 6%, of which £1 1s. 8d. per cent. is for reduction of principal. The British Government agreed to the suspension for the years 1931-32 and 1932-33 of the repayment of principal moneys due under this arrangement, and of the interest moneys for 1931-32. The interest payments suspended are to be liquidated by 10 equal annuities from July 1, 1933, with interest at a rate to be determined. Adding the indebtedness of the States, viz., £897,851,620, the "face" or "book" value of the public debts of Australia amounted (June 30, 1932) to £1,204,658,123 (£182 per head of population), of which £1 Aust. £67,388,238 was redeemable in Australia, £812,550,799.115 in London, and £Gold 46,470,770 in New York.

In July and August, 1932, the internal debt of £558,000,000 was the subject of a voluntary conversion plan in connection with the "Premiers' Plan" for financial rehabilitation. Of the total internal bondholders, conversion applications totalled £510,000,000, while in the absence of notification of dissent, £31,000,000 was automatically converted. Dissents amounted to only £16,000,000, or less than 3 per cent. The conversion plan involved an interest reduction of 2½ per cent.

Conversion operations in London in 1932 have resulted in an annual saving to the States of £835,000 in interest and £210,000 on Exchange.

Banking.—For the quarter ended June 30, 1933, the Australian liabilities of the Banks of Issue throughout the Commonwealth amounted to £348,793,399, and the Australian assets to £423,659,995. On June 30, 1933, the amount of deposits in the Savings Banks totalled £201,722,000, approximately £30 10s. per head of population. The Trading and Savings Banks have reduced their interest rates for deposits and advances in accordance with the "Premiers' Plan."

In 1931-32 Australia produced 1,006,620,847 lb. of wool (as in the grease), against 912,125,253 lb in 1930-31; 390,654,070 lb. of butter; 31,422,975 lb. of cheese; and 71,121,740 lb. of bacon and hams.

Mineral and Minerals.—In 1931 the value of gold produced was £93,563,519; silver and lead, £1,443,897; copper, £2,567,558; tin, £216,205; coal, £6,103,735; value of all minerals produced in 1931, £13,352,316. The production of gold in 1932 was valued at £5,211,802 (Australian currency).

Manufactures.—In 1931-32 there were in Australia 21,657 industrial establishments, employing 336,628 hands; wages paid amounted to £55,931,818; value of plant and machinery, £121,529,377; of lands and buildings, £106,590,324; of materials used, £161,199,245; value added by manufacture, £110,981,830; and total value of final output, £281,645,785.

Labor Statistics.—In 1932 there were 361 Trade Unions, with 740,443 members, of whom 110,143 were women. The estimated total number of employed persons 20 years of age and over in 1932 was 1,330,000 males and 317,250 females. The number of unemployed members of trade unions averaged 20 per cent. Employers' Associations (1931) number 247, with membership of 122,428. Retail Price Index No for food, groceries and rent (4 and 5 rooms) (6 Capital Cities) 1932 (base 1923-1927=1,000) 802; including food, groceries and rent (4 and 5 rooms), clothing, fuel, light and other miscellaneous household expenditure (base 1923-1927=1,000) 830. Melbourne Wholesale Price Index 1932 (base 1911=1,000) 1,411. Nominal Weekly Wage Index No., Australia, 1932 (base 1911=1,000=51s. 3d.) 1,639=84s. Number of industrial disputes in 1932 was 127 involving 22,017 persons in a loss of 212,318 working days and £165,582 in wages.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Railways.—Total length of Government (and private) railways open for general traffic at June 30, 1932, private lines being included in the totals and shown in parentheses:—

State	Miles open.
New South Wales	6,209	(83)
Victoria	4,746	(25)
Queensland	6,822	(263)
South Australia	3,549	(51)
Western Australia	4,966	(277)
Tasmania	786	(121)
Federal Capital Territory	5	—
Northern Territory	317	—

Total..... 27,799 (840)

The gross earnings of all Government lines in 1931-32 were £37,579,965, working expenses £28,121,984, and net earnings £9,437,981, being at the rate of 2s. 11d. per train mile, and representing a return on the total cost (£32,365,450) of 29s per cent., as against 27s per cent. in 1930-31. In 1931-32 passenger journeys numbered 302,713,771 and 26,071,472 tons of goods and live stock were carried, the train miles run being 63,311,701. The electrification of the Sydney suburban system is almost completed.

Tramways.—There are 602 miles of tramways in Australia, 554 miles of which are of electric, 22 of steam, 24 of cable, and 2 of horse traction. Extensive conversions to electrical traction have been made and more are in progress. The several Governments control 380 miles; municipal authorities, 186 miles; and the remaining 36 miles are operated by private companies and individuals. The total capital cost of tramways at June 30, 1932, was £25,485,180. The revenue of electric tramways for the year 1931-32 was £6,775,678, working expenses £5,254,588, and net revenue £1,521,090, or 49s per car mile. 74,039,682 car miles were run and 588,633,938 passenger journeys recorded.

Shipping.—The entrances and clearances of vessels engaged in overseas trade at the various Australian ports in 1931-32 were: entered, 1,519 (5,686,898 tons); cleared, 1,538 (5,708,886 tons). Of the vessels entered, 974 of 3,731,891 tons were under the British flag and 545 of 1,955,007 tons under foreign flags.

The total including local shipping entering the ports of the capital cities during 1931-32 was: Sydney 5,840 vessels of 8,327,956 tons, Melbourne 2,817 (6,083,072), Brisbane 1,122 (3,453,826), Adelaide 2,859 (3,937,915), Fremantle 569 (3,310,750), and Hobart 549 (817,171). At December 31, 1932, there were 2,243 vessels of a total net tonnage of 3,218,828 on the shipping registers of the several States.

Posts and Telegraphs.—In year ended June 30, 1932, there were 8,001 post offices; there were 9,225 telegraph stations, with 157,210 miles of wire, transmitting 12,679,951 telegrams, receiving 564,205 and dispatching 610,763 cablegrams. A Beam wireless station, giving a service to and from Great Britain, was opened for traffic in April, 1927. At the end of year 1931-32, 484,626 telephones were connected with 6,069 telephone exchanges; approximately 368,582,696 "local" and 28,908,085 "trunk line" calls were recorded for the year. 369,072 wireless broadcasting listeners' licences were issued in 1931-32.

Motor Vehicles.—At June 30, 1932, there were 587,020 motor vehicles registered in the several States. These comprised 410,970 cars, 71,666 motor cycles, and 96,254 commercial vehicles: revenue derived from motor registration fees and motor tax, &c., in 1931-32 was £4,022,882. Motor omnibus services are extensively operating in urban areas.

Civil Aviation.—189 aeroplanes of various types were registered with the Department of Civil Aviation at June 30, 1932. During the year 66,122 flights of a total duration of 21,959 hours were effected: 2,527,700 miles were flown, and 70,654 passengers carried. 29,494 lbs. of mail were carried by aerial mail contractors. Three subsidized companies are now operating machines over approved routes (5,314 air miles), while several unaided companies also are operating commercial services over additional routes.

CAPITAL.—CANBERRA, in the Federal Capital Territory, transferred to the Commonwealth by N.S.W. on Jan. 1, 1911, has been laid out as the capital of the Commonwealth. At June 30, 1932, the population of the Federal Capital Territory amounted to 8,946, of which 7,325 were living in Canberra.

THE NORTHERN TERRITORY.

The Northern Territory has a total area of 523,620 square miles, and lies between 129°-138° East longitude as far as 26° South latitude. The administration was taken over by the Commonwealth on January 1, 1911, from the government of the State of South Australia, and the divisions into territories, known respectively as North Australia and Central Australia, were abolished in 1931—a reversion to the position as it existed prior to such divisions on February 1, 1907. The headquarters of the Administrator are at Darwin in the far north, a Deputy Administrator being stationed at Alice Springs in the south, to exercise all the powers and functions of the Administrator in that portion of the Territory situated south of 26° S. lat., except the power to fix the commencement of Ordinances, and to make regulations under Ordinances in force in the Northern Territory. As the administrative system obtaining from February 1, 1907, to June 12, 1931, has thus been continued, the residents of that part of the Territory south of 26° S. lat. are no less favourably placed than hitherto. The population of the Northern Territory as at June 30, 1931, was 4,193 (exclusive of full-blooded aboriginals).

Agricultural development is increasing both in the number of individual landholders and the acreage under crop. The success of peanut growing during the last two years is mainly responsible for the improvement, and it is believed to presage a definite era of agricultural progress in the Territory. This applies to the land situated north of 20° S. lat. Agriculture is practically negligible in that part south of 20° S. lat. Agricultural leases are granted in perpetuity at nominal rentals, which are subject to re-appraisal every 21 years. They may be converted to freehold at any time after commencement of lease, subject to easy and liberal conditions. Most tropical products can be grown, and the potentialities for pig raising and bacon curing are excellent. The staple industry is pastoral: cattle raising north of 20° S. lat. and cattle, horse, and sheep raising south of 20° S. lat. Until railways are constructed, however, little, if any, improvement is expected in the pastoral industry in that part north of 20° S. lat. owing to the distance between the eastern and southern Australian markets. The position south of 20° S. lat. is no more hopeful, as a result of the extension of the railway from the Adelaide (South Australia) market to Alice Springs. The whole of the Territory is capable, under proper conditions, of carrying successfully and profitably a great expansion of the beef cattle industry. There are vast areas of magnificent country which could be so utilised. From the Queensland border to the Western Australian border, a distance of over 600 miles, there are many thousands of square miles of country splendidly grassed and growing edible shrubs. The chief rivers are Victoria, Adelaide, Daly, Roper, Liverpool, Goyder, McArthur, and the Robinson. The first five are navigable, from 40 to 100 miles from their entrance, for boats drawing 4 feet. Pearl fishing is carried on round the coast, the shell being of good quality. There are considerable mineral resources, gold, silver, lead, tin and mica being indicated, and when communications are opened up the industry will become important. The railway extends from Darwin to Burdum in the N. (215 miles), and Alice Springs is now connected by rail with Adelaide.

Darwin occupies an elevated site 80 feet above high-water mark, overlooking Port Darwin. Alice Springs is situated in the MacDonnell Ranges, and boasts a splendid climate.

PAPUA.

The Territory of Papua, which was placed under the authority of the Commonwealth of Australia in 1906, comprises a part of the New Guinea mainland situated between the meridians of 141° 0' and 150° 50' E. longitude, and between the 5th and 12th parallels of South latitude, also the Trobriand Group of islands, Woodlark, the D'Entrecasteaux Group, the Louisiades, the Conflict Group and the Langhlan Group. The total area of Papua is 90,540 sq. miles, of which 87,786 are on the mainland. There is an Executive Council of nine members who, with five non-official members, form the Legislative Council. The white population in 1931 was 1,128. The official estimate of the native population is 275,000. On Dec. 31, 1932, 59,751 acres were under crops (49,305 coco-nuts, 8,796 rubber, 150 sisal hemp and 375 coffee). Owing to heavy rainfall Papua is well watered in most parts and possesses a large number of streams. The best known rivers are the Fly (650 miles long and navigable by steam launch for 500 miles) and the Purari. The climate is favourable to the cultivation of tropical products.

Port Moresby is distant from Sydney, N.S.W., 1,800 miles; transit from Sydney 5 to 6 days.

TERRITORY OF NEW GUINEA.

The part of "German New Guinea" over which Australia was given a mandate is situated in latitude between the Equator and 8° S., and in longitude between 142° E. and 156° E. It consists of the N.E. portion of New Guinea to 142° E. (70,000 sq. miles), Bismarck Archipelago including New Britain, New Ireland, and islands adjacent to both (19,200 sq. miles), and the two northernmost Solomon Islands (4,100 sq. miles) (Bougainville and Buka). The principal river in N.E. New Guinea is the Sepik, which is navigable for 250 miles.

The climate is hot and moist along the coast, with a steady drop as the higher altitudes are reached. It is suitable to the growth of all tropical products. In 1931 there were 222,500 acres under crops (300,000 nuts, 204,100). The white population in 1932 was 2,005, and the Asiatic population 1,457 (estimated); the native population in 1932 was 390,000 (enumerated), including 26,000 working under indentures. (Natives living in areas not under complete Government influence are not included in the above total, as no reliable estimate can be made.)

NORFOLK ISLAND.

This island is about 930 miles from Sydney and 400 miles from New Zealand. It is about five miles in length by three in breadth, and was discovered by Capt. Cook in 1774. Its area is 8,528 acres and circumference 20 miles. The climate is mild, with a mean temperature of 68° and an annual rainfall of 55 inches. The descendants of the mutineers of the Bounty were brought here from Pitcairn Island in 1856. The population in July, 1933, was 1,231.

ANTARCTICA.

An Order in Council dated February 7, 1933, assigns certain territories in the Antarctic to the Commonwealth of Australia.

The order begins by stating that "that part of the territory in the Antarctic Seas which comprises all the islands and territories other than Adélie Land, situated south of the 60th degree of South Latitude and lying between the 160th degree of East Longitude and the 45th degree of East Longitude is territory over which His Majesty has some claim rights."

"It is expedient," it is added, "that the said territory should be placed under the authority of the Commonwealth of Australia," and it is ordered accordingly. The Order came into force by the passing of Act No. 8 of 1933 (Commonwealth of Australia) the Territory being accepted by the name of the Australian Antarctic Territory.

The exception of Adélie Land from the Order in Council is due to French claims based on rights of discovery.

Other parts of Antarctica are also British. One area is administered by the Falkland Islands and another by New Zealand. The territory administered by Australia adjoins that belonging to New Zealand.

States of the Commonwealth.

I. - NEW SOUTH WALES.

The State of New South Wales is situated almost entirely between the 29th and 37th parallels of S lat and 141st and 154th meridians of E. long., and comprises an area of 320,372 square miles (inclusive of 940 square miles of Federal Territory)—i.e., more than five times that of England and Wales, and over three times the size of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

POPULATION.—The population, according to the preliminary count of the census taken June 30, 1933, was: Males, 1,318,678. Females 1,261,750. Total, 2,580,428.

Births, Deaths, and Marriages.

Year	Births	Deaths	Marriages
1926	53,126	22,188	19,219
1927	53,853	22,770	20,052

1931	47,724	21,234	15,377
1932	44,905	21,357	17,362

Vital Statistics. Annual rate per 1,000 of population in 1932.—Births, 17.74; Deaths, 8.44; Marriages 6.86. Deaths under 1 year per 1,000 births, 41.1.

Religions.

All religions are free. There is no State Church. About three-fourths of the people are Protestants, the members of the Church of England in New South Wales, according to the Census of 1921, number 1,027,470; Roman Catholic 502,825; Presbyterian 219,932; Methodist 181,977; Congregational (Independent) 22,235; Baptist 24,722; Salvation Army 9,490; and Hebrew 10,150.

PHYSIOGRAPHY.

The Eastern or coastal district is traversed by the Great Dividing Range, the various portions of the Range in N.S.W. being (from N. to S.) Macpherson, New England, Liverpool, Main or Blue Mountain, Cullarin, Goulcock, Monaro and Murrumbidgee Ranges—the highest points being Mount Kosciuszko, 7,328 feet, and Townsend, 7,266 feet. The eastern or coastal district is watered by the Tweed, Richmond, Clarence, Bellinger, Nambucca, Macleay, Hastings, Camden Haven, Manning, Wollombi, Hunter, Hawkesbury, George, Shoalhaven, Clyde, Murrumbidgee, Bega, Towamba, and Snowy Rivers. The western portion of the country is not so well watered, but immense reservoirs have been constructed for irrigation purposes, and there are many artesian bores. The Darling, 1,609 miles, and the Murrumbidgee, 981 miles, are both tributaries of the Murray, which has a total length of 1,609 miles, 1,203 miles forming part of the boundary between the States of New South Wales and Victoria. Other inland rivers are Lachlan, Bogan, Macquarie, Castlereagh, Namoi and Gwydn.

Climate.—New South Wales is situated entirely in the Temperate Zone. The climate is equable and very healthy. At the capital (Sydney) the average mean shade temperature is 63° F. The mean temperature in the shade for the north coast is 66° to 69°, south coast 60° to 63°, northern tableland 56° to 60°, southern tableland 44° to 57°, north-western slopes, the mean annual temperature ranges from 62° to 68°; in the Central-western slopes 58° to 64°, south-western slopes 59° to 63°, and in the Western Plains and Riverina Division from 62° to 69°. The Seasons are as follows: Spring during September, October and November; Summer during December, January, and February; Autumn during March, April, and May; Winter during June, July, and August.

GOVERNMENT.

New South Wales was first colonised as a British possession in 1788, and after progressive settlement a partly elective legislature was established in 1843. In 1855 "Responsible Government" was granted, the present Constitution being founded on the Consolidating Act of 1902. New South Wales federated with the other States of Australia in 1901. The executive authority of the State is vested in a Governor (appointed by the King), assisted by a Council of Ministers.

GOVERNOR.

Governor of New South Wales. His Excellency Air Vice-Marshal Sir Philip Woolcott Game, G.B.E., K.C.B., D.S.O., born 1876 (1930) £5,000

Official Secretary, H. S. C. Budge, C.M.G.

Private Secretary, Brig.-Genl. A. T. Anderson, C.M.G.

Lieutenant-Governor, His Excellency the Hon. Sir Philip Whistler Street, K.C.M.G., born 1863.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.

H.E. the Governor presides:

The Ministry.

On May 13, 1932, the Commission of the Premier and Colonial Treasurer, the Hon. J. T. Lang, was withdrawn by the Governor, and the Hon. B. S. Stevens was commissioned to form a Ministry. The Legislative Assembly was dissolved on May 18. A general election was held on June 11, 1932, and a Cabinet was formed on June 18, 1932. The Cabinet in office in September, 1933 was:—

Premier and Colonial Treasurer, B. S. B. Stevens, M.L.A.

Deputy Premier and Minister for Transport, Col. M. F. Bruener, D.S.O., M.L.A.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Parliament consists of two Houses, the Legislative Council and the Legislative Assembly. Members of the Legislative Council (118 in September, 1933) were appointed by the Crown for life. As a result of a referendum carried in May, 1933, the Legislative Council is to be re-constituted. The new House will consist of 60 members, elected jointly by both houses of Parliament. Membership will be for 12 years, 15 members retiring in rotation triennially. The initial Council will comprise four groups of 15 members elected for three, six, nine and twelve years respectively. Members are not entitled to remuneration, but travel free on the State railways and tramways. The Legislative Assembly consists of 90 members. Each member of the Legislative Assembly receives £670 per annum, and members travel free over the Government railways and tramways in the State, and are provided with official stamped envelopes for the free transmission of correspondence through the post. The Women's Legal Status Act, 1918, removed disqualification regarding the election of women to be members of the Legislative Assembly. Natural-born or naturalised persons 21 years of age, who have resided 6 months in the Commonwealth, 3 months in the State and one month in the electoral district, are entitled to the franchise. At the State General Elections in June, 1932, there were 739,009 male and 725,959 female electors, making a total of 1,465,008 enrolled and qualified to vote; of these 1,367,087, or 93.39 per cent. of electors in contested districts, voted.
